Oilers Claim All Of Oklahoma Now

BY BILL VAN FLEET.
Star-Telegram Sports Editor.

When the Tulsa Oilers appear at La Grave Field Friday night they will wear a map of Oklahoma on their caps.

GRAYLE HOWLETT.

This, Owner Grayle Howlett explains, is a rightful privilege. The Oilers this season will be the only Oklahoma team participating in organized baseball.

The Oklahoma City franchise has been moved to Corpus Christi and the Sooner State League has folded after operating last season.

Just eight years ago there were 15 Oklahoma teams playing in four different eight-team circuits, and their aggregate draw was a little more than 1,000,000 for 1950.

Boom Among Schoolboys.

All eight teams of the Sooner State were within the bounds of Soonerland. Additionally, Tulsa and Oklahoma City were in the Texas, and there were representatives in the KOM (the league in which Mickey Mantle started) and the Western Association.

"We are the only Oklahomans left," Howlett said here Thursday as he awaited the Texas League opener. "For that reason, we are claiming the territory as our own.

"Tulsa has called itself the 'Oil Capitol of the World' for a long time, so this spring we added a big sign on the front of our park saying 'Tulsa, The Baseball Capitol of Oklahoma.' With it is a map of the state."

Howlett reports that there is a great amount of interest in high school and amateur baseball in the state, a fact that cheers him as he prepares for another season.

Johnson Slated to Oppose Camp; Game Starts at 7:45

BY BILL VAN FLEET.
Star-Telegram Sports Editor.

The weatherman willing, the Cats and the Tulsa Oilers will open a new Texas League season Friday night at La Grave Field.

The first pitch will come at 7:45 p. m. Brief opening night ceremonies are scheduled 15 minutes earlier.

After that two of the league favorites will go after each other, sparked by a determination to get off fast in the new league race.

Veteran righthanders will pitch for both sides, Ben Johnson having been named for the Cats and Norman Camp for the Oilers.

New Center Fielders.

Johnson, who compiled an 11-5 record at Atlanta in the Southern Association last season, also has a Texas League background. He won 14 against 13 defeats for the sixth-place Austin club in 1956.

Camp won nine, lost eight for the Oilers last year.

Two of the most highly rated center fielders in the league will be making their first Texas League appearances. Chick King, the Cats' 190-pound swiftie, had a good year with Memphis in 1958.

Mickey Harrington, 6-4 and 205, is regarded as a "find" by Tulsa Manager Al Widmar. The former Mississippi Southern athlete signed with the Phillies toward the end of last season and drove in 42 runs in the final 39 games at Brunswick, Ga., while batting .348.

He has continued the fast pace in spring games winding up with a .390 mark in 58 times at bat.

Bellino at Shortstop.

Both teams are loaded with righthand batsmen, each having seven in the starting lineups.

Manager Lou Klein of the Cats named Ray Bellino to start at shortstop and Bob Picciano to open at third base, positions at which there has been hot competition. The nominations left Chris Kitsos and Joe Macko,

65 by Weaver Ties Collins

LOUISVILLE, Ky., April 17 (AP). Sparkling 65's by Bert Weaver and Bill Collins set the pace Thursday as par took a plastering in the first round of the Kentucky Derby Open golf tournament.

Seneca Golf Course's 6,526 yards of tree-lined hills—usually considered a rugged test—didn't worry 33 pros who toured the first 18 holes with scores under par of 35-37—72.

The course record was equalled by the efforts of Weaver, a former Louisiana State University star from Beaumont, and Collins, a Baltimore native playing out of Grossinger, N. Y.

Even so, they had a scant stroke lead over Chick Harbert of Northville, Mich., who put together a string of birdies on the

TULSA CINCHES PENNANT IN WESTERN

By Associated Press.

TULSA, Okla., Sept. 18.—Nosing out St. Joseph yesterday, the Tulsa Oilers cinched their hold on the Western League pennant. Should Tulsa lose all remaining games while St. Joseph, nearest opponent, wins all, the result could not be changed, according to local baseball experts.

This is the second pennant won by Tulsa in four years membership in the Western League. This year's team is being managed by Jack Lelivelt, former major league player.

In defeating St. Joseph yesterday George Beehler, Tulsa pitcher, won his thirty-seventh victory of the season.

Following is the official standing of the Western League, including games of Sept. 17, as announced today by I. M. Howe, league statistician.

Here to the left is the Mobile club taken before the Panthers climbed their frames in the Dixie Series opening game. Next is Jake Atz either telling Umpire Bill Brennan a funny story or saying he's not sore at anybody—and no wonder. The Cats had a six-run lead when Staff Photographer Frank G. 5 Veterans Form Southwestern Team Nucleus

Special to The Star-Telegram.

GEORGETOWN, Sept. 18.—More than 20 bronzed warriors have been working for the past week under Big Chief Gardner in training for the Southwestern University football team. Although but a remnant of the team of last Fall, more than 20 high school stars bring their best to use in the building of the eleven.

W. J. Gardner of Carlisle, all-American fame, spent the Summer at the University of Illinois school for coaches and picked up many valuable points from Zuppke, the famous coach.

Led by Buddie Foster, of China Springs, the eleven promises to be the scrappiest in years. Foster is an end who received an all-State berth from many sport writers last season. Fast, hard-hitting and crafty, he is sure to fill one of the wing positions again.

Other letter men who have returned to don the Pirate uniform are Lamar Camp, guard, of Houston; Richard Hawkins, tackle, of Granger; Monroe Vivion, guard, of Bay City. All three of these men return for their second year of football. They are big, heavy linemen. Harold Crump of Rockwall, spectacular half and brainy quarter of last year, will report Sept. 20. J. W. Reynolds of Houston, also letter man of last year, is expected soon. With five old heads in the line Gardner should be able to build a powerful team.

In Lyons, Bowen, Sells, Watteron and Perrin Gardner has the cream of the strong Georgetown high team. Other men reporting for practice are:

Backfield, Skipworth, Kidd, Aiken, Hardin, Lyons, Ellis, Lee, Irwin, Durrett, Leslie.

Line, Whitehurst, Weinert, Horger, Barcus, Harper, Bowen, Perrin, O'Dell, Wray, Norman, Sells, McDaniel, Gregory, Richardson, Burgin.

The season opens Oct. 7, when the Pirates play San Marcos Normal here. It includes games with all the strong colleges of Texas, playing both Texas and Texas A. & M. It will probably close Dec. 9 in San Antonio against the famous Haskell Indians. The complete schedule follows:

Oct. 7—Southwest Texas Normal at Georgetown.
Oct. 14—Texas A. & M. at College Station.
Oct. 20—Howard Payne at Georgetown.
Oct. 28—Rice Institute at Houston.
Nov. 4—Southern Methodist University at Dallas.
Nov. 11—University of Texas at Austin.
Nov. 17—Austin College at Sherman.
Nov. 23—Daniel Baker at Georgetown.
Dec. 9—Haskell Indians at San Antonio (tentative).

37 "Buffaloes" in Training.

CANYON, Sept. 18.—Thirty-seven men reported for practice on the opening day of the football training camp, which started at the West Texas State Normal College, Sept. 15, and prospects are bright for a winning season for the Buffaloes. Ten letter men reported and another is expected.

Coach Burton is well pleased with his 1922 material, among whom are a number of youngsters who were with some of the fastest high school elevens. These men will probably make a strong bid for regular berths on the squad.

Seven men reported for the quarter job the first day and two more are expected in a few days. The coach says he will have little trouble in solving the quarterback problem.

The first few days are being spent in kicking, passing and learning the fundamentals of football, but some scrimmage has been held. The suad started Monday working out both in the mornings and afternoons. The coach expects to put his men through some strenuous practice at the training camp, because the Buffaloes clash with the Wayland Jackrabbits Sept. 30 and this is expected to be a hard tilt as the Wayland lads have been in training since Sept. 1.

Austin-Durant Game Off.

SHERMAN, Sept. 18.—The Austin College football team will begin practice Friday. The first game of the season will be played at Austin, Sept. 28, the game with the Durant Normal team having been called off on account of the short term for practice before the game.

Meridian After Junior Title.

MERIDIAN, Sept. 18.—Football practice at Meridian College, which has been under way for the past 10 days under the direction of Tom Dennis, ex-Longhorn tackle, has settled down to strenuous training. With only four letter men on his suad, Dennis is working hard to fill the vacancies, and has uncovered some promising material that makes Meridian College a strong contender for the junior college championship title this year.

Among the men who are displaying real football caliber are Stanford, all-State high school halfback of Austin High School; Hinton and Carter, star ends of the Cleburne 1920 State champion high school eleven; Major, tackle at Grubbs Vocational College last Fall; Chapman, Humble High School star, and Beathea, quarterback from Rockdale Hi.

The Meridian schedule is as follows:

Sept. 28—Grubbs Vocational College at Arlington.
Oct. 7—Cisco College at Meridian.
Oct. 14—Weatherford College at Meridian.
Oct. 20—Decatur College at Meridian.
Oct. 27—Clifton College at Meridian.
Nov. 3—John Tarlton at Stephenville.
Nov. 11—Burleson College at Meridian.
Thanksgiving—Open.

CHICAGO TRACK PREPARING FOR OPENING SEPT. 30

(By New York Times-Chicago Tribune Special Leased Wire. Copyrighted.)

CHICAGO, Sept. 18.—Hawthorne race track is fast taking on a gala complexion. The historic oval is about ready to do its part in Chicago's racing revival, scheduled to start Sept. 30. Morning workouts already have been held and by midweek the clockers can work with some degree of certainty.

All this indicates that the new Illinois Jockey Club is quite in earnest about bringing back the running race game to Chicago and Illinois. Horses have been arriving daily for more than a week, and 200 laborers are rushing the racing plant repair work.

Judge Joseph A. Murphy, who is to be general manager of the Hawthorne meeting, is to arrive Monday morning, and will take complete charge of all advance arrangements.

"SANDSTORM" TO OPEN TUESDAY WITH "BULLDOGS"

Special to The Star-Telegram.

AMARILLO, Sept. 18.—The Golden Sandstorm, Amarillo High School's football team, gives every promise of making a creditable showing against Clarendon College Bulldogs in the opening game of the season here Tuesday, Sept. 19, the first day of the Panhandle-Plains Chamber of Commerce convention.

The new High School stadium is being rushed to completion and will be ready for the tilt Tuesday. It has a seating capacity of approximately 5,000 and advance ticket sales indicate a capacity crowd at the initial game of the season.

The Sandstorm members, under the supervision fo Coach A. S. Douglass, have undergone extensive training and the best high school team of many seasons is expected to be in the field here.

Atlanta Swamps Texarkana.

ATLANTA, Sept. 18.—The 1922 football season was opened here Friday when Atlanta High School defeated the strong Texarkana (Arkansas) High School team, 45 to 0. The playing of Allday at quarter for Atlanta was the best seen here for some time. The Atlanta team is coached by W. E. Rabb, former coach of Wesley College at Greenville. He says Atlanta will be a strong contender for district grid honors.

Electra Hi's Hat in Ring.

ELECTRA, Sept. 18.—Thirty ambitious youths answered Coach Eden's call this week for football practice, and Electra has already thrown her hat in the ring for the interscholastic championship. The boys were slated to find the Electra team shown in Spauling's Guide as a contender for last year's honrs, going down before Abilene for the district championship. It was the same school that blighted their aspirations two years ago, and both coach and players are out to avenge those two defeats.

Eight old men are on the squad. Johnny Rouse, Tevis Bickley and Harschel Johnson, star uarterback of last year's team, are out again.

Electra's first game is with Seymour here Sept. 30. Henrietta is the only team which will be played away from home, according to the interscholastic schedule.

PHILADELPHIA. — Four-year-old Florence Courier ran away from home, but was found 10 hours later guarded by her dog. She had walked eight miles.

OCTOBER 4 IS OPENING DAY OF WORLD SERIES

By Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Sept. 18.—The 1922 world series baseball championship will open Oct. 4 in New York City, it was decided today at a meeting of National and American League representatives here. Last year's prices will prevail.

The arrangements for the opening game in New York were made on the assumption that the New York Giants will win the National League pennant. Both New York clubs were represented at the meeting and the National League club won the toss to decide where the first game would be played. Should St. Louis win the American League championship, the first game at St. Louis would be played on Saturday, Oct. 7.

The arrangement calls for the opening game Wednesday, Oct. 4, to be known as "National League Day," when the Giants would be "at home" on the Polo Grounds.

Oct. 5, providing the New York Americans win the American League pennant, would be "American League Day," when the Yankees would be "at home" on the same grounds.

In case the St. Louis Americans win the American League race from the New York Yankees, after two games in New York, Oct. 4 and 5, Friday, Oct. 6, would be travel day, when the teams would be traveling to St. Louis. Three games would be played in St. Louis, Oct. 7, 8 and 9.

Should a seventh game be necessary to decide the series the place of the deciding game would be decided by lot.

The largest single floor school in the United States is at Fort Wayne, Indiana.

BALTIMORE IS INTERNATIONAL FLAG WINNER

By Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Sept. 18.—Baltimore has won the International League pennant four times in a row. Manager Jack Dunn's opposition to the draft has made it possible for him to hold together a club which is so much better than the other clubs in the league that each season has been a one-sided race.

Judge Landis calls the attitude of the International in refusing to abide by the draft as "un-American," as it debars players from advancing in their profession.

It is believed that unless Baltimore gets rid of some of its star players and comes down closer to the playing level of the other clubs the league may vote to re-establish the draft before another season.

RANCH HOME IS DESTROYED BY FIRE

CISCO, Sept. 18.—Fire of undetermined origin destroyed the country home of Mr. and Mrs. Frank E. Harrell this morning. This place is situated three miles from Cisco on the Harrell ranch. Most of the furniture was saved, although damaged to some extent. The Cisco fire department answered the fire alarm and one fireman, W. A. West, was painfully injured by falling from a ladder. Mr. and Mrs. Harrell were on their way to Cisco when the fire was discovered.

SPUDDER OWNERS PASS DIVIDENDS TO BUILD TEAM

Special to The Star-Telegram.

WICHITA FALLS, Sept. 18.—Owners of the Wichita Falls baseball team will pass up all dividends this year in order that all money will be turned to make a winning Spudder team for 1923, according to announcement from President R. O. Harvey. None of the team has yet been signed up on new contracts, it was stated, the manager and directors now taking a short rest before beginning work for next season. The players are also pretty well scattered, having left for their homes immediately after the closing game last week.

WORLD'S CHAMP TO FIGHT FILIPINO

NEW YORK, Sept. 18.—Jimmy Wilde of England, world's flyweight boxing champion, has accepted terms for a title contest in this country with Pancho Villa, Filipino sensation, who captured the American flyweight title last Thursday night by scoring a technical knockout over Johnny Buff, the former titleholder. This announcement was made last night by Dave Driscoll, matchmaker for the Ebbetts-McKeever Company, which operates Ebbets Field.

The date for the contest has not been set, Driscoll declared, but he considered doubtful whether Wilde could reach this country and get into condition before the outdoor season closes. He gave no indication as to where he would stage the bout, if held indoors. The weight has been agreed upon by the principals as 112 pounds at 2 o'clock on the afternoon of the contest.

AUTO AND CHICKENS STOLEN IN SHERMAN

SHERMAN, Sept. 18.—An automobile was stolen here last night and more than 50 chickens were taken at two places. Thieves were scared off when they attempted to take another automobile.

Police destroyed a quantity of choc beer and made three arrests last night.

INDEPENDENT GAMES

Baird 6, Moran 2.

BAIRD, Sept. 18.—The largest crowd ever gathered in T. P. Park assembled Sunday to see the game between Baird and Moran for the benefit of the striking shop crafts. Rawley Ray of Baird scored 14 strikeouts and was hit but five times. The Coyotes took 10 hits off Diller. The score was 6 to 2 in favor of Baird. Batteries: Ray and Ray; Diller and Lewis.

Eastland 3, Parks 0.

EASTLAND, Sept. 18.—The Eastland Bears administered a shutout defeat to the Park Camp Texacos, claimants of the West Texas semi-pro championship, here Sunday in the presence of 1,000 fans. The score was 3 to 0. Rawley Fairbairn fanned 12 Texacos and let them down with two hits. "Lefty" Phillips of Fort Worth and Ranger fame weakened in the closing innings and yielded nine safeties. "Big Boy" Davis, local first baseman, made a triple and two singles. Batteries: Phillips and Johnson; Fairbairn and Pheips.

"Saint" Players to Mexico.

SAN BENITO, Sept. 18.—Ed Brady and "Lefty" Phillips, manager and pitcher for the San Benito "Saints," have gone to Monterey, Mexico, where they have accepted an engagement for several games on one of the two baseball teams of that city, who have arranged for a three-game championship series.

COST OF LIVING IN AUGUST WAS HIGHER

WASHINGTON, Sept. 18.—The cost of living in August, 1922, was approximately 9 per cent higher than in August, 1921, according to wholesale figures on 404 commodities announced today by the Department of Labor.

The principal increases were noted in costs of fuel and lighting materials, which rose 4¼ per cent, building materials 10¼, metal products 7¾, farm products 6½, clothing 5¾.

SEVERE REACTION IN STOCK PRICES INDIRECT RESULT OF CRISIS IN NEAR EAST AFFAIRS

By Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Sept. 18.—A severe reaction in prices took place in today's stock market, losses in active issues ranging from 1 to 6 points. Provisional selling combined with liquidation of weakened speculative accounts, which was the indirect result of the critical Near East situation, caused the decline. Sales approximated 1,250,000 shares.

Bear traders launched a heavy attack against the entire list at the opening of the session. Railroad, steel, equipment, tobacco and oil shares were particularly hard hit, early losses ranging from 1 to 3 points.

Breaking orf of negotiations between the New York Central and the striking shopmen was held partly responsible for the settling of rail shares, losses of a point or more being recorded by Canadian Pacific, Union Pacific and Lackawanna.

United States Steel common, Gulf Steel and Vanadium each declined a point or more, as did Baldwin, American Tobacco, United Retail Stores, Corn Products, United States Realty and National Enameling. The closing of the Ford plant was regarded as a contributing factor in the weakness of Studebaker, which fell nearly 2 points.

Oils were freely offered, losses of 1 to 2 points being registered by Standard Oils of New Jersey and California, Mexican Petroleum, Cosden and Royal Dutch. New York Airbrake moved against the downward current, rising 1 point to a new high record.

Indications that pools were trying to unload combined with the scramble of some recent buyers to take profits, accelerated the decline as the morning progressed. Loss of 2 to 4 points were sustained before noon by Consolidated Gas, Studebaker, North American, Crucible Steel, Gulf Steel, Bethlehem A, Iron Products, Union Tank preferred, Postum Cereal preferred, Twin City Rapid Transit, Barnsdall A, Standard Oil of California, Royal Dutch and Mexican Petroleum. Rails offered a little more stubborn resistance to selling pressure, the losses ranging from large fractions to 1½ points. Short covering and bidding up of Texas Gulf Sulphur to a new high steadied the market toward midday and fractional rallies resulted in several parts of the list. Call money opened at 4 per cent.

The battering tactics of the bears uncovered a mass of stop loss orders and prices broke precipitately in spots when these were executed. The bulls were dismayed by the abruptness with which prices fell away, and there was a rush to save some of the profits on front purchases, which added immeasurably to the volume of stocks pressing on the market. Nearly all of the well known shares were quoted anywhere from 2 to 3 points under Saturday's closing, while Gulf States Steel broke 6 points, Crucible Steel 5½, Famous Players 4½, and Mexican Petroleum 4 points. Bear operators apparently had full sway, the market at no point giving indications of any sustained support.

The selling movement gained momentum in the early afternoon, Jersey Central dropping 13½ points and losses of 4 to 8 points being registered at that time by Dupont, General Electric, New Orleans, Texas and Mexico, American Tobacco, Standard Oil of New Jersey, North American and American Car. Extensive short covering operations later steadied the list and resulted in a rally which enabled a number of stocks to regain one to three points of their early losses. The closing was steady.

(By Special Leased Wire).

CHICAGO, Sept. 18.—A sensational advance in wheat was recorded during the morning session with much of the early gain maintained up to the finish. The critical situation in the Near East with a clash of arms between the Turks and British was the basic factor which caused the bulge. There was heavy short covering in addition to the new investment buying, while tight offerings made the advance more rapid, stop loss orders to buy being uncovered. There were reports of heavy export sales of Manitoba wheat to the United Kingdom since Saturday, but the advance today shut off business. Liverpool market showed evidence of the critical situation and substantial gains in price were recorded in that market. Receipts continue heavy, but are still under a year ago. Minneapolis reported a little better cash demand at unchanged premiums, but Winnipeg cash wheat premiums were 2c lower. Later Minneapolis reports said premiums were unchanged to 2c lower.

Corn had a strong tone but the advance was not near so rapid as in wheat, owing to the small open short interest. Commission houses were fair buyers and locals bought. There was some realizing on the upturn. Exporters took a moderate amount of corn and domestic sales were fair. Receipts continue heavy, over 700 cars being expected in today.

Oats were up with other grains. September was tight on buying by Northwest cash houses, while shorts and commission houses bought the deferred futures. Western houses sold. One house reported 600,000 bushels of oats sold to domestic consumers for shipment.

Provisions were quiet, but stronger hogs and grain gave the market a firmer tone.

FOREIGN BONDS GENERALLY LOWER WHILE RAIL ISSUES SHOW NET CHANGES AT LOSS

BY GEORGE T. HUGHES.

NEW YORK, Sept. 18.—Concern over the foreign situation was reflected in the foreign bonds were lower, but the losses were not large enough to indicate more than a certain amount of hesitation as to the outcome of the situation in the Near East.

As might have been expected, French bonds were weak. The 8s old at par and the 7½s at 96, at which price they were lower than at any time last week. The 8s equalled their low of last week. In view of the condition of long time sold to yield a higher current return than the 7½s.

Apparently this was on the theory that the 7½s were more attractive because of the fact that they are noncallable. In view of the condition o French finances this seems rather an absurd distinction.

French municipals shared the weakness exhibited by the government issues. United Kingdom bonds were also substantially lower. The 5½s of 1937 at 103¾ kere down 1½ points. This is the best known purely investment issue among British dollar obligation. The 5½s of 1929, because of privilege they carry of conversion into national war 5s sterling issue, fluctuate in response to the quotation for serling exchange, and they can not be regarded as affording as good an indication of the effect of foreign complications on British bonds payable in dollars as it provided by the price of the 5½s.

Czecho-Slovak 8s, obligations of the new established republic, were also weak, selling down to 93¼. Dutch East Indies issues were slightly lower.

Liberties were sympathetically lower. There was a slightly firmer tone to quotations for time money, but not enough to indicate any immediate change in the trend of the market. Railroad issues were irregular with most of the net changes at a loss. Canadian Pacific debenture 4s, for instance, among the very high grade issues, were down a half to 83¾. Colorado and Southern 4½s were down a point, New York Central 6s were off fractionally. But Rock Island refunding 4s of 1934 were fairly steady. A new block of $5,000,000 of these bonds is being offered by a syndicate. These bonds are junior to the Rock Island general 4s and some smaller divisional issues. The price at which they are offered however was considered fairly attractive in view of the security and the earnings of the system.

The industrial list exhibited the same character as the foreign and railroad departments. American Sugar Refining 8s were down about ⅜ of a point. These bonds, originally offered at 98½, were not taken at first, presumably because of the difficulties experienced in the sugar industry last year. Recently, however, they have been selling more nearly on their investment merits.

Among new offerings equipment trust certificates predominated. An issue of New York, Chicago and St. Louis was sold on a 5 per cent basis and a small lot of Hocking Valley 6s were offered to yield from 4½ to 5¾ per cent.

NEW YORK BONDS

NEW YORK, Sept. 18.—Following is an official list of all bonds traded in on the New York Stock Exchange today, with prices and sales up to and including the close of the market. Total sales today were $13,722,000, against $6,402,000 Saturday, $10,122,000 a week ago, $13,355,000 a year ago and $12,636,000 two years ago. From Jan. 1 to date $3,144,245,000, against $2,185,858,000 a year ago and $2,641,980,000 two years ago.

REPUBLICANS FACE TUSSLE TO RETAIN HOUSE

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.
(By New York Times-Chicago Tribune Special Leased Wire. Copyrighted.)

CHICAGO, Sept. 18.—The last of the primaries in the West for the nomination of candidates for United States Senators and Representatives have been held and the election campaign is on. With only one-third of the Senate to be elected, the Republicans, who now have a majority of 22, are assured of continued control of that body in the next Congress, though possibly by a reduced majority, and the principal question the election will answer is whether the Republicans are to retain control of the House also.

The Harding landslide of 1920 gave the Republicans the unusual and wholy abnormal majority of 169 in the House, too unwieldy and unmanageable a majority, say the party leaders, who hold that about 50 make the tidiest and handiest margin for all practical purposes.

Many Will Revert.

Close to 100 districts normally Democratic in the last decade were swept into the Republican column by the Harding avalanche and nearly all of these are expected to revert to type in the November election this year. Also the Republicans are prepared to lose a considerable number of additional districts which they generally carry by a comparatively small plurality. Republican leaders would be happy to find they had a majority of 20 or 30 votes, or even less, if all those elected as Republicans could be depended upon to stay on the reservation on important roll calls or not go over to the Democrats when most needed.

The Democrats are supremely confident of recapturing control of the House this year, all because of the discontent in the country that has been manifested in strikes, in ebullutions of radicalism and disparagement of the Harding administration and of the Republican Congress.

Things Look Squally.

"Yes, I should not be surprised if we were to lose the House," said one emninet Republican leader in assessing the situation. "Things do look a bit squally, but I don't believe we are licked yet. We have bumper crops, worth $1,500,000,000 more than last year's crops, business has begun to boom and was being checked only by the coal and rail strikes. If the administrtion can get the crops and coal moving we should be tasting prosperity in October.

"Give us a few weeks of prosperity and you will be surprised how many people will forget the grouches on the party in power they always contract during hard times."

If the Democrats carry the House, the G. O. P. wil be up to the neck in trouble for the next two years, if not longer. The Democratic aim will be to discredit the Republican regime and to that end the Democrats will thwart the completion of the Harding legislative program and otherwise annoy and embarrass the executive.

RAILWAY AGENT IN CHICAGO IS SLAIN

CHICAGO, Sept. 18.—Three men, presumably railway strikers or their sympathizers, yesterday killed A. Lange, a special agent of the Belt Railway. Two of the men were armed with shotguns and Lange was shot down without warning. He had been especially active in discovering and preventing plots to wreck trains and destroy rail property, through switches that had been tampered with, the wrecking of signal lights and other depredations and had been warned several days ago that he had incurred the enmity of the strikers.

After the shooting the men ran away and have not been apprehended.

MY MARRIAGE PROBLEMS

By Adele Garrison

NEW PHASE OF REVELATIONS OF A WIFE

The Plan by Which Madge Tried to Evade the Big Car.

At sight of the swaying car filled with drunken men coming around the curve of the road toward me, I almost lost the use of my faculties. Only for a second, however. Then, as is often the case, I found the courage and self-possession in the face of real danger, which I had lost utterly in the ride to the hospital when nothing more dangerous than a whispering tree branch had threatened me.

They had seen me. I knew it by the sudden hailing shout one of them gave. Luckily I had been too excited to turn off my engine, my invariable proceeding when my gas tank is filled, and I had not yet unscrewed the cover of the tank. The gallon container was in my hand, and never in my life shall I equal the quickness with which I leaped into the car, and, dropping the gasoline container on the seat beside me, and leaving the door swinging wide, I threw in the clutch and started the car just as the big, swaying car behind me slowed up beside me.

A Race in the Dark.

"Whas' yr hurry, Sisser?" a maudlin voice called. "Wait, our car's too full. One'r two 'v us coming over drive 'th you."

"Women can't drive," another drunken voice called loudly, but by that time I had gotten the car into third, and was flying down the road, driving as never in my life I had driven before.

The maudlin, good-natured shouts turned into angry ones as the drunken men realized that I had eluded them. Then I heard the sound of the muffler cut-out as the driver behind put that speed-making device into action, and the big car roared its way down the road behind me.

I do not know that ever in my life have I wished an accident to befall any human being, but in those moments of stress I found myself wishing—almost praying—that the man at the wheel of the other car would lose his drunken grip on the steering wheel, so those men would no longer be a menace to my errand.

Madge Is Blocked.

But the luck that is supposed to linger around drunken men was surely theirs. How they ever kept the road I do not know. Of course I could not turn my head to look, but I could see in my mirror, so close were they, how their lights swerved from one side of the road to the other.

One boon their drunkenness gave me. Despite their cut-out, their swerving reduced their speed, almost negligibly, it is true, but still enough to enable me to forge ever so slightly ahead. And with brain sharpened by necessity, I knew what I must do.

Just before getting into Bridgehampton there is a turn in the road, and a few feet beyond it a cross road, each winding in the fashion of the old Indian trails from which most of the roads in our section sprang, each heavy with tree shadows. I knew that I could not keep up the grueling pace much longer, but I put on an extra spurt until I rounded the curve almost literally upon one wheel, and immediately afterward dived down the darkest of the cross roads, turned off lights and switch-key simultaneously, and guided the car into the shadow of the bushes at the side of the road on its own momentum.

Then, hardly daring to breathe, I heard the other car roar by, heard also loud imprecations as they realized that they could no longer see my light in front of them.

I had turned into a road leading in the general direction of the farmhouse, but by a roundabout route, and the minute the other car disappeared down the road I started my own, and rapidly drove northward along the winding road I had entered.

It was perhaps ten minutes later when faint and far to the right of me I again heard the machine-gun-like roar of a cut-out. I have not a machinery mind, and I was unable to determine whether or not the car was the same as the one which had pursued me, but my imagination and my fears immediately identified it as the same car. And as the noise rapidly drew nearer I realized that there must be a road crossing the one I was on. Then through the bushes at right angles I saw the lights of an approaching motor, heard again the angry shouts of the men who had frightened me.

And then—squarely across the crossroad in front of me—the big car slowed down and stopped, blocking my path.

Why Do We Say—

"COCKSURE."

It seems very easy to explain the source of the expression "cocksure"—positiveness not always justified, assertiveness bordering on conceit. Without hesitation we think of the "cock-o'-the-walk," and of the barnyard rooster, with has vain bearing and strutting gait.

The allusion may be derived from the bird's conceited, positive ways. But it is more likely to be of French origin, having nothing at all to do with the word "cock."

There is a French phrase which reads "coup sur," meaning "without a doubt," or, literal translation, a sure, telling blow. Those who had the true meaning in mind and yet were deficient in French, may have distorted the word "coup" (pronounced "coo") into cock. The word cocky was probably also derived in this manner and originally did not refer to the rooster's proud appearance.

Doctor to Plead 'War Neurotic' in Trial for Killing

(By New York Times-Chicago Tribune Special Leased Wire. Copyrighted).

HUNTINGDON, Pa., Sept. 18.—Sensational testimony is promised at the trial starting here today of Dr. Herbert J. Bryson, Argonne hero charged with the murder of pretty 26-year-old Mrs. Helen Kirby Haines, who for love of the physician deserted her husband, a War Department chauffeur in Washington, to live as Mrs. Bryson on a farm near the Pennsylvania village of Casville.

Mrs. Haines was shot to death last April 8, and in her last words accused Dr. Bryson of the crime. He is 48, and a member of a prominent Washington family. He was a major in the Forty-Second (Rainbow) Division, A. E. F., and according to the prosecuting authorities, confessed to shooting Mrs. Haines in the abdomen with his army automatic following an early morning quarrel in their home.

In defense he will claim, it is said, that his mind was deranged from shell shock suffered in France. He was a respected bachelor physician in Washington before the war. In action in France his hair turned from black to silver gray in five weeks, and his attorneys will introduce experts' testimony to show that he is a "war neurotic."

Returning to Washington after the war, Dr. Bryson met Mrs. Mrs. Haines in the War Risk Insurance Bureau where she clerked. After three weeks' acquaintance she disapeared with Dr. Bryson. Following the shooting, Dr. Bryson sought to save her life, hired a hearse from a local undertaker and with the dying woman inside the hearse drove madly over mountain roals to Huntingdon for surgical aid. Mrs. Haines died late the following afternoon.

22,144 BALES ARE GINNED IN NUECES

CORPUS CHRISTI, Sept. 18—Official gin figures for Nueces County for the period ending Sept. 1 show that 22,114 bales of cotton had been ginned this season. It is estimated that the amount ginned in the county now will reach 25,000 bales, which is about 5,000 more than was at first estimated. In Kleberg County 1,958 bales had been ginned, against 4,187 last year. Nueces County figures on Sept. 1 last year amounted to 47,950 bales.

Meditations of a Married Woman

by Helen Rowland

Speaking of Men.

Next to a man's selection of a life-mate, the most inexplicable thing on earth is the average woman's selection of a Romantic Ideal.

No man can succeed brilliantly either as a lover or as an author unless he can ignore facts and enlarge on fancies, without a twinge of conscience.

In love, somehow, a man's heart is always either exceeding the speed limit or getting parked in the wrong place.

After three or four repetitions, a man's most ingenious and brilliant "explanation" of why he can't be on time for dinner is apt to become slightly denatured and to lose its original "kick" and spontaniety.

To "understand" a man, a woman need know only enough to cook his favorite dishes, overlook his favorite weakness and flatter his favorite vanities. But this, dear heart, is genius!

The One Big Love never seems to come to a woman until she has decided that keeping "open heart" is a waste of energy, and has locked the door and thrown away the key.

What the girl of today is looking for is not the man who carries her photograph or a prayer book over his heart, but one who carries a bank book there.

The mind of an ideal wife, like a department store or the stomach of an ostrich, is supposed to contain a little of everything, from books to baby's bibs, from recipes to religion, from pickle jars to prayers.

It's a wise woman who can follow a man's argument—at a perfectly safe distance—without letting him see that she is 20 paces ahead of it.

Ten Days Free

To show you the results

The coupon will bring you a 10-Day Tube of Pepsodent. Mail it now, for this test will be a revelation to you. You will see and feel results which have won millions to this method. And you can have them always if you will.

Why Teeth Discolor

Food and smoke stains lodge in film

A way has been found to beautify teeth, to make them whiter, cleaner, safer. Millions now employ it. You see the results wherever you look. Countless teeth glisten which once were dim.

These effects come by combating film. They are coming to careful people the world over, largely through dental advice. If you don't know this new-day method, we urge you to make this test.

Film makes teeth dingy

You can feel on your teeth a viscous film. It clings to teeth, gets between the teeth and stays. The ordinary tooth paste cannot effectively combat it. So brushing teeth in old ways leaves much of that film intact.

Film absorbs stains from food, smoke, etc. Then it forms dingy coats. Tartar is based on film. That is why teeth lose their luster.

Film also holds food substance which ferments and forms acids. It holds the acids in contact with the teeth to cause decay. Germs breed by millions in it. They, with tartar, are the chief cause of pyorrhea.

Thus most tooth troubles are now traced to film. Under old brushing methods, those troubles constantly increased. Nearly everybody suffered.

Now ways to fight film

Dental science, after long research, has found two ways to fight film. One acts to curdle film, one to remove it. Thus the film is day by day combated, and without using harmful grit.

Able authorities have amply proved these methods. Now leading dentists everywhere advise them. Careful people of some fifty nations now enjoy the benefits.

A new-type tooth paste has been created, based on modern research. The name is Pepsodent. These two great film combatants are embodied in it for daily application.

Other essentials

Modern research also proves that other effects are essential, and Pepsodent brings them,

It multiplies the starch digestant in the saliva. That is there to digest starch deposits on teeth, which may otherwise ferment and form acids.

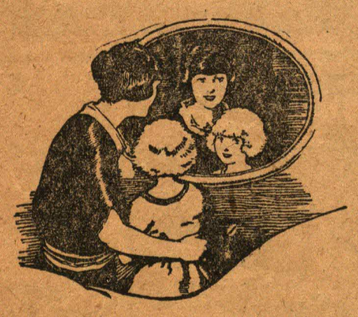
It multiplies the alkalinity of the saliva. That is there to neutralize the acids which cause decay.

Old-time tooth pastes, based on soap and chalk, decreased these vital factors. Pepsodent, with every use, gives manifold power to these tooth-protecting forces in the mouth.

It also polishes teeth so film less easily adheres.

In all these ways, Pepsodent is fast inaugurating a new dental era.

Delightful results in a week



The results of Pepsodent are so quick and apparent that a very short test reveals them. One week will generally show effects amazing and delightful.

Those effects will be convincing. You will realize that you need them, and that your children need them. They mean that the great tooth enemies are now effectively combated.

Send the coupon for a 10-Day Tube. Note how clean the teeth feel after using. Mark the absence of the viscous film. See how teeth whiten as the film-coats disappear.

Then decide by what you see and feel, by the results that old ways never brought. This is too important to neglect. Cut out the coupon now.

GIANTS' NEW MAN TWIRLS FINE GAME

DICKINSON DOES NOT ALLOW GALVESTON SAND CRABS TO MAKE A SINGLE HIT.

LOCALS TAKE BOTH CONTESTS

In the First Loudell Is Touched Up Freely, but Heavy Hitting Supports Him.

The Giants took two games from the Sand Crabs yesterday afternoon. The first was a nine-inning affair, and was very unsatisfactory. The score was 14 to 9. The second game was a seven-inning affair, and was a much better class of baseball, the score being 4 to 0. Dickson the Giants' new twirler, pitched this game, and the Sand Crabs went down without a hit. Both the infield and the outfield gave him exceptional support; otherwise at least two hits might have been recorded.

Crabble, who twirled the first game for Galveston, and Slater, who pitched the last game, did some poor work, while Loudell for the Giants, in the first game, didn't acquit himself very creditably, although it was said that his arm was sore and he should not have gone into the box. In the first game, where hits abounded, Dallas got fourteen, whereas the Sand Crabs got fifteen, and on this line of argument the South Texas aggregation should have had the game. The errors were evenly divided, three and three, and there was nothing in this connection that demonstrated the right of the Giants to win by a score of 14 to 9. However, the hits that Dallas got in the first game were bunched at the proper time and were of sufficient length, whereas the hits of the Galveston aggregation were more scattered and not of such great length. As an illustration, there were six two-baggers for the Giants and only one two-bagger for the Sand Crabs.

Length of First Game.

But probably the most interesting feature of the day was the length of the first game. It required two hours and ten minutes to play it. In all there were twenty-three runs made, and sixteen of these runs were made in the first four innings, or an average of four runs an inning. It consumed one hour and ten minutes in the playing of these four innings. The Giants have on several occasions pulled off an entire game in that length of time.

Fans Baseball Hungry.

The crowd yesterday indicated that the fans were baseball hungry, and also that the management made no mistake in transferring the games from Galveston to Dallas. The crowd was very large for a week day and was very enthusiastic despite the ragged playing.

Mulkey, who umpired, called down maledictions upon his head several times, although, considering the length of the games and the many close decisions, his work was pretty fair.

The features of the game can be enumerated easily: One was a catch by Storch in left field and a home run rapped out by Storch, a home run by Crabble, one by Fletcher, and the pitching of Dickson. Eliminating these the games were featureless.

Dallas Starts Fireworks.

Dallas started the fireworks in the first inning of the first game. Maag got his base on balls. Hole was hit by the pitcher, and Maloney got a hit. Kerns followed with a hit, scoring Maag. Fletcher flew out to left and Hole scored. Storch then got a two-bagger and Kerns scored. Jackson got a two-bagger and Storch scored. Jackson then scored on an error of third, after he had stolen third base. Galveston in her half of the first was promptly retired. Riley fanned, while Epler and Smith were thrown out at first.

Fusillade of Hits.

In the second inning Loudell got a hit. Maag followed with an infield drive and Loudell was thrown out at second on fielder's choice. Hole then got hit by a pitched ball. Maloney flew out to third. Kerns was hit by the pitcher and Fletcher got a two-bagger, scoring Maag and Hole. For Galveston in the second Welkart got his base on balls and then got a hit. Badger flew out to second, while Atkins got a two-bagger, scoring Welkart and Kane. Wolff and Crabble were thrown out at first.

Jackson's Good Drive.

In the third Jackson got a two-bagger, then stole second and went home on an error of third baseman. Tullos fanned, Loudell got a base on balls and Maag got a three-bagger, scoring Loudell. Hole got a hit, scoring Maag, and was retired when caught between first and second. Maloney then flew out to center. In her half of the third Galveston failed to do anthing.

Get Fletcher at Plate.

In the fourth Kerns got a hit and took second on an error of first. Fletcher got a hit, Storch fanned and Jackson got a two-bagger, bringing Kerns home, although Fletcher, who tried to come home too, went out at the plate. Tullos got a hit and went out at second. For Galveston Kane got a hit to left field, Badger rapped out into the same territory, and Atkins then got a hit to left, scoring Kane. Wolff got a hit to right, scoring Badger and taking first on a fielder's choice when Wolff was thrown out at second. Crabble was caught off first on a fly and Riley flew out to Fletcher.

Nothing was done in the fifth. Loudell was thrown out at first, while Maag and Hole fanned for Dallas. For Galveston Epler flew out to right, Smith flew out to second and Welkart was thrown out at first.

Errors Bring Scores.

In the sixth Maloney was thrown out at first, Kerns fanned and Fletcher was thrown out at first. For Galveston Kane got a hit, and then Maag made two errors that were worth scores to the Sand Crabs. He failed to field a drive of Badger's and also one of Atkins, and Kane and Badger came home. Wolff flew out to center, Crabble was thrown out and Riley flew out to center.

Tullos Scores Storch.

In the seventh Storch got a hit. Jackson was thrown out at first and Tullos got a two-bagger, bringing Storch home. Loudell was then thrown out at first and Maag flew out to first. For Galveston Epler flew out to left, Smith got a three-bagger and Welkart flew out to right. Kane got a hit and Smith scored. Badger fanned.

In the eighth Hole flew out to first, Maloney got a two-bagger and Kerns got a two-bagger, scoring Maloney. Fletcher was thrown out at first. Storch flew out to second. For Galveston Atkins flew out to center, Wolff was thrown out at first and Crabble got a home run. Riley got a two-bagger and Epler fanned.

In the ninth Galveston made one run when Welkart came home. It was in this inning that Kane got a final hit, making five hits for him with five times up.

About the Second Game.

No runs were made by either side in the first inning of the second game. In the second inning Fletcher for Dallas got a home run. In the third inning Maag got a three-bagger and Miller followed with a two-bagger, scoring Maag. Maloney then flew out to center, Kerns fanned and Fletcher flew out to center. The only other runs of that game were in the sixth inning, and were made by Dallas. Kerns got to first on an error of right fielder, who dropped a fly. Fletcher then got first on a fielder's choice, while Kerns was thrown out at second. Storch got a home run, going home and sending Fletcher home ahead of him. This practically closed the game.

GALVESTON'S VIEW OF MALONEY.

Calls Him a Fighter Who Is True to His Friends.

And with all his kicks—a more sturdy kicker never breathed—Jimmy Maloney has always been a general favorite in baseball and always will be. It takes kickers to get there. Maloney is out for everything he can get. If you're Maloney's best friend and he thinks you're punk he'll tell you so, and very likely if somebody else said it behind your back he'd fight for you. And if you're his best player and make a bull he'll shoot you to the bench probably. And if others go to roast you Maloney'll roast them. He always says exactly what he means and always works with all his might. He's always ready to grin, but he'd just as lief fight if the occasion demands. Sometimes Maloney makes enemies in baseball, for the little Irishman is only human, but after all it's a hard proposition to take a real dislike to Curley.—Galveston News.

STOP HOUSTON'S WINNING PACE.

Pirates Defeat Buffaloes by Score of 1 to 0—Game Is Battle Royal.

SPECIAL TO THE NEWS.

Houston, Tex., Aug. 8.—Shreveport broke into Houston's remarkable winning streak today in a 1 to 0 game, in which Pitcher Booles for the Pirates was pitted against Bricktop Jarvis in a battle royal. Jarvis allowed seven hits, no two of which were made in the same inning. The Buffaloes could only find Booles for five scattering singles and the longest hit was made by Blake. Mowry misjudged a long fly and Blake made a lucky double out of it. The winning run was the result of a free pass issued to Thebo, who stole second, went to third on a long foul to right and scored on Gear's single. Score:

Navigators Behind Pitcher Sorrells Have No Trouble in Taking Third Victory from Visitors.

SPECIAL TO THE NEWS.

Waco, Tex., Aug. 8.—The Senators were defeated for the third time today, being shut out through good pitching by Sorrell. Herbert, for Austin, gave five bases on balls, hit a man and was batted twice for home runs over the fence. Williams getting one and Hoffman the other of the round-trip hits. The Senators played a better fielding game today, but general listlessness marked their work most of the time. Score:

GAMES MAY DETERMINE THE TEXAS LEAGUE RACE

GIANTS AND BRONCHOS MEET AT GASTON PARK IN AFTERNOON.

Hard Fought Contests Are Expected Because of Importance Attaching to the Result.

The performance of Pitcher Dickinson in yesterday's game with Galveston, when he let the visiting team down without a hit, has encouraged President Gardner and every member of the Dallas team. They now declare with emphasis that they are in the race for first place to stay and that if San Antonio wins either of the games to be played at Gaston Park this afternoon it will be no fault of theirs.

Much depends upon the two games today. If Dallas wins both it will again be in the lead. If it loses both it may be almost out of the running. If it wins one and loses one it is conceded that it will still have a fighting chance, but only a fighting chance, to win out in the end.

Dickinson, the new pitcher, is one of the best men ever seen here. He weighs about 160 pounds, and, in the opinion of good judges, possesses about everything that a first-class pitcher should have. Dickinson has been coach for the Chicago University team for several years. He played in the Chicago City League, which is an aggregation of ball players that is said will tip with the professionals in any league. President Gardner expects Dickinson to take an important part in the closing days of the battle for the pennant.

President Gardner announced last night that having secured one good man, he did not intend to rest content. As an earnest of this he has five other players on the way here, at least some of whom are expected to report in time for duty today. They are Pitcher Whiteridge and Outfielder Wolf of Prescott, Ariz.; Outfielder Coffey of Decatur, Ind.; Pitcher Bayles of Monticello, Ind., and Pitcher Dowd of Sapulpa, Ok.

"I know nothing about these men," President Gardner said, "except that they are highly recommended by men who have no superiors in judging of the qualifications of ball players. If these make good, all right; we will keep them; but if they do not make good—and because of the conditions we can not wait long—I shall sign others. We propose to have a look in for that pennant if we have to secure all the free ball players in the United States."

Tullos was back in the game yesterday and played well, although he has been very sick. His greatest value to a team is in handling bunts down third base line, being very quick and sure in his work in such instances.

The management had not decided last night who would be depended upon to do the pitching for Dallas in today's games with the Bronchos. Being short of pitchers, there is not much room for a selection, but the team has been rejuvenated, one might say, by the return of Tullos and the addition of Dickinson, so that it seems safe to assume that the men selected will receive very satisfactory support.

There was to have been a meeting of the fans at the City Hall last night to discuss the idea of raising a purse to give the Giants in the event they win the pennant. The meeting was called off because it was decided best to wait a few days. If Dallas wins from San Antonio today and shows some speed it is probable that the meeting will be held Monday or Tuesday. Several local fans have expressed the opinion that it will be possible to raise a substantial purse for the members of the club, and it is planned to get $2,500 if the prospects justify it.

Longview 4, Ennis 3.

SPECIAL TO THE NEWS.

Ennis, Tex., Aug. 8.—Longview won the third game of the series from Ennis today by a score of 4 to 3, giving her two of the three games. Batteries—Ennis, Rogers, Corzine and Dunn; Longview, Wood and Spear.

Midlothian will begin a series here Monday and Longview will go to Farmersville.

HARD HITTERS SCARCE IN TEXAS LEAGUE NOW

ONLY SEVEN PLAYERS ON CIRCUIT HAVE .300 OR BETTER.

Fletcher, Who Leads Giants, Stands Twenty-Third in the List with .267.

The News presents this morning the individual batting and fielding average of the players in the Texas League, as well as the pitching averages and the team batting and fielding averages. The compolations are from the scores published from day to day.

In hitting, White, a new man on the Galveston club, heads the list. His average for ten games is .406. Edmondson, who was sold to a major league club not long ago and is therefore no longer on this circuit, comes next with .391. Hilman of Austin is fourth with .368, but he has played in only eleven games. The real leader, games played considered, is Williams of Waco, who for 108 games has succeeded in maintaining an average of .302.

One has to go far down the list of batting averages before encountering the name of a Dallas player. Fletcher is the first of the Giants in this respect and he stands twenty-third, with .267. Miller is twenty-sixth with .265, and Kerns twenty-ninth with .264. Hole is next with .261. Capt. Maloney is hitting at a .257 clip. In the entire league there are only seven players who are hitting .300 or better, which shows that the pitchers are now generally in good condition and holding down the sluggers pretty well.

In team batting Dallas stands tied with Fort Worth for fifth place, the percentage being .236, but the Giants have made more singles and more two-baggers than any other team. Galveston is entitled to be called the "home run team," for thus far this season it has driven safely over the fence seventy-one times. San Antonio comes second with forty-eight and Dallas third with thirty-five.

San Antonio is leading in team fielding and Dallas, unfortunately, is in last place. The team has made 278 errors, but it is significant that it has more assists than any other club. Perhaps these figures prove the claim often made that the Giants make more errors than other teams because they go after everything in sight.

The following averages are for all games played in the Texas League up to and including those of Aug. 5:

Frey Leading TL With .326

By Associated Press.

Husky Jim Frey of Tulsa must be given part of the credit for Tulsa's drive for a first-division berth in the Texas League.

Frey, a 26-year-old southpaw outfielder, is pacing the league's hitters with a .326 average in the latest weekly statistics.

Frey's batting has been an integral part of the Tulsa attack. He also had poled out 29 doubles to lead the league in that category and was second in runs scored with 59 and stolen bases with 15.

Joe Amalfitano of Dallas was second in the individual batting race with .307 followed by Shreveport's Walter Derucki and Houston's Al Baro .306, Nelson Burbrink of Houston, .305 and Ed Irons of Oklahoma City .302.

Houston's Keith Little and Ben Valenzuela continued to hold the top rungs in home run hitting, Little with 22 and Valenzuela with 17.

MOSS CAPTURES RACE AS FANGIO GOES OUT

AINTREE, England, July 20 (AP).—Stirling Moss of Britain, driving a British built Vanwall, won the European Grand Prix Saturday after engine trouble forced World Champion Juan Manuel Fangio of Argentina out about halfway through the 270-mile grind.

It was the first time a British driver ever had driven a British-made car to victory in Britain's major race.

Luigi Musso of Italy, was second and Mike Hawthorn, another Briton, was third. Each drove a Ferrari.

Little Loop Area Action Attracts 16

Sixteen Little League teams from Fort Worth, Denton, Weatherford and Garland will open area play July 29 to determine the district champion and a representative in the sectional tournament at Waco.

Of the 16 teams, 10 are from Fort Worth including last year's champion — Optimist Westcliff League. Three are from Denton, two from Garland and one from Weatherford.

The set-up this season reports Director Newt Wilson will enable this area to determine a district winner without playing in another tournament.

The district winner will compete in the sectional tournament at Waco Aug. 5-7, with the winner there returning to Fort Worth for the state tournament at the Riverside Lions Park Aug. 9-10.

There'll be eight games July 29—two each at the Riverside Lions Park, Garland Park, Denton Park and Thornton Field.

The field will be trimmed down with the Area 1-2 winner meeting the Area 3-4 winner at Riverside Lions Park Aug. 2 at 7:30 p. m.

Leagues which have already chosen their all-star teams are the University Kiwanis, West Side Lions and the Optimist South Side.

Joe Moore and Roy Cook will coach the University Kiwanis team. Howard Hayes and E. L. Wood will coach the Optimist South Side Club. Jack Wood and N. L. Earns will tutor the West Side Lions team.

The area playoff schedule:

JULY 29.

of Giants, Bums Bring Memories

30 years, where he won 10 pennants.

It is the place where the Giants won a record 26 in a row in 1916, where McGraw reeled off four straight pennants, where Babe Ruth hit most of his 59 home runs in 1921 before the Yankees owned their own home, where Mel Ott began his home run slugging as a 16-year-old kid, where a 20-year-old colored boy out of Alabama, Willie Mays, came along to capture the hearts of Giant fans with his amazing all-round wizardry.

As long as there are Giant fans there will be talk of many things and many heroes. Of Fred Snodgrass' muff of a fly that cost the Giants the 1912 World Series, of Heinie Zimmerman, Giant third baseman, chasing Eddie Collins home all the way from third with the run that enabled the Chicago White Sox to win the 1917 World Series, of the famous double play started by Second Baseman Johnny Rawlings that gave the Giants the 1921 World Series over the Yankees.

There will be talk about Turkey Mike Donlin, the great Giant outfielder who went "Broadway" by marrying a musical comedy star; of Frankie Frisch, Jackson, Freddy Lindstron, Dummy Taylor, the deaf-and-dumb pitching star; Phil Douglas, the unfortunate pitcher who was expelled for offering to throw a game; of Ross Youngs, Artie Nehf, George Kelly, Travis Jackson, Dave Bancroft, Fred Lindstrom, Hughie McQuillan, Pancho Snyder, Blondy Ryan, Freddie Fitzsimmons and Hal Schumacher.

McGraw Ruled Firmly.

But mostly the talk will be about McGraw, a man of hot words and large qualities, who brooked no dissent. Under McGraw's quick tongue and keen mind, as under few managers, average ball players became good ones and good ones played as though they were touched with greatness. McGraw first managed the Giants in the last half of 1902. The club finished last. Next year it finished second and the next two it won the pennant, winning 106 games in 1904 and 105 in 1905. Little Napoleon retired in 1932.

Four managers, followed in the shadow of McGraw during the next quarter of a century. Terry led the team from 1932 through 1941; Ott, managed from 1942 to the middle of 1948; Leo Durocher succeeded Ott and himself was succeeded by Bill Rigney in 1956.

Terry won pennants in 1933, 1936 and 1937. Durocher won in 1951 and 1954, bringing the Giants their first world championship in 21 years in '54.

Ebbets Field, the home of the "Beloved Bums," where the slogan used to be "wait until next year," provided as many thrills and as much excitement as the Polo Grounds even if it waited 43 years before it produced its first world champion. It certainly provided more fun.

It has been said that the Dodger rooters are fans by instinct. Even in the dead of winter, some of the more hardy used to be seen pushing perambulators around Ebbets Field and looking longingly at the closed park, like a homing pigeon who found himself locked out at the end of his return journey. Ebbets Field is where Nap Rucker pitched his no-hitter but was deprived of a perfect game because of three errors by the same player; where Babe Herman hit a triple that resulted in a double play; where Casey Stengel gave the bird to an umpire by lifting his cap, allowing a sparrow to swoop out; where a fan leaped out of the grandstand and climbed on the back of Umpire George Magerkurth; where Pete Reiser crashed into the outfield walls until they finally had to pad them.

The Dodger park is where Gil Hodges slammed four home runs in one game; where Catcher Mickey Owen's ninth-inning muff of a third strike cost the Dodgers a World Series game against the Yankees; where the Brooks lost the final playoff game for the 1946 pennant and the first playoff game for the 1951 pennant; where Jackie Robinson, the first Negro in organized baseball, made his big league debut; where Babe Ruth wound up his big league career, as a coach; where French Bordagary appeared one day sporting a Van Dyke beard, where the 40-year-old Sal (The Barber) Maglie, made his incredible comeback, climaxing his 1956 exploits with a no-hitter against Philadelphia.

Uncle Wilbert Robinson became boss in 1915. He brought Brooklyn its first modern pennant in 1916 and won again in 1920. The Dodgers didn't win the pennant again until 1941, under Durocher, and although they won six more flags from 1947 through 1956, they didn't capture the world championship until 1955 when they nipped the Yankees under Walter Alston. Until 1923, not only the Giants but the Yankees, were Polo Grounds tenants. Yankee Stadium was born because of the reluctance of McGraw to continue to house the Yankees at the Polo Grounds.

The irony of it now is that the Giants wished to remain in New York they would have to become tenants of the Yankees. This may still happen but don't bet on it.

Bailey Bumps Johnstone

OMAHA, July 20 (AP).—Meriam Bailey, the calm stubborn national collegiate champion, won the Women's Western Amateur golf tournament Saturday with a 2-1 victory over Ann Casey Johnstone, the Mason City, Iowa, veteran.

The 20-year-old Northwestern University co-ed, three up at the end of 18 holes, saw her lead dwindle to one hole at 27, but she refused to flinch down through the stretch.

The dramatic match ended on the 35th hole where Mrs. Johnstone, 34-year-old mother of a 5-year-old daughter, muffed a four-foot putt. The collegiate champion from Evanston, Ill., who had chipped to 18 inches out from 80 feet away dropped her putt for a par 4 and the championship.

Mrs. Johnstone, who had a miserable day on her short putts, came within one hole of her opponent by winning 26 and 27. But that was the last hole Ann won as they battled on even terms through seven straight holes before the thriller reached its climax at the 35th.

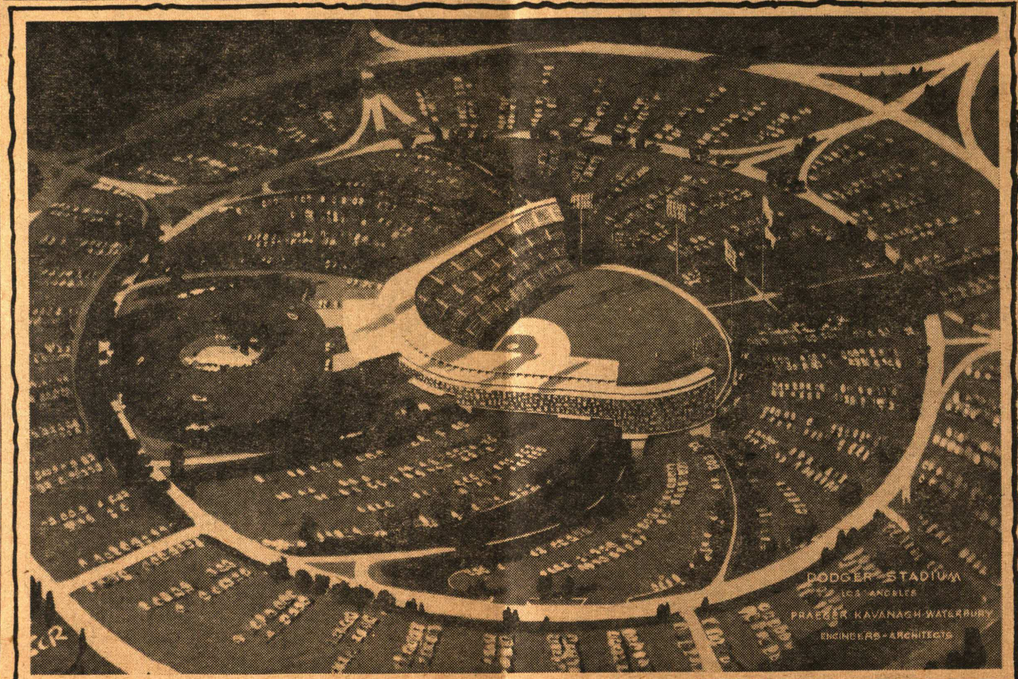
Will A. L. Alight in L. A.'s New Showplace?



WITH AMERICAN LEAGUE OWNERS having voted to consider expansion, the Dodgers may have tenants in their Chavez Ravine stadium within a few years. Here is an artist's conception of the Los Angeles park, now under construction, which, some experts feel, will be the stamping ground for the tenth A. L. club.

Two-Out Single Scores Marchio

Paynich Goes Distance To Hold Off Missions

BY LORIN McMULLEN.
Star-Telegram Sports Writer.

Rudy Paynich pitched one of the classics in Fort Worth baseball history at La Grave Field Tuesday night. The Cats' big righthander went the route in a scoreless marathon broken up with two out in the 15th inning as Eddie Haas rifled a single past Second Baseman Henry Moreno, scoring Frank Marchio from second for a 1-0 victory.

It approached the Texas League record 1-0 game of 18 innings between Beaumont and Houston set in 1942. In this one, however, each club used three pitchers.

For consecutive shutout innings pitched in one game it compared with the record of 22 innings set by Harry Ables of San Antonio in 1910 against Waco.

Paynich for 10 innings had a worthy opponent in the Missions' young lefthander, Dick Fitzgerald, who gave up eight hits before checking out for a pinch-hitter.

Dick Luebke, previously unbeaten in four starts, took over and held Fort Worth to two hits for four innings before the break came.

Frank Marchio opened the 15th with a single to center, Paynich singled, Piper Davis, batting for Marlyn (Curly) Holtzapple, was walked purposely, Marty Devlin flied to center.

Then, with two strikes against him, Haas shot a hot grounder toward center. Second Baseman Moreno leaped for the ball but managed only to deflect in such manner as to prevent quickest handling by Centerfielder Charles Oertel and Marchio beat the throw-in to the plate by several steps.

Walks Only One.

Paynich, now 2-1 with the Cats, allowed 11 hits, walked one and struck out one.

In the first nine innings the Missions sent one man as far as third base while the Cats got there twice. San Antonio's opportunity came in the third inning, when Gaspar led off with a single, advanced on a wild pitch and Fitzgerald's infield out but Roberts and Oertel couldn't move him farther.

Marolewski and Causey put together lead-off singles in the fifth, only to run into a double play started by Paynich on Gaspar's attempted sacrifice.

In the ninth, after the teams had flubbed five sacrifice attempts (three by the Cats, two by Missions) Moreno bunted to move up Oertel, who had opened with a single. Again, however, a Fort Worth double play broke up the bid.

Miss in Fifth.

The Cats' best chance came in the fifth when they planted men on first and third with none out on Russell's double and Marchio's single. Here Fitzgerald fanned Paynich, stopped Holtzapple on a short fly and Caffery's throw foiled Devlin's two-out bunt.

Haas walked in the sixth, and with one out went to third on Bottler's single. This threat ended with Stankey lining into a double play.

Fitzgerald checked out for a pinch-hitter in the 11th and his successor, Luebke, maintained the same mastery over the Cats. Marchio managed a single off him in the 12th.

Moreno beat out an infield hit off Paynich in the 12th, Luebke singled past Russell in the 13th and in the 14th the Missions doubled up for the first time since the fifth as Oertel opened with a single and with one out Mierkowicz marked up another.

Ron Moeller (6-2), San Antonio's leading pitcher, will be matched against the Cats' Gene Fodge (3-6) Wednesday night.

THE SECOND-LARGEST CROWD in Texas League all-star history, 11,076, looks on at Dallas-Fort Worth's Turnpike Stadium, July 15, as the Astros beat the Stars, 5-1, in 11 innings.

Astros Explode for Four in 11th, Whip Texas Stars for First Time

Gentile Ruckus with Ump Mars Texas All-Star Game

ARLINGTON, Tex.—A violent display of temper by Jim Gentile, Houston first baseman, marred the Texas League all-star game here, July 15.

The incident occurred in the eighth inning when Gentile went in as a pinch-hitter. After Umpire Frank Walsh called a second strike on him, the hot-tempered Astro slugger charged the arbiter and unleashed a verbal tirade.

Manager Lum Harris and several Astro players rushed onto the field to separate the pair and Walsh finally gave Gentile the heave-ho. Nellie Fox replaced him at bat.

Returning to the dugout, Gentile came charging out at Walsh again about 30 seconds later. Other players had to restrain him and he finally was led to the clubhouse in right field with the fans jeering him every step of the way.

Cayll issued a pair of walks, forcing in two runs to hand the Spurs a 5-4 decision. The win was No. 7 for Dowling, a five-game loser.

JOY TURNS INTO NIGHTMARE

NEEDING just one more out for a 2-0 victory, pitcher Bill Hall of Albuquerque saw ecstasy replaced by a nightmare as Tulsa rallied for three runs to win, 3-2, July 17. With one gone in the ninth inning, Billy Wolff and Bob Pfeil struck back-to-back singles. Dave Pavlesic followed with a hard smash to the mound. Hall made a fine play to retire him, but in the process apparently hurt his hand and gave way to John Billingham. After walking Ernie Foli, Billingham was tagged for a single by John Kindl. Two runs scored on the hit, and when the ball got through left fielder Dick McLaughlin, Foli also raced home with the winning run.

Fisticuffs enlivened a 15-inning marathon at Austin, July 13. The brawl broke out when Tulsa catcher Dave Pavlesic and shortstop Mike Sinnerud of Austin exchanged sharp words. Both were ejected. Another casualty of the melee was Austin outfielder Barry Morgan's glasses. When the scrap began, he took the specs off and laid them on top of the dugout, but someone stepped on them. Tulsa won the game, 5-4, when Walt Williams' fourth high of the night drove in the deciding run.

By MERLE HERYFORD
ARLINGTON, Tex.

For ten innings here, July 15, the Houston Astros were lost without a protective dome—although they had occasional trouble with high fly balls.

Then they exploded for four runs in the eleventh frame to whip the Texas League all-stars for the first time in four starts, 5-1.

The annual get-together between the National League representatives and the fledgling major leaguers drew a near-record Texas League all-star crowd of 11,076, second only to Fort Worth's turnout of 12,636 in 1948.

Only the season's third-largest crowd at Turnpike Stadium, new home of the Dallas-Fort Worth Spurs, it set a record for the Houston series, however, by approximately 2,500. The old mark was 8,822, set at San Antonio's Mission Stadium in 1963.

It was the first extra-inning game of the abbreviated series and the margin was the greatest since the inaugural game of 1962, in which the Texas leaguers won, 8-1. The all-stars scored one-run, ninth-inning victories in both 1963 and 1964.

Locked in a 1-1 battle from the fifth inning, the Astros teed off on John Billingham, Albuquerque's ace reliever, in the second extra inning, using three hits and a pair of walks for their winning margin.

Error Helps Astros

With one away, Walt Bond walked and was doubled to third by Jim Wynn. Frank Thomas drew an intentional walk, loading the bases, and Gus Triandos batted for Ken MacKenzie, the third Houston pitcher and the winner.

Triandos tapped to the mound, forcing Bond, but catcher Don Pavlesic (Tulsa) threw wide of first while trying for a double play, and Wynn crossed the plate with the tie-breaking run.

Lee Maye singled home Thomas and Ron Brand's double to left scored Triandos and Maye.

The Texas League's lone run came in the fifth, knotting the count, on a triple to right-center by the Spurs' Bobby Pena and a bloop single to right by Austin third baseman Mike Sinnerud, who played a big role in the 1962 Texas League victory.

Houston's first run—in the fourth—was unearned. The Astors combined a single by Wynn, a hit batsman, passed ball (by Pavlesic) and a sacrifice fly by Bob Aspromonte, who barely missed a homer.

For three innings, Austin lefthander Herb Hippauf, who was working with only two days' rest, and the Astros' Tom Dierker struggled through a double no-hitter.

The Astros' first run came off Clint Stark, Tulsa ace, but Charlie Hartenstein of Dallas-Fort Worth (one inning) and Ray Cordeiro of Amarillo (three) blanked the Astros on a total of three hits.

Billingham Proves No Puzzle

Billingham (4-2), who had a 1.64 earned-run average for 44 innings, was no puzzle.

Ron Taylor, who pitched the eighth and ninth for Houston, had no trouble, but Ken MacKenzie had to put down a two-out, two-hit rally. Dave Giusti preserved the victory for MacKenzie, fanning two of the three all-stars he faced.

The Houston all-star game, which has become a permanent feature and a popular part of the Texas League season, was the brain child of former Texas League President Dick Butler, now executive vice-president of Dallas-Fort Worth.

The game stemmed from Butler's desire to give the financially-distressed Austin and San Antonio clubs a shot in the arm in 1962. The game was arranged with the co-operation of Houston General Manager Paul Richards.

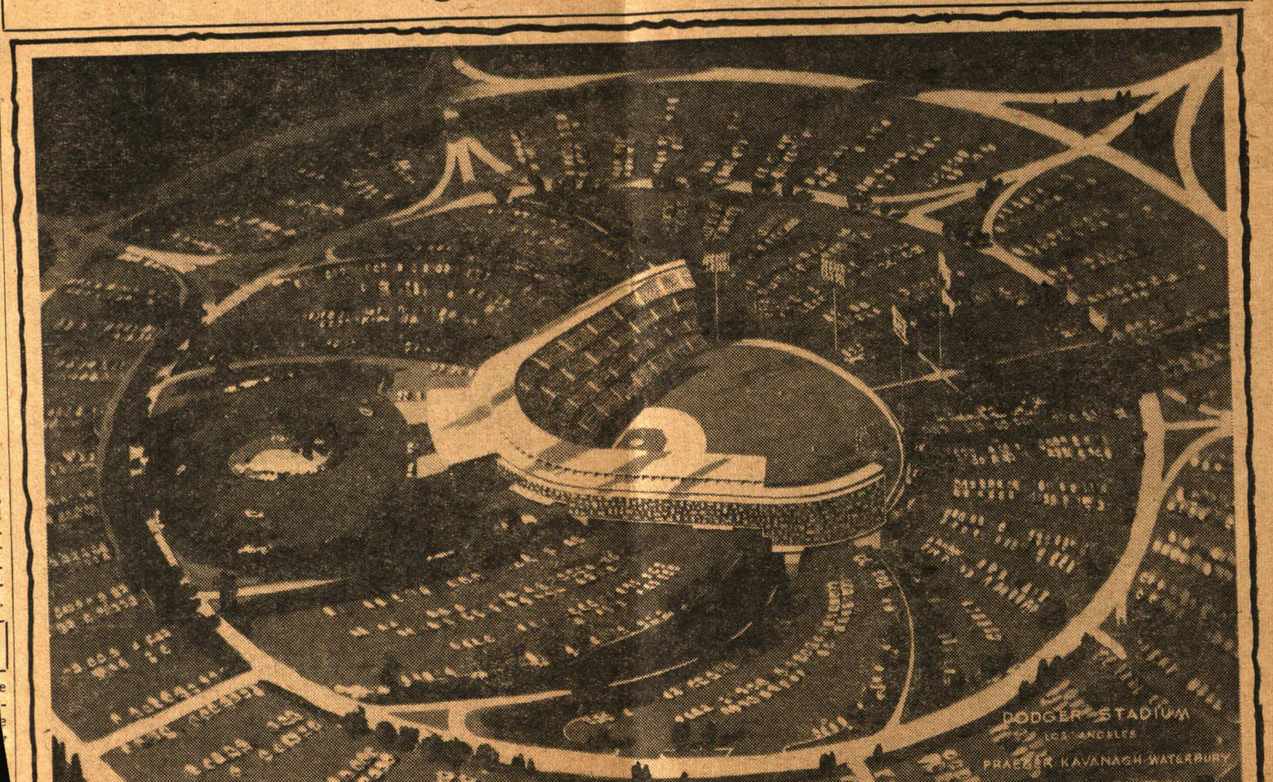
Will A. L. Alight in L. A.'s New Showplace?



WITH AMERICAN LEAGUE OWNERS having voted to consider expansion, the Dodgers may have tenants in their Chavez Ravine stadium within a few years. Here is an artist's conception of the Los Angeles park, now under construction, which, some experts feel, will be the stamping ground for the tenth A. L. club.

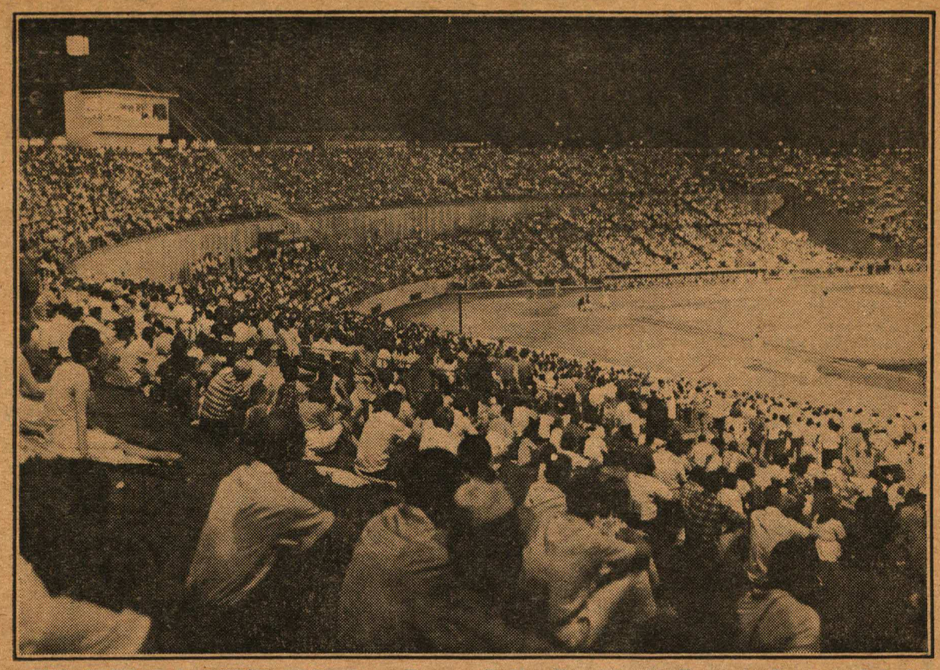
OVERFLOW AT TURNPIKE STADIUM — Despite afternoon showers and the threat of more rain, 11,076 fans fill every seat and spill over on the slopes at Turnpike Stadium Thursday night to see the Texas League All Stars battle Houston's Astros. National League team won, 5-1.



THE SECOND-LARGEST CROWD in Texas League all-star history, 11,076, looks on at Dallas-Fort Worth's Turnpike Stadium, July 15, as the Astros beat the Stars, 5-1, in 11 innings.

Astros Explode for Four in 11th, Whip Texas Stars for First Time

Gentile Ruckus with Ump Mars Texas All-Star Game

ARLINGTON, Tex.—A violent display of temper by Jim Gentile, Houston first baseman, marred the Texas League all-star game here, July 15.

The incident occurred in the eighth inning when Gentile went in as a pinch-hitter. After Umpire Frank Walsh called a second strike on him, the hot-tempered Astro slugger charged the arbiter and unleashed a verbal tirade.

Manager Lum Harris and several Astro players rushed onto the field to separate the pair and Walsh finally gave Gentile the heave-ho. Nellie Fox replaced him at bat.

Returning to the dugout, Gentile came charging out at Walsh again about 30 seconds later. Other players had to restrain him and he finally was led to the clubhouse in right field with the fans jeering him every step of the way.

ARLINGTON, Tex.

For ten innings here, July 15, the Houston Astros were lost without a protective dome—although they had occasional trouble with high fly balls.

Then they exploded for four runs in the eleventh frame to whip the Texas League all-stars for the first time in four starts, 5-1.

The annual get-together between the National League representatives and the fledgling major leaguers drew a near-record Texas League all-star crowd of 11,076, second only to Fort Worth's turnout of 12,636 in 1948.

Only the season's third-largest crowd at Turnpike Stadium, new home of the Dallas-Fort Worth Spurs, it set a record for the Houston series, however, by approximately 2,500. The old mark was 8,822, set at San Antonio's Mission Stadium in 1963.

It was the first extra-inning game of the abbreviated series and the margin was the greatest since the inaugural game of 1962, in which the Texas leaguers won, 8-1. The all-stars scored one-run, ninth-inning victories in both 1963 and 1964.

Locked in a 1-1 battle from the fifth inning, the Astros teed off on John Billingham, Albuquerque's ace reliever, in the second extra inning, using three hits and a pair of walks for their winning margin.

Error Helps Astros

With one away, Walt Bond walked and was doubled to third by Jim Wynn. Frank Thomas drew an intentional walk, loading the bases, and Gus Triandos batted for Ken MacKenzie, the third Houston pitcher and the winner.

Triandos tapped to the mound, forcing Bond, but catcher Don Pavlesic (Tulsa) threw wide of first while trying for a double play, and Wynn crossed the plate with the tie-breaking run.

Lee Maye singled home Thomas and Ron Brand's double to left scored Triandos and Maye.

The Texas League's lone run came in the fifth, knotting the count, on a triple to right-center by the Spurs' Bobby Pena and a bloop single to right by Austin third baseman Mike Sinnerud, who played a big role in the 1962 Texas League victory.

Houston's first run—in the fourth—was unearned. The Astors combined a single by Wynn, a hit batsman, passed ball (by Pavlesic) and a sacrifice fly by Bob Aspromonte, who barely missed a homer.

For three innings, Austin lefthander Herb Hippauf, who was working with only two days' rest, and the Astros' Tom Dierker struggled through a double no-hitter.

The Astros' first run came off Clint Stark, Tulsa ace, but Charlie Hartenstein of Dallas-Fort Worth (one inning) and Ray Cordeiro of Amarillo (three) blanked the Astros on a total of three hits.

Billingham Proves No Puzzle

Billingham (4-2), who had a 1.64 earned-run average for 44 innings, was no puzzle.

Ron Taylor, who pitched the eighth and ninth for Houston, had no trouble, but Ken MacKenzie had to put down a two-out, two-hit rally. Dave Giusti preserved the victory for MacKenzie, fanning two of the three all-stars he faced.

Cayll issued a pair of walks, forcing in two runs to hand the Spurs a 5-4 decision. The win was No. 7 for Dowling, a five-game loser.

JOY TURNS INTO NIGHTMARE

NEEDING just one more out for a 2-0 victory, pitcher Bill Hall of Albuquerque saw ecstasy replaced by a nightmare as Tulsa rallied for three runs to win, 3-2, July 17. With one gone in the ninth inning, Billy Wolff and Bob Pfeil struck back-to-back singles. Dave Pavlesic followed with a hard smash to the mound. Hall made a fine play to retire him, but in the process apparently hurt his hand and gave way to John Billingham. After walking Ernie Foli, Billingham was tagged for a single by John Kindl. Two runs scored on the hit, and when the ball got through left fielder Dick McLaughlin, Foli also raced home with the winning run.

Fisticuffs enlivened a 15-inning marathon at Austin, July 13. The brawl broke out when Tulsa catcher Dave Pavlesic and shortstop Mike Sinnerud of Austin exchanged sharp words. Both were ejected. Another casualty of the melee was Austin outfielder Barry Morgan's glasses. When the scrap began, he took the specs off and laid them on top of the dugout, but someone stepped on them. Tulsa won the game, 5-4, when Walt Williams' fourth high of the night drove in the deciding run.

Chisox Ace Selected on 13 of 16 Ballots--Jones Gets Two Votes and Shaw One

By HY HURWITZ

BOSTON, Mass.

By a landslide vote, Early Wynn of the Chicago White Sox became the fourth winner of the Cy Young Memorial Award as the major leagues' outstanding pitcher during the 1959 season.

Wynn received 13 of the 16 votes from the Baseball Writers' Association of America committee, which selected the newest recipient of the award first presented by Commissioner Ford C. Frick in 1956. Sam Jones of the San Francisco Giants drew two votes and Bob Shaw, Wynn's pitching teammate on the White Sox, received the other.

Both Wynn and Jones were named earlier as winners of THE SPORTING NEWS awards as the top pitchers in the American and National leagues, respectively.

For the 39-year-old Wynn, this has been a terrific year. His 22 triumphs topped all pitchers in the majors.

For helping pitch the White Sox into the 1959 World's Series, Early was voted the pro of the month of September in the national balloting for the Hickok Award. He was selected by Manager Al Lopez to pitch the Series opener, and although a stiffening arm

Rochester Reports Big Loss, Club May Not Survive for '66

ROCHESTER, N. Y.—The community-owned Rochester Red Wings, with an original 8,222 stockholders, are in "serious financial trouble," board chairman Morrie E. Silver said at a press conference, July 15.

Silver, who also is vice-president of the league, said there is a "possibility" that the club "may not survive" another season and added that several other I. L. clubs face a "chaotic" financial situation.

After meeting the July 15 payroll, Silver said the Red Wings had barely $6,100 left in the bank.

A sharp decline in attendance during the first half resulted in a loss of $69,999 through June 1, an audit revealed. It showed income of $73,438, including revenue from advertising, radio, concessions and admissions. Expenditures amounted to $143,437.

Attendance through July 13 totaled 86,097, a drop of nearly 50,000 as compared to a similar period last year. Adverse weather and the club's disappointing play earlier in the season were blamed.

In an attempt to reduce the deficit, the Red Wings opened their ticket-book plan again, July 16. Under the arrangement, a customer can buy a book of ten tickets for $10, a savings of $2.50.

Silver, who headed the drive for community ownership when the Cardinals abandoned Rochester nine years ago, has recently taken an almost full-time, active part in club operations. At a meeting of the club's executive board, June 24, he was placed in complete charge, "with full authority to effect economies, direct personnel . . . and take all steps necessary for the best interests of the club and the stockholders."

Silver said the parent Orioles had been made aware of the Red Wings' situation "and we feel they will help."

He emphasized that the club wanted to avoid anything resembling a "threat" to the public, explaining that the press conference was called simply so that the fans could be alerted in advance.

SECOND TRIPLE KILLING

WILLIAMSPORT was the victim of a triple play by Springfield for the second time in four days, July 12, but the Mets beat the Giants anyway, 3-2. In the sixth inning, after singles by Dick Martin and Jim Lampe put runners on second and first, Shaun Fitzmaurice lined to second baseman Tony Eichelberger. His throw to shortstop Damaso Blanco doubled Martin and the relay to Arlo Engel at first base caught Lampe for the third out.

Pete Magrini, righthander with Pittsfield, scattered eight singles, struck out 11 and beat Reading, 7-2, July 18, for his tenth victory. The game at Reading drew only 166 paid, the Indians' smallest turnout of the season.

Umpires Dick Vollmer and Ron Luciano walked into a Springfield restaurant after officiating in a game, July 16, and devoured a big meal, only to find that they had no money in their wallets. Someone had broken into dressing room during the game and had cleaned them out for a combined total of $200.

ONE ALLEN LIKE ANOTHER

RICHIE ALLEN, third baseman with the Philadelphia Phillies, isn't the only member of his family to be making headlines in baseball. His brother, Hank, outfielder with York, showed some of the Allen power with two big hits in an 8-7 victory over Elmira, July 18. The first blow was a grand-slam homer in the fifth inning and the second was a game-winning single in the tenth. The hit drove in Mike Gardner, who had tripled.

Al Yates, who had 20 homers at Auburn (NYP) before joining Williamsport, hit his first for the Mets, July 14, and it was a game-winning blow. The young outfielder's drive with a man on base in the seventh inning enabled Williamsport to nip Reading, 6-5.

Larry Haney, Elmira catcher, was in a hospital with his trick knee in a cast, awaiting word on the necessity for surgery. If the doctors order the operation, it is likely he will be out of action the rest of the season. Southpaw Harley Anderson also was on the disabled list with a bad ankle and was hobbling around on crutches.

VICTORY FOR STENHOUSE

DAVE STENHOUSE took a big stride along the road to recovery from arm trouble when the former major leaguer pitched his first victory for York, beating Pittsfield, 3-2, in the seven-inning opener of a double-header, July 13. With two out in the first, Stenhouse was tagged for a single by Reggie Smith and a hom-

L (AP) — Tom Reynolds' two-out, n inning lifted Kansas City to a nd a split of their doubleheader Thursday night.

The American League-leading Twins won the opener 11-3 as Tony Oliva slammed a pair of bases-empty home runs. Oliva also drove in both Minnesota runs in the nightcap.

Starter Jim Perry held the Athletics to four hits in 7 2-3 innings of the nightcap but had to leave the game with a pulled muscle.

Jim Coker and Tommy Harper's two-run double led the National League-leading Cincinnati Reds to an 8-1 rout over the Philadelphia Phillies Thursday night.

Joe Nuxhall gained his fifth straight victory for the Reds, bringing his record to 6-2. Nuxhall, who allowed eight hits, also doubled in a run and scored in the sixth inning.

Coker smashed a shot against the center field wall in the second inning. Umpire Ed Vargo first ruled it a double, but then, after a protest by the Reds, changed it to a home run when he said it hit above the home run line. Manager Gene Mauch of the Phillies played the game under protest.

BORK WINS ON BIRTHDAY

LEFTY Frank Bork of Columbus celebrated his twenty-fifth birthday, July 13, by gaining sweet revenge against Jacksonville. Victim of a pair of 1-0 defeats in his last two starts against the Suns, Bork emerged with a 7-1 victory this time. Jacksonville's lone run came on a monumental homer by Ted Savage, who beat Bork in one of the 1-0 games with a less prodigious circuit smash. Savage's blast disappeared over the 430-foot marker in straightway center field. Old-timers could recall only three such wallops in the 33-year history of Jet Stadium. They were delivered by Dale Alexander, Dick Donovan and Ted Williams.

Second baseman Elio Chacon was lost to Jacksonville temporarily with a bone bruise of the left knee suffered in a collision at second base, July 14. He was hitting .288.

JETS DRAW BEST CROWD, 9,171

KIWANIS Night and a six-game Jet winning streak combined to attract Columbus' largest crowd of the year, 9,171, July 14. Unfortunately, visiting Jacksonville failed to join in the spirit of the occasion, edging the Jets, 5-4, in a thrill-filled contest. Infielder Bobby Dews was the Suns' hero. Batting an anemic .136 with only three RBIs prior to the game, he belted a tie-breaking triple in the seventh inning that opened the door to victory, and then he saved the game with a spectacular leaping catch of a line drive to end the contest. The defeat was only the fifth in the last 25 games for Larry Shepard's surprising Jets.

Following the extraction of a tooth earlier in the day, Manager Frank Carswell felt so groggy, July 16, that he remained in civvies for Syracuse's twin-bill with Syracuse that night. However, the Chiefs made him feel better by beating Buffalo twice. John Ryan's leadoff homer in the final inning won the opener, 6-5, and then Bill Graham breezed to a 6-2 victory. The bad tooth was believed at least partially responsible for the virus-like condition that had kept Carswell off the coaching lines for nearly a week.

WOMACK LIKES NEW ROLE

BEING a starting pitcher suits Dooley Womack just fine. The Toledo righthander, used in relief in 21 of his 22 previous appearances this year, reeled off two successive smartly-pitched victories as a starter. Against Atlanta, July 13, Womack spun a three-hit masterpiece to win, 1-0. He owned a no-hitter until two out in the sixth inning while negotiating the nine-inning route for the first time since 1963. In his next outing, July 17, Womack downed Jacksonville, 3-2, with ninth-inning help from Bob Tiefenauer.

Don Dillard, Syracuse outfielder, saw his hitting streak clipped at 12 games, July 13. Two days later Dillard, on loan from the Milwaukee organization, was called up by the Braves. He was hitting .294 at the time.

Clay Carroll, Atlanta righthander, is beginning to wonder what he has to do to beat the pesky Toledo Mud Hens. After holding them to four hits on July 4, only to succumb to Pete Mikkelsen's no-hitter, Carroll tossed a three-hitter at Toledo, July 13, but lost again, 1-0, to Dooley Womack. Carroll had a one-hit effort going until the eighth inning, when a double by Archie Moore and Bob Schmidt's single scored the lone run.

Cactus Champ Cubs Boast They'll Shed Doormat Role

Tappe Convinced Club Can Take Fifth or Sixth and May Even Rise to Fourth

By JERRY HOLTZMAN

CHICAGO, Ill.

The Chicago Cubs, most of whom had over two months of intensive spring training exercises, were eagerly awaiting the opening bell, especially after they'd won the Cactus League championship with an 11-8 record. The unanimous sentiment is that the club is considerably improved over last year, when the Wrigleys staggered home seventh, 35 games off the pennant pace.

Elvin Tappe, the only one of the Bruins' nine coaches who was a coach in spring training last year, said he was convinced that the team would be able to finish fifth or sixth, and possibly wind up as high as fourth place. Said Tappe: "We won't be beating ourselves this year."

There was no doubt that the Cubs, as a unit, have been unusually alert during spring training. They are much improved in fundamentals, offense and defense. Catchers now look for men to pick off base, the pitchers back up virtually every play, and the outfielders have been hitting the cut-off man with regularity—maneuvers previously foreign to the club.

The pre-season optimism has also been based on the fine spring performances of several of the younger players, notably Third Baseman Ron Santo, Right Fielder Billy Williams and Dick Ellsworth, the 21-year-old southpaw and one-time $50,000 bonus boy.

Ellsworth had a 7-13 record last year but was the team's most impressive Cactus League moundsman. He averaged better than one strikeout per inning and had fanned 30 batters in 28⅔ innings while giving only 11 bases on balls.

Baffled Red Sox Batters

Now the No. 2 man on the staff behind Glen Hobbie, Ellsworth was particularly impressive in a four-inning stint against the Red Sox on April 2, when he yielded only two hits while striking out eight.

Ellsworth's big improvement can be traced to the fact that he has been getting the ball over the plate. He has had excellent control of both his curve and fast ball. Moreover, his hook is considerably improved and has a shorter and quicker break.

Dick Drott, hoping for a comeback, also did well in the exhibition season. He worked seven strong innings in Mesa on April 4 when the Cubs beat the Angels, 4 to 3, in their last Arizona appearance. Drott was nicked for three runs in the first, but proceeded to pitch six scoreless innings.

It was his longest stint since 1959 and certainly earned him consideration as a rotation starter along with Hobbie, Ellsworth and Jack Curtis, the fine rookie southpaw. The coaches were noncommital about this, but it appeared to be a distinct possibility, especially since neither Don Cardwell nor Bob Anderson had been effective in spring training.

There is one other aspect about the 1961 Cubs that must also be mentioned: The Cubs now have excellent 3-4-5 power in Rookie Williams, Ernie Banks and Santo, who have been batting in that order all spring. It's too early to tell, of course, but this triumvirate could finish the season with an accumulative total of 80 homers and 300 RBIs.

Santo, Williams Best Hitters

Poppycock you say? Well, then hear this: Williams and Santo, both sound hitters, were the club's Cactus League leaders in RBIs, Williams driving in 18 runs and Santo 15.

Banks missed six successive games because of a puffed left knee, but certainly another big year can be expected for him: He has had 40 or more homers each of the last four seasons, during which time he has batted in 491 runs.

Furthermore, the Cubs have excellent 1-2 men in Richie Ashburn and Don Zimmer. Both have had outstanding springs, especially Ashburn, who hit .440 in Arizona and was on base 60 per cent of the time.

Cub Chatter: Southpaw Jack Curtis was voted the outstanding spring-training rookie and received a plaque from the sponsoring Ho-Ho-Kams in home plate ceremonies prior to the April 4 finale here against the Los Angeles Angels. . . . Scout Lenny Merullo, the one-time Cub shortstop, was in camp throughout the entire spring training program and also stopped off in Chicago for the two-game city series against the cross-town White Sox which concluded the exhibition season. . . . Jim McKnight, the second baseman acquired from the Cardinals in the Moose Moryn deal, was optioned to Houston, reducing the roster to 27.

Cubs Planning to Use Mesa as Training Camp Next Year

CHICAGO, Ill. — Although the Cubs haven't announced it officially, they plan to return to Mesa, Ariz., for spring training in 1962.

John Holland, Bruin vice-president, said he'll send the Wrigley Field groundskeeper, Pete Marcantonio, to Mesa after the season to remake the infield.

"The infield out there is too hard," Holland said. "That accounts for the number of injuries we've had." As examples, he cited the cases of several players who suffered sprains.

"The thing we want to do," he added, "is make the field softer."

Wrigley Hands Himsl Job as Bruin First Head Coach

Vedie to Direct Club Two Weeks—Win, Lose or Draw; Selection Announced in Airplane Press Conference

By JERRY HOLTZMAN

CHICAGO, Ill.

To Avitus (Vedie) Himsl, one-time minor league pitcher and a major league coach since last May, went the distinction of being selected as the first head coach in all of major league history. Announcement that Himsl would be in charge of the managerless Cubs when they open the National League season was made on April 6 by Club Vice-President John Holland who emphasized that Himsl's head-coaching reign would extend for only two weeks—"even if the Cubs are unbeaten at that time."

Vedie Himsl

Holland broke the news in a most unusual press conference held in the aisles of a chartered DC-6, which was carrying the club to Houston, Tex., immediately after an exhibition game with the Red Sox in San Antonio. Holland said he had received a call from Owner P. K. Wrigley during the ninth inning of the game and that Wrigley wanted Himsl's selection made known as soon as possible.

Holland stressed, ". . . . that Mr. Wrigley had chosen Himsl in recognition of his (Himsl's) seniority . . . and for his long and devoted service to the club."

Asked if he personally had recommended Himsl, Holland replied: "No, it was Mr. Wrigley who suggested him. He asked me what I thought. I said it was an excellent suggestion."

Holland emphasized that Himsl will be in charge of the team only once the game begins. The other coaches will have a vote as to the naming of the starting lineups and as to the pitching rotation. However, Himsl will answer to no one once the first ball is pitched. It is he who will decide on pinch-hitters, the removing of pinch-hitters, etc.

Since Himsl is a pitching coach, Holland said that he will be replaced on the parent club by Goldie Holt, another pitching coach. Holt was originally ticketed to open the season as a pitching instructor at San Antonio (Texas) where Rip Collins, still another Cub coach, has been assigned as head coach.

Vedie to Lead Cubs for Only Two Weeks

Himsl, 44, will leave the Cubs after the first two weeks of the N. L. season and will be then dispatched to the minor leagues — either to San Antonio or Wenatchee (Northwest), which are Cub farm teams. After Himsl departs, either Holt or Fred Martin, still another pitching coach, will be with the Cubs.

Himsl, whose previous managerial experience was limited to two seasons in Class D, has been with the Cubs since 1952, primarily as a scout and as a farm system trouble-shooter. His only previous major league experience was as a coach—the 139 games he served as an aid to Lou Boudreau last year.

A native of Plevna, Mont., Himsl was a righthanded pitcher for five seasons, never rising above Triple-A. He was signed to a Beaumont (Texas) contract by the Detroit Tigers in December, 1937, but was sent to Alexandria (Evangeline), where he spent the entire 1938 season.

Judge Kenesaw Mountain Landis, then Commissioner of Baseball, declared him a free agent after the '38 campaign when he discovered that the Tigers didn't reimburse Himsl according to his original contract. Himsl was to be paid at the rate of $200 a month; instead he received only $125.

Declared a free agent, Himsl then signed with St. Paul (American Association) and pitched for the Saints for four seasons, from 1939 through 1942. His won-and-lost records were 10-9, 12-15, 13-15 and 16-13. He managed for the Cardinals two seasons, in 1950 and 1951, piloting the Redbirds' Hamilton (Pony) farm to third and fourth-place finishes.

Drabowsky, Sold to Braves, 'Felt That I Didn't Fit In'

MESA, Ariz.—Moe Drabowsky, who received $50,000 when he signed with the Cubs five years ago, accepted philosophically his sale to the Braves on March 31.

"I've been expecting it," said the hurler who was swapped along with Pitcher Seth Morehead for Infielders Andre Rodgers and Daryl Robertson. "I could tell that I just didn't fit in with the Cubs."

The righthander won 13 games for the Bruins in '57, but then was able to notch only 17 more victories the next three seasons, when he was handicapped by a sore arm. HOLTZMAN.

Corsairs Jolt Spring Rivals in All-Out Drive to Prove They Deserved '60 Title

By LES BIEDERMAN

SAN FRANCISCO, Calif.

The Dodgers drew all the rave notices because of their potential, but the Pirates came out of Florida and into the 1961 National League race with the best-balanced team in the circuit.

The World's Series champions had only one idea in mind: To get off to a fast start against the Giants and Dodgers before returning home.

The Bucs came to Florida late in February in a determined frame of mind and to prove conclusively they won the pennant and the World's Series on merit. And those who saw the Pirates in the Grapefruit Circuit came away convinced this team was good in 1960 and could be as great, if not better, in 1961.

As usual, the Bucs mopped up in citrus competition, but this time they were proudly defending their title as world's champions and doing a first-class job on every team they faced.

The climax to the Pirates' training grind came in the two games with the Yankees. The Bucs had heard disparaging remarks all winter long and they played the Yankees this spring as though this were the World's Series all over again.

Danny Tries Psychology

Danny Murtaugh used a bit of psychology in allowing Bob Friend to start in the first skirmish with the Yankees, and Friend became the first Pirate pitcher to go the route. The Yanks kayoed him twice as a starter and once in relief in the Series and Friend brooded over it all winter long.

Friend held an 8 to 0 lead before he gave up the first Yankee homer. In the fourth inning, with a 1 to 0 lead, Bob gave the Yankees a taste of his strength. Tony Kubek doubled and took third with none out on an error. Then Mickey Mantle popped up, Roger Maris flied to short center and Moose Skowron fanned.

In the second encounter with the Yankees, Harvey Haddix held them to three hits and an unearned run in six innings at St. Petersburg, then turned over the job of protecting a 4 to 1 lead to Rookie Earl Francis, who gave two hits and an unearned run.

Ralph Terry, who delivered the home-run pitch to Bill Mazeroski that ended the World's Series, retired the first 13 Pirates before the Bucs crashed through for five hits and four runs.

The Pirates will go into the 1961 race with a better team than in 1960 because of the addition of Bobby Shantz in the bull pen, the fact that Vinegar Bend Mizell and Clem Labine will be available all year and the sweet smell of $ucce$$ accumulating from the pennant and the Series spoils.

Physically, the Pirates are in excellent condition because of the intensive workouts and the fine weather. The only injury in camp all spring happened to Don Hoak a week before leaving Florida.

A ground ball struck Hoak on the left ankle and a blood clot formed. He was rushed to the Fort Myers Hospital for X-rays, but the pictures were negative and Hoak was rested for a few days.

First Six Games on Coast

The Pirates realize they must be in top form the first week of the season because of the six-game schedule in California. If they can come out of San Francisco and Los Angeles with a head start, they could slow down the other contenders in a hurry.

Bob Friend, Vern Law and Vinegar Bend Mizell will be the three starters and Harvey Haddix will be a spot starter. Then there's Tom Cheney, Joe Gibbon or Jim Umbricht to step in.

The Pirates are loaded. This definitely is the team to beat.

Pirate Scoreboard: Fewer than 30 fans turned up with cameras on the Pirates' first Camera Day promotion at Fort Myers, March 30, against the Phils. . . . The game drew 1,137. . . . Less than a week before, the Bucs gave out souvenir World's Series programs as a gate lure, but only 1,303 paid to get in to see the Phils. . . . Dick Gray, although on the Columbus (International) roster, was the star batter in the Pirate training camp and was told he was going back to Columbus when he boasted a .444 average. . . . Dr. Joseph Finegold, Pirate team physician who has been in spring training for six weeks, said the world's champions are in the best physical condition he's ever seen them. He said he had less to do this spring than in any other year. . . . Vern Law went from 207 pounds to 197 when he pitched nine innings for the first time, March 30, against the Phils on a hot afternoon. . . . Curt Raydon and Al Jackson also were sent back to Columbus. . . . The Pirates have purchased "three-suiter" traveling bags for the players this year. . . . Joe Gibbon turned in four perfect innings in a relief job in the only game the Pirates won from the Cardinals out of three played this spring. . . . Bill Mazeroski speaks up much more than he first did when he arrived with the Pirates, but he's still one of the quietest members of the team. His Series heroics forced him into the banquet league, and it wasn't as bad as he feared it would be. Bill's "secret" for making public speaking easier: "I don't talk long."

Bucs Trim Three, Reduce Roster to 28-Player Limit

FORT MYERS, Fla.—Manager Danny Murtaugh made the final cut in his Pirate squad before leaving Fort Myers, Fla., shipping three players to Columbus of the International League and getting down to the 28-player limit.

Pitchers Tom Parsons and Earl Francis and Outfielder Henry Mitchell joined the Jets, along with Pitcher Diomedes Olivo, who was working out with the Bucs this spring. BIEDERMAN.

Young Fireballer May Stick After Leap From Class B; Jerry Cops Job With Bat

By DOUG BROWN

BALTIMORE, Md.

As the Orioles prepared to tackle the Los Angeles Angels on opening day, observers noted, in retrospect, that spring training provided very few surprises as far as the Birds were concerned.

The makeup of the team is just about as expected. This is understandable in view of the fact that so many youngsters established themselves last year. There simply wasn't room for many newcomers this spring.

Most of the problems that confronted Manager Paul Richards when he left his home in Waxahachie, Tex., in February have not been resolved. But then he really didn't expect that they would be.

There were a couple of surprises, however.

Foremost among these was the pitching of 21-year-old John Papa. Last year, the hard-throwing righthander posted a 7-6 record with Class B Fox Cities (Three I), yet now he is threatening to stick with the club.

Papa Acquires Control

Control was the key to Papa's rapid advancement. He acquired it by changing to a more rhythmic pitching motion, and he caught on so quickly that some think he will be the righthanded Steve Barber of 1961. Barber was a loser in Class D in 1959, a winner in the majors last year.

Far less dramatic, but mildly surprising, nevertheless, was the hitting of Jerry Adair.

Richards said at the outset of spring training that if Adair indicated he would hit enough so that the team wouldn't break stride when he was playing, he would be retained as the utility infielder.

Everyone knew Adair was a skillful fielder whether playing shortstop, second base or third. But would he hit? He presented strong evidence that he will. After 23 exhibition games, Jerry was batting .317 and had two home runs. The utility job will be his this year.

Walker Flashes Old Form

Richards also is pleased by the apparent recovery of Jerry Walker. Beset by a number of ailments last season, including an allergy to his wife's bath powder, Walker won only three games after posting 11 victories in 1959.

But, this spring, Jerry was one of the most effective pitchers in camp, leading observers to believe that he has recaptured his 1957 form.

The Orioles will need a sound Walker if Chuck Estrada does not come around soon. An 18-game winner as a rookie last year, Estrada developed a sore elbow shortly after arriving in camp. The soreness left about two weeks ago, but he still was being hit hard. Naturally, Richards is concerned.

The other pitchers have come along more or less as expected. Milt Pappas, Jack Fisher, Steve Barber, Skinny Brown and Hoyt Wilhelm have shown signs they will be as effective as they were in 1960.

The four infielders, Brooks Robinson, Ron Hansen, Marv Breeding and Jim Gentile, are still hitting with vigor.

Hansen worked out the kinks from his Army hitch with surprising speed. He didn't check into camp until March 17, but within two weeks he seemed to get his batting eye. One player remarked:

"Hansen just might be the Most Valuable Player in the American League this year. His batting stroke is smoother than it was last year and, more important, he is hitting the breaking ball better."

While the infield is set, the outfield is still a problem. There is a woeful lack of power.

Deal With A's Falls Through

Until recently, the Orioles entertained hopes of acquiring a righthanded-hitting outfielder with modest power from the Kansas City A's. The Birds were interested in Dick Williams or Bill Tuttle, while the A's wanted Walker or Fisher.

However, after weeks of haggling with Frank Lane in Florida, Richards and President Lee MacPhail couldn't agree on a trade.

Gus Triandos was somewhat of a disappointment in spring training. With only a few exhibition games remaining, the veteran catcher was batting .178, with no homers.

Triandos insists his right hand, injured in 1959 and operated on last spring, does not bother him, so Richards is not unduly concerned.

"This could be the best thing that could happen to him," Richards said. "He may snap out of it just as the season opens."

Bird Seed: Jim Gentile was excused from one game to make a hair tonic commercial. . . . Pitchers Arne Thorsland and George Stepanovich, Catcher Chuck Staniland and Infielder Bob Saverine were assigned to the Orioles' Double-A Little Rock (Southern Association) farm club. . . . Jack Fisher, complaining of being tired, was given a complete physical examination and found to be okay. . . . Earl Robinson had a big day in the Orioles' 11 to 5 win over the Chicago White Sox, April 2. The young outfielder drove in six runs with two homers, one with the bases loaded, and a single. . . . Jerry Adair clouted a grand-slam in the Birds' 11 to 10 loss to the A's, April 4.

Gentile Tosses Tantrum—'Ump Called Me a Clown'

BALTIMORE, Md.—First Baseman Jim Gentile flew into his first rage of 1961 in a game with the White Sox, April 2.

After Gus Triandos took a called third strike, Gentile chided Plate Umpire Al Smith as he loped onto the field to take his position.

"Low and away," he said.

"He called me a clown," Gentile recalled. "And he kept calling me a clown. When he said it the third time, I got mad."

That he did. At length he was thrown out of the game. Until then, Manager Paul Richards was the only man on the club who had been ejected this spring.

TUCSON, Ariz.

Manager Jimmie Dykes led his Cleveland Indians eastward from spring training convinced he had a pennant contender.

Citing pitching, strength down the middle and a power-hitting No. 1 catcher as his reasons, Dykes insisted the Indians had as good a chance as anyone of upending the defending champion New York Yankees.

Dykes, whose frank optimism has been the trademark of the Indians' fifteenth year of training in Tucson, said only "unforeseen accidents" and a "complete batting collapse" can keep the Tribe out of the American League race.

"Barring such unforeseen developments, we have as much chance as anyone in the league to beat those guys," Dykes said as he reported on the Tribe's progress just before breaking camp here on April 6.

He said his pitching staff ranked with any in the league and was stronger than most.

"We've known all along that pitching was our strong point and spring training proved it as far as I'm concerned," Dykes declared.

Perry No. 1 Tribe Twirler

"We've said all along that Jim Perry would be our opening-day pitcher in Detroit, but we've been getting good work out of three other guys—Gary Bell, Johnny Antonelli and Jim Grant.

"Bell was supposed to be a big 'if' when he came to camp. Yet he took his time working his sore shoulder into playing shape and now he's been about as effective as any pitcher we have."

Bell left Tucson with 15 innings to his credit. The only earned runs off him came on a two-run homer by San Francisco's Bob Farley.

As far as Dykes is concerned, the only pitching disappointment came from the elbow injury to Lefthander Dick Stigman, a second-year pitcher who was being counted on for relief duty. Stigman, 5-11 last year, threw out his elbow on a curve against the Red Sox, March 15, and finally had to be sent to the Tribe's minor league base at Daytona Beach, Fla. While he wasn't taken off the roster, indications are that he will be placed on the disabled list for an automatic 30-day period.

"We had a few 'ifs' when we came to camp, but a lot of them have worked themselves out," Dykes declared.

"Bell, for instance. Then there was Bubba Phillips. He hit .207 last year. We knew he couldn't be that bad. So far, he's had a terrific spring. He's hit everything the pitchers have thrown to him.

"Our biggest 'if' now is Johnny Temple's ankle. He's looked good to me, but I'm going to have to see him in league competition before I'm convinced the ankle is okay."

Temple was sidelined and then sharply handicapped by an ankle injury suffered last May. He got into just 94 games plus four more strictly as a pinch-hitter.

Concern has been shown all spring by both Dykes and Personnel Director Hoot Evers, but Temple is emphatic in his convictions that the ankle, broken according to X-rays taken late in the year, does not bother him in any way.

Held's Knee Apparently Sound

The only other possible infield problem, according to Dykes, is the condition of Shortstop Woodie Held's knee, an injury which goes back many years.

"I'll admit it gave us a few anxious moments early in training, but after he gave it a good rest, Woodie came back strong. It appears okay now," Dykes said.

With Held at short, Temple at second, strong pitching, Johnny Romano behind the plate and Jimmy Piersall in center field, the Indians figure to be as strong as any team down the middle, Dykes said.

Piersall, who along with the Giants' Willie Mays ranks as the most popular player in the Cactus League, has been a fielding demon. In the final game against the Red Sox in Scottsdale, April 3, he took extra-base hits away from Carroll Hardy, Chuck Schilling and Pumpsie Green with his one-handed stabs after exceptionally long runs.

Romano will be asked to catch 130-135 games, a feat which Dykes believes will give the Tribe at least 25 home runs.

"It's the same old story. The potential to win the pennant is there," Dykes said.

"Now all we have to do is see if it develops."

Tribe Tidbits: The biggest question mark on the pitching staff now is Frank Funk, who was counted on as the No. 1 righthanded reliever. Frank, battling a sore arm, made

Kirkland Dashes From Field Ahead of Pursuing Constable

TUCSON, Ariz.—A Palm Springs constable finally stopped Willie Kirkland, the Cleveland Indians' leading run producer in spring training.

The constable, Howard Poe, appeared in the Tribe's dugout an hour before a game with the Los Angeles Angels in Palm Springs and announced his intention of serving legal papers on Kirkland.

The papers were another step in a paternity suit filed against Kirkland last December in San Francisco.

Kirkland, sitting a few feet from the constable, quietly returned to the dressing room, shucked his uniform and headed back to the motel.

A few minutes later he was in a rented car headed for Indio, Calif., where he boarded a train to Phoenix to await the Tribe two days later.

Tribe officials, who advanced Kirkland $2,000 to make payments in the suit pending its outcome, insist the legal maneuvers will be cleared in time for Willie to play in California, May 23, when the Tribe makes its first visit to Los Angeles. McLEOD.

two Arizona appearances, against the Cubs and Red Sox, and was bombed each time. . . . Two more players were cut when Reserve Infielder Steve Demeter was sold outright to Toronto (International) and Allen Jones was made a bull-pen catcher. Jones, who signed with Cleveland when he was 16 years old in 1948, was happy with his appointment. He had been in the minors for ten seasons. . . . Dykes was particularly happy with the pitching of Bobby Allen, a lefthander trying to make the jump from Mobile (Southern) after a 16-11 season. Allen figures to be the No. 1 lefty reliever. . . . The Indians ended the Arizona part of the 28-year series with [illegible] two games behind. The series stands 178-181-6. . . . A foul ball off the bat of Johnny Temple broke the windshield of Jackie Jensen's Cadillac at Scottsdale. . . . When the Indians-Cubs game was cancelled in Tucson, March 30, it was only the third time in 15 years of training at Hi Corbett Field that rain had stopped a game. Once the game was called, the sun came out and the Tribe held a two-hour workout. . . . Final Tucson attendance figures for 11 games have not been released, but it appeared the Indians averaged about 2,600 per game. . . . Four players not on the Tribe's 25-man roster went east with the team and at least three of them may be added. They are Pitchers Steve Hamilton, Don Schaeffer and Russ Heman and Shortstop Jack Kubiszyn.

since the fans there were used to good National League teams."

Take the Dodgers, for example, in the matter of withholding 15 men from the first Houston-New York draft. Suppose this no-sale group included Pitchers Stan Williams, Don Drysdale, Larry Sherry, Stan Koufax and Rookies Jim Golden and Phil Ortega. Rounding out the 15 would certainly be Willie and Tom Davis in the outfield, Infielder Charlie Smith and such holdovers as Catcher John Roseboro, Rookie Frank Howard and Infielders Maury Wills and Charley Neal. There are 13, with maybe a couple more to be added this year.

Who does that leave for the $150,000 (or thereabouts) draft? Pitcher Roger Craig and Infielders Larker and Gilliam, among others; Outfielders Moon and Duke Snider, and Utilityman Gil Hodges.

Some old, some fairly new, but maybe cheap at the price because this will be one case in which necessity can't mother efficient invention.

Other clubs will be similarly stripped of name men. "We can't afford to just add two tail-end teams," the man said.

"They must be given the same chance as the rest of us."

ANYONE FOR A NO-HITTER?

In 1960 just 3 no-hitters were pitched in the majors. A no-hitter calls for perfect pitching—and perfect defense. Few have been achieved without a spectacular catch or two. The lively ball hasn't made fielding any easier—but the modern glove has made it better. For over four decades Rawlings has been the leader in glove design and improvement. Next game you see, notice how often you glimpse that Rawlings red label on the glove that makes the big play. The pros know Rawlings makes the gloves that make the difference.

Warren Spahn

Lew Burdette

Don Cardwell

1960's three no-hit pitchers are all Rawlings glove men.

Players named are members of Rawlings Advisory Staff.

SHOWN ABOVE are baseball's finest gloves—the TG15 and TG12 TRAP-EZE® gloves, the XPG3 and MMP fielders gloves; the RL catchers mitt and the TMH first base mitt. All of the gloves carry the "Heart of the Hide" symbol, identifying the world's finest gloves. Note, too, the U-shaped Edge-U-Cated heel (Pat. No. 188,307) on the fielders gloves. It's a new kind of heel that gives you superb glove control and feel.

"The Finest In The Field!"

Cactus Champ Cubs Boast They'll Shed Doormat Role

Tappe Convinced Club Can Take Fifth or Sixth and May Even Rise to Fourth

By JERRY HOLTZMAN

CHICAGO, Ill.

The Chicago Cubs, most of whom had over two months of intensive spring training exercises, were eagerly awaiting the opening bell, especially after they'd won the Cactus League championship with an 11-8 record. The unanimous sentiment is that the club is considerably improved over last year, when the Wrigleys staggered home seventh, 35 games off the pennant pace.

Elvin Tappe, the only one of the Bruins' nine coaches who was a coach in spring training last year, said he was convinced that the team would be able to finish fifth or sixth, and possibly wind up as high as fourth place. Said Tappe: "We won't be beating ourselves this year."

There was no doubt that the Cubs, as a unit, have been unusually alert during spring training. They are much improved in fundamentals, offense and defense. Catchers now look for men to pick off base, the pitchers back up virtually every play, and the outfielders have been hitting the cut-off man with regularity—maneuvers previously foreign to the club.

The pre-season optimism has also been based on the fine spring performances of several of the younger players, notably Third Baseman Ron Santo, Right Fielder Billy Williams and Dick Ellsworth, the 21-year-old southpaw and one-time $50,000 bonus boy.

Ellsworth had a 7-13 record last year but was the team's most impressive Cactus League moundsman. He averaged better than one strikeout per inning and had fanned 30 batters in 28⅔ innings while giving only 11 bases on balls.

Baffled Red Sox Batters

Now the No. 2 man on the staff behind Glen Hobbie, Ellsworth was particularly impressive in a four-inning stint against the Red Sox on April 2, when he yielded only two hits while striking out eight.

Ellsworth's big improvement can be traced to the fact that he has been getting the ball over the plate. He has had excellent control of both his curve and fast ball. Moreover, his hook is considerably improved and has a shorter and quicker break.

Dick Drott, hoping for a comeback, also did well in the exhibition season. He worked seven strong innings in Mesa on April 4 when the Cubs beat the Angels, 4 to 3, in their last Arizona appearance. Drott was nicked for three runs in the first, but proceeded to pitch six scoreless innings.

It was his longest stint since 1959 and certainly earned him consideration as a rotation starter along with Hobbie, Ellsworth and Jack Curtis, the fine rookie southpaw. The coaches were noncommital about this, but it appeared to be a distinct possibility, especially since neither Don Cardwell nor Bob Anderson had been effective in spring training.

There is one other aspect about the 1961 Cubs that must also be mentioned: The Cubs now have excellent 3-4-5 power in Rookie Williams, Ernie Banks and Santo, who have been batting in that order all spring. It's too early to tell, of course, but this triumvirate could finish the season with an accumulative total of 80 homers and 300 RBIs.

Santo, Williams Best Hitters

Poppycock you say? Well, then hear this: Williams and Santo, both sound hitters, were the club's Cactus League leaders in RBIs, Williams driving in 18 runs and Santo 15.

Banks missed six successive games because of a puffed left knee, but certainly another big year can be expected for him: He has had 40 or more homers each of the last four seasons, during which time he has batted in 491 runs.

Furthermore, the Cubs have excellent 1-2 men in Richie Ashburn and Don Zimmer. Both have had outstanding springs, especially Ashburn, who hit .440 in Arizona and was on base 60 per cent of the time.

Cub Chatter: Southpaw Jack Curtis was voted the outstanding spring-training rookie and received a plaque from the sponsoring Ho-Ho-Kams in home plate ceremonies prior to the April 4 finale here against the Los Angeles Angels. . . . Scout Lenny Merullo, the one-time Cub shortstop, was in camp throughout the entire spring training program and also stopped off in Chicago for the two-game city series against the cross-town White Sox which concluded the exhibition season. . . . Jim McKnight, the second baseman acquired from the Cardinals in the Moose Moryn deal, was optioned to Houston, reducing the roster to 27.

Cubs Planning to Use Mesa as Training Camp Next Year

CHICAGO, Ill. — Although the Cubs haven't announced it officially, they plan to return to Mesa, Ariz., for spring training in 1962.

John Holland, Bruin vice-president, said he'll send the Wrigley Field groundskeeper, Pete Marcantonio, to Mesa after the season to remake the infield.

"The infield out there is too hard," Holland said. "That accounts for the number of injuries we've had." As examples, he cited the cases of several players who suffered sprains.

"The thing we want to do," he added, "is make the field softer."

Wrigley Hands Himsl Job as Bruin First Head Coach

Vedie to Direct Club Two Weeks—Win, Lose or Draw; Selection Announced in Airplane Press Conference

By JERRY HOLTZMAN

CHICAGO, Ill.

To Avitus (Vedie) Himsl, one-time minor league pitcher and a major league coach since last May, went the distinction of being selected as the first head coach in all of major league history. Announcement that Himsl would be in charge of the managerless Cubs when they open the National League season was made on April 6 by Club Vice-President John Holland who emphasized that Himsl's head-coaching reign would extend for only two weeks—"even if the Cubs are unbeaten at that time."

Vedie Himsl

Holland broke the news in a most unusual press conference held in the aisles of a chartered DC-6, which was carrying the club to Houston, Tex., immediately after an exhibition game with the Red Sox in San Antonio. Holland said he had received a call from Owner P. K. Wrigley during the ninth inning of the game and that Wrigley wanted Himsl's selection made known as soon as possible.

Holland stressed, ". . . . that Mr. Wrigley had chosen Himsl in recognition of his (Himsl's) seniority . . . and for his long and devoted service to the club."

Asked if he personally had recommended Himsl, Holland replied: "No, it was Mr. Wrigley who suggested him. He asked me what I thought. I said it was an excellent suggestion."

Holland emphasized that Himsl will be in charge of the team only once the game begins. The other coaches will have a vote as to the naming of the starting lineups and as to the pitching rotation. However, Himsl will answer to no one once the first ball is pitched. It is he who will decide on pinch-hitters, the removing of pinch-hitters, etc.

Since Himsl is a pitching coach, Holland said that he will be replaced on the parent club by Goldie Holt, another pitching coach. Holt was originally ticketed to open the season as a pitching instructor at San Antonio (Texas) where Rip Collins, still another Cub coach, has been assigned as head coach.

Vedie to Lead Cubs for Only Two Weeks

Himsl, 44, will leave the Cubs after the first two weeks of the N. L. season and will be then dispatched to the minor leagues — either to San Antonio or Wenatchee (Northwest), which are Cub farm teams. After Himsl departs, either Holt or Fred Martin, still another pitching coach, will be with the Cubs.

Himsl, whose previous managerial experience was limited to two seasons in Class D, has been with the Cubs since 1952, primarily as a scout and as a farm system trouble-shooter. His only previous major league experience was as a coach—the 139 games he served as an aid to Lou Boudreau last year.

A native of Plevna, Mont., Himsl was a righthanded pitcher for five seasons, never rising above Triple-A. He was signed to a Beaumont (Texas) contract by the Detroit Tigers in December, 1937, but was sent to Alexandria (Evangeline), where he spent the entire 1938 season.

Judge Kenesaw Mountain Landis, then Commissioner of Baseball, declared him a free agent after the '38 campaign when he discovered that the Tigers didn't reimburse Himsl according to his original contract. Himsl was to be paid at the rate of $200 a month; instead he received only $125.

Declared a free agent, Himsl then signed with St. Paul (American Association) and pitched for the Saints for four seasons, from 1939 through 1942. His won-and-lost records were 10-9, 12-15, 13-15 and 16-13. He managed for the Cardinals two seasons, in 1950 and 1951, piloting the Redbirds' Hamilton (Pony) farm to third and fourth-place finishes.

Drabowsky, Sold to Braves, 'Felt That I Didn't Fit In'

MESA, Ariz.—Moe Drabowsky, who received $50,000 when he signed with the Cubs five years ago, accepted philosophically his sale to the Braves on March 31.

"I've been expecting it," said the hurler who was swapped along with Pitcher Seth Morehead for Infielders Andre Rodgers and Daryl Robertson. "I could tell that I just didn't fit in with the Cubs."

The righthander won 13 games for the Bruins in '57, but then was able to notch only 17 more victories the next three seasons, when he was handicapped by a sore arm. HOLTZMAN.

Big, Bold Bucs Rip 'Fluke Champ' Tag

Corsairs Jolt Spring Rivals in All-Out Drive to Prove They Deserved '60 Title

By LES BIEDERMAN

SAN FRANCISCO, Calif.

The Dodgers drew all the rave notices because of their potential, but the Pirates came out of Florida and into the 1961 National League race with the best-balanced team in the circuit.

The World's Series champions had only one idea in mind: To get off to a fast start against the Giants and Dodgers before returning home.

The Bucs came to Florida late in February in a determined frame of mind and to prove conclusively they won the pennant and the World's Series on merit. And those who saw the Pirates in the Grapefruit Circuit came away convinced this team was good in 1960 and could be as great, if not better, in 1961.

As usual, the Bucs mopped up in citrus competition, but this time they were proudly defending their title as world's champions and doing a first-class job on every team they faced.

The climax to the Pirates' training grind came in the two games with the Yankees. The Bucs had heard disparaging remarks all winter long and they played the Yankees this spring as though this were the World's Series all over again.

Danny Tries Psychology

Danny Murtaugh used a bit of psychology in allowing Bob Friend to start in the first skirmish with the Yankees, and Friend became the first Pirate pitcher to go the route. The Yanks kayoed him twice as a starter and once in relief in the Series and Friend brooded over it all winter long.

Friend held an 8 to 0 lead before he gave up the first Yankee homer. In the fourth inning, with a 1 to 0 lead, Bob gave the Yankees a taste of his strength. Tony Kubek doubled and took third with none out on an error. Then Mickey Mantle popped up, Roger Maris flied to short center and Moose Skowron fanned.

In the second encounter with the Yankees, Harvey Haddix held them to three hits and an unearned run in six innings at St. Petersburg, then turned over the job of protecting a 4 to 1 lead to Rookie Earl Francis, who gave two hits and an unearned run.

Ralph Terry, who delivered the home-run pitch to Bill Mazeroski that ended the World's Series, retired the first 13 Pirates before the Bucs crashed through for five hits and four runs.

The Pirates will go into the 1961 race with a better team than in 1960 because of the addition of Bobby Shantz in the bull pen, the fact that Vinegar Bend Mizell and Clem Labine will be available all year and the sweet smell of $ucce$$ accumulating from the pennant and the Series spoils.

Physically, the Pirates are in excellent condition because of the intensive workouts and the fine weather. The only injury in camp all spring happened to Don Hoak a week before leaving Florida.

A ground ball struck Hoak on the left ankle and a blood clot formed. He was rushed to the Fort Myers Hospital for X-rays, but the pictures were negative and Hoak was rested for a few days.

First Six Games on Coast

The Pirates realize they must be in top form the first week of the season because of the six-game schedule in California. If they can come out of San Francisco and Los Angeles with a head start, they could slow down the other contenders in a hurry.

Bob Friend, Vern Law and Vinegar Bend Mizell will be the three starters and Harvey Haddix will be a spot starter. Then there's Tom Cheney, Joe Gibbon or Jim Umbricht to step in.

The Pirates are loaded. This definitely is the team to beat.

Pirate Scoreboard: Fewer than 30 fans turned up with cameras on the Pirates' first Camera Day promotion at Fort Myers, March 30, against the Phils. . . . The game drew 1,137. . . . Less than a week before, the Bucs gave out souvenir World's Series programs as a gate lure, but only 1,303 paid to get in to see the Phils. . . . Dick Gray, although on the Columbus (International) roster, was the star batter in the Pirate training camp and was told he was going back to Columbus when he boasted a .444 average. . . . Dr. Joseph Finegold, Pirate team physician who has been in spring training for six weeks, said the world's champions are in the best physical condition he's ever seen them. He said he had less to do this spring than in any other year. . . . Vern Law went from 207 pounds to 197 when he pitched nine innings for the first time, March 30, against the Phils on a hot afternoon. . . . Curt Raydon and Al Jackson also were sent back to Columbus. . . . The Pirates have purchased "three-suiter" traveling bags for the players this year. . . . Joe Gibbon turned in four perfect innings in a relief job in the only game the Pirates won from the Cardinals out of three played this spring. . . . Bill Mazeroski speaks up much more than he first did when he arrived with the Pirates, but he's still one of the quietest members of the team. His Series heroics forced him into the banquet league, and it wasn't as bad as he feared it would be. Bill's "secret" for making public speaking easier: "I don't talk long."

Bucs Trim Three, Reduce Roster to 28-Player Limit

FORT MYERS, Fla.—Manager Danny Murtaugh made the final cut in his Pirate squad before leaving Fort Myers, Fla., shipping three players to Columbus of the International League and getting down to the 28-player limit.

Pitchers Tom Parsons and Earl Francis and Outfielder Henry Mitchell joined the Jets, along with Pitcher Diomedes Olivo, who was working out with the Bucs this spring. BIEDERMAN.

Majors' Week-End Games on CBS and NBC Video Nets

By OSCAR KAHAN

ST. LOUIS, Mo.

After ten years of daily coverage of major league action, the Mutual Broadcasting System has dropped its radio "Game of the Day" program for 1961 and the American Broadcasting Company, after one season in the field, has given up its Saturday afternoon telecasts. But the fans from coast to coast, except in major league areas or in minor league cities when local games are in progress, still will be able to view week-end contests on the television networks of the Columbia Broadcasting System and the National Broadcasting Company.

NBC-TV started its major league screenings with Saturday games in 1957 and expanded to include Sunday attractions in 1959. This year, the networks will offer a total of 50 games covering every Saturday and Sunday of the season.

Anheuser-Busch, Inc., will be an NBC-TV sponsor for its Busch Bavarian Beer, through the Gardner Advertising Company, in the Busch Bavarian sales territory.

This will be the seventh season of baseball telecasts by CBS-TV, which started with a schedule of Saturday games in 1955 and then added Sunday contests in 1958.

The network will present 47 games this year over a period of 25 Saturdays and 22 Sundays, with the Falstaff Brewing Corporation, represented by Dancer-Fitzgerald-Sample, Inc., as a sponsor in the brewery's marketing areas. The Saturday telecasts will extend through September 30, but the Sunday coverage will end on September 10.

There will be one new voice and face on the telecasting teams. Joe Garagiola, commentator on the Cardinals' radio broadcasts, will make his debut on NBC-TV as a partner of Linsdey Nelson, replacing Fred Haney, now the general manager of the new Angels. Garagiola will continue with the Cardinals for their Monday-to-Friday games, although he may miss some Friday broadcasts because of travel arrangements for his new NBC-TV job.

CBS-TV again will have Dizzy Dean and Pee Wee Reese at the microphone. In addition, six standby announcers have been named by Bill MacPhail, vice-president of CBS-TV Sports, to handle alternate games for the network in the event of postponements of the regularly-scheduled contests.

They include Frankie Frisch, Hall of Fame infielder and former manager of the Cardinals, Pirates and Cubs, and Russ Meyer, who pitched for the Cubs, Phillies, Dodgers, Reds and Red Sox. The four others are regular sportscasters—Jack Whitaker of WCAU-TV, Philadelphia; Bob Finnegan of WCFL, Chicago; John FitzGerald of WJW, Cleveland, and Darrell Parks of WKRC, Cincinnati.

Braves-Cubs and Reds-Cards Lead Off

ST. LOUIS, Mo.—The telecasting schedule of CBS-TV and NBC-TV for the first week-end of the season, April 15-16, was announced as follows by the two networks (all times Eastern Daylight):

*Varies from 5'4½" to 3'5" in right; 37'2" wall in left topped by 23' screen (balls hit into screen are homers).
§Screen 20 feet high in right field extends 101 feet from line; remainder of right field has 9-foot barrier.

5 Clubs Revamp HR Targets

Five clubs revamped the contour of their outfield fences or otherwise altered the home-run targets in their parks since last season.

Three American League clubs made changes—and in each instance home runs will be more difficult as a result. By contrast, the two National League changes are designed to boost home-run output.

In the American League, the new Washington Senators removed the inner fence in left field at Griffith Stadium. This has increased the distance down the line from 350 to 388 feet. Kansas City also has moved back its left field fence, extending the foul line distance from 330 to 370 feet. However, the new left field barrier is only ten feet high instead of 38 as last year.

Detroit is making it tougher for lefty batters with a 20-foot high screen in front of the lower right field stands for a distance of 101 feet from the line.

In the National, the barrier in right-center at Los Angeles has been shortened slightly, while at San Francisco the fence was pulled in everywhere except at the foul lines, reducing the other distances anywhere from ten to around 30 feet.

NOTE—Change in height of wall in Cincinnati and Philadelphia begins in almost direct center; in St. Louis 36' 8" screen in right extends to 354-foot mark in deep right field.

Slab Sizzler Herbert Set for Big Year

Ray and Bud Daley Shape Up as Solid Flingers; Wilks to Tutor A's Youngsters

By ERNEST MEHL

KANSAS CITY, Mo.

Ray Herbert was the mound selection, as had been expected, as the Kansas City Athletics vacated their training quarters in West Palm Beach and flew to Boston for their 1961 opener against the Red Sox. The club's two solid chuckers are Herbert and Bud Daley, and the fact that Herbert is a right-hander made his choice fairly certain. Herbert, last of the pitchers to sign his contract after rather lengthy and sometimes turbulent sessions with Frank Lane, rounded into shape quickly and gave some indication that he could enjoy his best year.

The remainder of the squad of 28 also had been established. One of the last acts was to option Johnny Kucks to Rochester (International). The former Yankee has had trouble effecting a comeback, and there have been various reasons given for his failure.

That he still can make it is the conclusion of the management.

Kucks Flop Big Mystery

Just why a righthander as effective as Kucks was for a couple of seasons with the Yankees could have such trouble regaining his efficiency is a question difficult to answer, and Johnny himself has had a feeling of frustration at times.

He believes he needs to keep his pitches low; when he gets them above the belt, they are belted. At times this spring he threw harder than at any time last year, but some of his former mates believe he should "get a little meaner."

Whatever the reason, there is the hope Johnny will find himself and be back with the A's.

Herbert and Daley will carry the big load this season, but Manager Joe Gordon will have to depend on his youngsters.

With this in mind, the Athletics signed Ted Wilks, who became a successful pitching coach after his active career in the majors, as a tutor for the young hurlers, April 5. Wilks, who pitched for the Cardinals, Pirates and Indians, formerly was a pitching coach for Cleveland.

Hall Tabbed Spot Starter

Dick Hall, the tall righthander who came up with a sore arm last year after a rousing start, will be spotted; Don Larsen will be used for late-inning relief.

Gordon has his hopes and they are tempered somewhat by the situation which prevails among his hurlers. Lack of experience could be the deterring factor for some—for example, in the case of Norm Bass, who was out of action briefly after suffering a broken nose. Bass was added to the roster when his contract was taken over from the farm club at Shreveport (Southern), April 4.

The remainder of the squad has some interesting possibilities. Gordon will start an outfield with Norm Siebern in left, Bill Tuttle in center and Hank Bauer in right. On his infield, he has Andy Carey at third, Dick Howser at short, Jerry Lumpe at second and either Marv Throneberry or Dick Williams at first.

He has a good outfield bench in Jay Hankins and Leo Posada and equally good infield reserves in Bob Boyd, Wayne Causey and Williams.

The catching, with Haywood Sullivan, Joe Pignatano and Clint Courtney, in that order, is rated better than anything the club has had in years.

The exhibition schedule began with the A's winning eight of ten games. Then their pitching faltered and they wound up around the .500 mark. At one point the manager may have been overelated by his young pitching, but some of the joy wore off as the schedule drew to an end.

Even so, all things considered, the Athletics of 1961 are infinitely better than the A's of 1960, a condition largely created by better spirit, a better feeling between the players and the manager.

It was an enjoyable spring training and Gordon got the utmost out of his charges without seeming to drive them.

In the opening-day lineup, there were three not with the club at the start of last season—young Howser at short, Carey at third and Sullivan behind the plate.

Pointer Inks Bonus Pact; Cards Option Cannizzaro

By CLARK NEALON

HOUSTON, Tex.

Houston continued to move forward sharply on two baseball fronts last week, signing three more youthful free agents for the National League future and adding five players to Manager Grady Hatton's American Association Buffs for the opener against Louisville here, April 15.

The spotlighted free agent was 18-year-old First Baseman Aaron Pointer from Oakland, Calif., signed for a substantial bonus by Scout Bobby Mattick. Pointer attended the same school that produced Frank Robinson and Vada Pinson of the Reds and Curt Flood of the Cards. The 6-2, 185-pound, righthanded-hitting Pointer will report to the Salisbury, N. C., club of the Western Carolina League, now in training at the Houston system base in Jacksonville, Fla.

Catcher Terry Curry, ~~19~~-year-old from Mountain Home, Ark., who reported to the Jacksonville camp as a free agent, was signed to a Salisbury contract after scouting by Earl Har-

Elston to Air Buffs' Games; Ex-Voice on 'Game of Day'

HOUSTON, Tex.—Gene Elston, nationally-known sportscaster who was on the Mutual Broadcasting System's "Game of the Day" program for three years, will handle the play-by-play for Houston (American Association) this season, it was announced by General Manager Gabe Paul of the Houston National League Colts, owners of the Buffs.

The selection of Elston for the job puts him in line to air the Colts' games when Houston makes its major league debut in 1962.

Elston was picked in competition with more than 25 other prominent sportscasters.

Loel Passe, Houston's announcer from 1950 to '55, will join Elston on the daily broadcasts of the Buffs' home and road games.

Mitchell Texas Bat King in Freshman Year in O. B.

Oklahoma City Outfielder, Now With Cleveland, Hit .337 to Nose Out Schenz by Four Points

Dale Mitchell

Joining Oklahoma City's Indians direct from the University of Oklahoma campus last June, Outfielder Dale Mitchell vaulted to the 1946 Texas League batting title in his first season in professional ball.

Final official averages just released by the Texas Statistical Bureau reveal the 24-year-old Mitchell hit .337 in 108 games to nose out Tulsa's Henry Schenz by four points for the swat championship. Mitchell, a lefthanded batter, originally was signed by the Cleveland chain late in 1939, but decided to go to college and later entered the service. He joined Cleveland after the close of the Texas League season.

Following Mitchell and Schenz in the averages were Jess Newman, San Antonio, and Mel Duezabou, Oklahoma City, tied at .323, while Tulsa's Clarence Maddern was next with .322.

Mitchell, in copping the batting title, built up his winning margin with a sensational finish that saw him make 21 hits in his last 47 times at bat over 11 games.

Bob Moyer, Dallas first baseman, who is Detroit-bound, stole most of the slugging laurels with 66 extra-bases blows, 280 total bases, 24 home runs and 102 runs-batted-in. Boris Woyt of Fort Worth, with 50 thefts in 115 games, was tops in this department, leading his nearest rival by 18. He was flagged on 15 other attempts.

Other departmental leaders were: Runs—Schenz, 102; hits—Maddern, 184; games played—Moyer and Basgall, Fort Worth, 155; one-base hits—Maddern, 131; two-base hits—Schenz, 44; three-base hits—Ted Sepkowski and Elmer Sidlo, both of Oklahoma City, 13; bases on balls—Newman, 96; sacrifices—Sal Madrid, Tulsa, 20; strikeouts—Madrid, 95; hit by pitcher—Schenz and Low Ruchser, Fort Worth, nine each.

Here are the official figures, compiled by William B. Ruggles:

Nine Grand-Slam Homers Socked in Texas League

Nine grand-slam home runs were hit in the Texas League during 1946.

The lone player to accomplish the feat twice was Bobby Moyer, husky young Dallas first baseman. He hit his first against Les Studener of Houston, July 25, and repeated five days later against Verne Williamson of Shreveport.

Others hitting homers with the sacks filled were Charles Grant, San Antonio; Forest Rogers and Eldon Muratore, Beaumont; Chet Hajduk, Shreveport; Harvey Riebe and Nick Gregory, Dallas, and Bob Gorbould, Fort Worth.

Moyer also was the only player to hit more than two homers in one game. The Dallas slugger had three against Oklahoma City in the first game, June 30.

PAUL T. (TED) SULLIVAN is the new business manager and secretary of the Indianapolis American Association club, succeeding Al Schlensker, who stepped up to the Pittsburgh Pirates as assistant treasurer.

Schlensker was business manager and treasurer of the Indians, but under the new setup Robert Weimer becomes treasurer. Frank McKinney, president and part-owner of the Pirates, remains with Indianapolis as vice-president and Miss Edna Hickey as office secretary.

Harry Jenkins, who was Tribe secretary under the Indianapolis-Boston Braves setup, stays in the Boston farm system. All business and player affiliations between the Indians and Braves will be closed out November 1, when the American Association club changes over to become a Pittsburgh affiliate.

Sullivan has been a personal friend of President Donie Bush for years and served as vice-president of the Richmond club in the Class D Ohio State League the past season. Sullivan is 54 years of age.

Dressen's Tourists Win Cuban Series

Charlie Dressen's National League All-Stars won the series of nine games played with the Cuban Stars, managed by Gilberto Torres of the Washington Senators, in Havana, Cuba, five to four. Following the games, Dressen's stars went to Camaguey to play a team that had won the summer pennant there. With the Havana series tied up in a knot, Kirby Higbe pitched the National League All-Stars to victory in the final game, 6 to 3, allowing only four hits and making two himself. Fermin Guerra of Washington poled two of the safeties off the Dodger hurler.

The previous night, Ralph Branca of Brooklyn was defeated, 7 to 4, all but one of the runs being made off him before Hugh Casey took over in the fifth inning. The victory was the second straight for the Cubans, who gained their third of the series by knocking out Rex Barney with a five-run attack for a 7 to 2 decision, October 16.

Frank McCormick, Phillies' first baseman, and Ray Lamanno, Cincinnati catcher, were the batting stars of the nine-game series. McCormick, although not playing regularly, batted at a .400 clip, while Lamanno made 12 hits in the nine games for a .364 average. Eddie Stanky of Brooklyn, with 13 hits for a .325 average, was next.

Torres hurled two of the Cuban club's victories, while Branca and Higbe of the Dodgers both had two wins against one loss for Dressen's club.

N. L. Tourists Gain Edge on W. Coast

After breaking even in the first 16 games played in the tour that started at Kansas City, Mo., moved westward and worked down along the Pacific Coast, the National League All-Stars took a one-game lead over the American Leaguers in the seventeenth meeting at Oakland, October 19. Mike Budnick of the New York Giants yielded only five hits in the contest, played in one hour and ten minutes, and Max West of the Cincinnati Reds broke a 1 to 1 tie in the seventh inning with a home run.

The Americans had trailed until the teams reached San Francisco, October 16, when they won, 3 to 2, from the Nationals to even the series count at seven-all. The Nationals came back at Sacramento, October 17, for a 5 to 4 triumph, when Charley Schanz of the Phillies, starring in his home city, hurled the victory and batted in the winning run with a single in the sixth inning.

The American League team then drew even again at San Jose, October 18, when Bob Muncrief of the St. Louis Browns scattered ten hits for a 6 to 1 decision, beating Ken Gables of the Pirates, who yielded 11 safeties and was handicapped by four errors behind him.

A home run in the sixth inning by Bill Rigney, New York Giants' infielder, gave Bill Raimondi's All-Stars a 5 to 4 victory over the Cincinnati Crescents at Oakland, Calif., October 17.

Jackie Robinson's All-Stars won two out of three games from Honus Wagner's major leaguers, after dropping the first contest, 10 to 4, at Cincinnati. Robinson's crew won the second tilt 6 to 4, and took the third at Chicago 10 to 5.

New Cuban Loop Formed, In Line With O. B. Ruling

HAVANA, Cuba—Meeting the regulations of Organized Ball, a new professional league has been organized in Cuba. It will use Cubans and Americans from O. B., and Cuban colored players who haven't played in the States, to be known as the National Baseball Federation. It will consist of only three teams this season, including the provinces of Havana, Oriente and Matanzas.

Made up of players who are not affected by Commissioner A. B. Chandler's edict against ineligibles, the Havana club will be managed by Gilberto Torres, Oriente by Fermin Guerra and Mantanzas by Silvio Garcia. Torres and Guerra are Washington players.

The schedule will extend for 75 days with a total of 90 games. The new league was to open its season October 26.

In the meantime, Luis Orlando Rodriguez, Cuban Director General of Sports, was scheduled to visit the United States to confer with Clark Griffith, president of the Washington Senators, and later Commissioner A. B. Chandler, on the "outlawing" of players in the Cuban Winter League.

Texas League an Old Settler in Minors

Four Charter Cities Still Members of Loop Founded in '88

Three States Represented in Late Years

New President, Dick Butler, 21st to Head Circuit; Arc Ball First Played in '30

By WILLIAM B. RUGGLES

DALLAS, Tex.

The Texas League, the host circuit for the National Association's annual meeting at Houston, is one of the oldest of the minor leagues. It has been in operation since 1888 (it was actually formed at a winter meeting in 1887) and, while its playing years do not equal the calendar years since then, the league office and the Association membership have been maintained continuously since 1902, except for a few months in 1918.

In the 67 years since the start in 1888, the Texas League has played 59 seasons. After struggling through the first three years, 1888-89-90, the loop did not operate in 1891, and again suspended play in 1893-94. Then it was out of the picture in 1900-01. After entering the National Association in 1902, the only subsequent break in membership continuity occurred when General Crowder's war year "Work or Fight" order finished off most of the minors in mid-1918. But with the Armistice in November, 1918, the league met promptly for reorganization and came up with a strong front in 1919.

In World War II, there was no Texas League play in 1943-44-45, but the league office was maintained and the annual dues were paid to the National Association. Annual meetings were held in all three years and most of the clubs were represented at the National Association conventions.

'43 Vote Challenged

This war interlude, and the circumstances associated with the maintained membership, furnish a curious item in Association history. The late W. G. Bramham, then president of the National Association, ruled late in 1943 that, as the Texas League was an inoperative circuit, in spite of meeting its obligations to the Association, it was not entitled to vote. The Texas League successfully challenged this ruling. Oddly enough, it was the Texas League vote in his favor that prevented Bramham being ousted from his post.

The idea that resulted in the birth of the Texas League was conceived after the end of the 1897 playing season. That fall, two famous major teams, Charles Comiskey's champion St. Louis Browns and the New York Giants of the National League, toured Texas. At the same time a picturesque minor league club barnstormed the area. This was the Joplin (Mo.) club under the direction of a 26-year-old, black-haired, hustling, ambitious Irishman, John J. McCloskey.

Giants Ran Out on Game

Mostly the two major clubs played local Texas amateur teams, but at Austin an exhibition series was arranged between the Giants and Joplin. Local sportsmen decided the Joplin club could defeat the Giants. The New York club demanded a $1,000 guarantee, the winner to take 65 per cent. The Austin backers agreed to the guarantee, but insisted the winner must take 85 per cent. McCloskey's men won two games, and the Giants did not stay for the third.

Then the idea for a Texas League was born. McCloskey was persuaded to stay and organize the loop. A preliminary meeting was held in Austin, December 17, 1887. Organization actually took place on January 18, 1888, in Houston. The six original member cities were Austin, Dallas, Fort Worth, Galveston, Houston and San Antonio. All did not weather the season and the league itself finally faded out prematurely on September 3, 1888. In June, San Antonio dropped out. Fort Worth disbanded late in June. In July, McCloskey transferred his Austin club to San Antonio.

There were several 1888 Texas League players in the Players' League, a competitive major, in 1889 and six in the National League in 1890. George Stallings, who caught for Galveston that first year, became one of the great managers of major history. So the playing class of that first year in Texas is fully evident.

The first season, unfortunately, was fairly typical of the first decade of efforts to keep the Texas League alive.

Four of the original Texas League cities are still members. Dallas, Fort Worth, Houston and San Antonio usually have constituted the hub for the league wheel. Dallas and Fort Worth have held franchises in every year except one. (This was 1899, when the Texas was a four-club league and operated only in South Texas.)

When the Texas League was reorganized in 1902, to enter the National Association, it was made up only of cities in North and Central Texas. So the following year, a South Texas League was formed, built around Houston, Galveston and San Antonio. The two circuits operated side by side through the 1906 season, then combined in 1907 to form the new Texas League, which has since endured. (The Texas League regards the four-year South Texas as part of its history and accepts its records as Texas marks.)

When the first organization meeting was held in 1887, New Orleans was represented and had it entered, the loop would have been known as the Texas-Southern, a name it did use for one year in 1895. But it started as the Texas League and has held that name almost uniformly since. Paradoxically, however, for the greater part of its existence, the Texas has really been an interstate league.

The only seasons in which there were no non-Texas clubs were 1889-90, 1892, 1896-99, 1902-03, 1905-07 and 1912-14. That is only 16 years out of the 59. From 1915 to date, there has been at least one non-Texas city. Since 1938, there have been three. In fact, from 1938-54, the Texas really has been a Texas - Oklahoma - Louisiana league. But the out-of-state towns have lost no time in steeping themselves in the league's tradition and no one has ever sought to change the name in this century.

Twenty-four cities in the three states have at various times been members of the Texas League proper. The 19 Texas towns have included: Austin, Beaumont, Cleburne, Corsicana, Dallas, Denison, Fort Worth, Galveston, Greenville, Houston, Longview, Paris, San Antonio, Sherman, Temple, Texarkana, Tyler, Waco and Wichita Falls. Oklahoma's three cities have been Ardmore, Oklahoma City and Tulsa; Louisiana's two, New Orleans and Shreveport. Louisiana contributed one town, Lake Charles, to the old South Texas, and Texas an extra, Brenham.

The circuit has passed successively through every classification from D to Double-A. It moved up to a C rating in 1907, to B in 1911, to A in 1921 and to AA in 1946.

Since 1933, the Texas League has used what it now labels the playoff plan (the old Shaughnessy). In the 21 years, some changes have been made and for the last three years the league has had co-champions—the team which finished first in season play and the team which won the playoff. Shreveport finished first in 1954 and Houston won the playoff.

Night ball was first played in the Texas League in 1930, three clubs following pioneer Waco in the use of arcs in the second half that season. However, not until 1946, when Beaumont finally equipped its park for lights, did every club accept the innovation.

If you overlook a faraway game in 1931, when Houston sent up its small colored batboy to pinch-hit on the last day of the season, the loop did not cross the color line until 1952, when the first Negro players were signed by

Rules Revised After Buffs Played Three Games in Day

DALLAS, Tex. — A memorable Texas League occurrence once caused a revision of the rules of baseball.

On the final day of the 1910 season, Houston needed three victories to win the pennant if Dallas won both of its Labor Day games on the same date. Houston had two scheduled games with Galveston and one postponed game. The two clubs agreed to play three five-inning games instead of the customary one nine-inning game and one seven-inning game.

There was nothing in the rule book to prevent it. But as a result, the Rules Committee that winter wrote into the laws of the game that the first game of a doubleheader had to go nine innings, a rule waived only in late years in deference to twilight twin-bills in the minors in which the first game goes seven innings.

John L. Reeves

Pinky 26th Grad to Lead Major Team

DALLAS, Tex. — When Frank (Pinky) Higgins starts the 1955 season as skipper of the Boston Red Sox, he will be the twenty-sixth Texas League player or manager to handle a major league club.

In 1895, eight years after he founded the league, John J. McCloskey as pilot of the Louisville Colonels in the National was the first Texas League contribution. Scrappy Bill Joyce, who held the New York Giants' helm in 1896, was the first player developed in the Texas circuit to direct a major club. Since 1895 there have been only eight years in which no big league club was managed by a Texas League product.

Counting Charlie Grimm and Rogers Hornsby, both of whom returned to major leadership after coming down to handle Texas clubs, eight pilots have graduated to the majors after managing in the Lone Star League—"Honest John" McCloskey, Jewel Ens, Del Baker, Steve O'Neill, Bob Coleman and Zach Taylor.

The 18 big league managers who played earlier in the Texas circuit were Bill Joyce, George Stallings, John Kling, Norman (Kid) Elberfield, Branch Rickey, Walter Blair (a Federal leaguer), William Killefer, Arthur Fletcher, Tris Speaker, Bill Terry, Ray Blades, Jim Bottomley, Eddie Dyer, Hank Gowdy, Babe Herman, Jack Onslow, Birdie Tebbetts and Pinky Higgins.

Butler First Texas Prexy Picked From Outside Loop

Dallas. In 1954 there were still three all-white clubs.

At the Association meeting in Houston, Dick Butler, who was president of the South Atlantic League up to November 1, represents the Texas League as its newly-elected head. President Butler is an innovation, too. He is the first career man to serve as chief executive of the loop and the first league boss hired from outside the circuit. With his advent, the Texas League office returns to Dallas, where it was located 1931-53. The office was moved to Fort Worth in 1954 when John Reeves of that city was elected head, following the resignation of the long-time president, J. Alvin Gardner.

The Texas League has had only 21 presidents since its start. Eleven of these served prior to 1900 and since the 1907 reorganization there were only eight up to Butler, and one of these was merely acting during the fatal illness of J. Doak Roberts. The scarcity is due to the durability of Roberts, who served from 1921 to his death late in 1929, and of J. Alvin Gardner, who guided the circuit for 21 years, in notable collaboration with Executive Vice-President Milton Price. Without exception, the presidents prior to Butler were men who had other interests even while making league direction a full-time job in itself. Roberts might be regarded as an exception to this rule. When he first served as loop head, in 1904-05, he was simultaneously a club owner. He sold his interests in the Houston club in 1920 before again taking the league presidency, to which he devoted full time, but he also was a capitalist with outside interests.

"Honest John" Loop's Father

The Texas League recalls affectionately "Honest John" McCloskey as its father, as he not only founded the league but throughout the nineties was present practically every year in reorganizing, owning and managing clubs. The claim of "High Class" Ted Sullivan to fathering the loop goes back to 1902 when Joe Gardner invited that veteran to Texas to form a revived circuit in which Ted owned a club.

Starting officially in 1921 but actually a year earlier, the Texas League and Southern Association have met annually (except 1943-44-45) in the Dixie Series for what might be termed technically the championship of the South. The two league champions played first in 1920, when Texas was B and the Southern A, the latter not giving its official blessing. But when Texas became A in 1921, the Dixie Series was set up by mutual contract and has since remained a colorful fall spectacle. Of the 32 series played, 1920-54, the Texas League has won 17, the Southern 15. In games, the Texas League has won 94, the Southern 89, with six ties. In 1954, Houston lost to Atlanta.

Sent Many Players to Majors

The playing caliber of the Texas loop has always been high. Approximately one-eighth of its player personnel, over the long stretch, has graduated to the majors. League trained stars have flashed in both present majors and in the Players League and the Federal League which competed with them. In its first 30 years, the Texas loop usually sent up from three to ten graduates, but since the advent of the farm system, there heve been few years in which at least a score of new Texas players failed to start in the two majors. The Texas has maintained for many seasons an average of 50 players in the majors.

Some of the greatest stars of the National and American once wore Texas League uniforms. And in the Hall of Fame at Cooperstown, N. Y., bronze plaques honor among the great of all-time five products of the loop, Tris Speaker (Houston), Carl Hubbell (Beaumont), Dizzy Dean (Houston), Al Simmons (Shreveport) and Bill Terry (Shreveport). Other stars have played in the Texas League after closing out major careers. Regrettably, Dallas in spring training failed to see the latent diamond genius in Rogers Hornsby and so missed a bet.

The Texas League has grown from its faraway 1888 beginning. The crude parks of that day have been replaced by eight modern plants. In two post-World War II seasons, the eight clubs played to over 2,000,000 regular season attendance.

And the T. L. circuit that Dick Butler now leads will head into 1955 with the same eight clubs that have composed it since 1938. Three are major league-owned — San Antonio by Baltimore, Houston by the Cardinals and Fort Worth by Brooklyn. Cincinnati recently disposed of its holdings in Tulsa, which will be locally operated, as are Dallas, Beaumont, Oklahoma City and Shreveport.

The Texas League, 67 years and 59 seasons old, looks proudly forward to a duplication of its past successes.

Hurricane Razed Houston and Galveston Parks in '15

DALLAS, Tex. — The Texas League has suffered some severe losses in fire and flood. In 1932 the burning of the Shreveport park compelled a franchise transfer to Tyler. Dallas, Wichita Falls and Fort Worth all have lost ball parks during playing seasons through fire.

The loop probably is the only one that has ever had a reserve list authorized for clubs that did not finish the season. On August 14, 1915, the ball parks at Galveston and Houston were destroyed by a Gulf of Mexico hurricane. Both clubs stopped play for the final two weeks of the season and the National Association ruled that their player reservations for the next year would be honored.

Wacks Pushes Plan to Admit Industrial Leagues to O. B.

PENNINGTON GAP, Va.—A recommendation that industrial leagues be admitted to National Association membership was submitted to President George M. Trautman on November 24, by Virgil Q. Wacks, organizer and president of the Mountain States League for eight years before the circuit folded last July.

Wacks' proposal is in line with a story by Publisher J. G. Taylor Spink in the September 1 issue of The Sporting News that consideration was being given to a plan to incorporate into O. B. the many industrial leagues in the U. S.

Wacks advised Trautman that he could set up a new league under the proposal in the smaller towns where the Mountain States originated before bringing in larger towns. The former MSL prexy advocates playing six games a week in such industrial loops, with double-headers on Wednesdays and Sundays and single games on Fridays and Saturdays. The schedule would be the usual 18 weeks in length, with a minimum of 108 games per club.

All players would have outside jobs. The suggested player limit is 12, excluding the manager. Salaries would be $100 per month per player, with playing managers to receive $300 and bench pilots $150. Player pay thus would be better than [illegible] it not quite up to C[illegible] contends.

Gardner, Ex-TL Boss, Given Honorary Spot at Convention

HOUSTON, Tex.—J. Alvin Gardner, president of the Texas League for 23 years, served as honorary presiding officer at the minor league convention.

Gardner will be on the speakers' dais at the opening session of the convention at 2 o'clock, December 1, and also will occupy a spot at the speakers' table for the banquet the following night.

Last January, Gardner was succeeded by John Reeves, who in turn yielded the presidency to Dick Butler.

Resigning in order to devote full time to his oil interests, Gardner took with him Milton Price, the league's executive secretary, who accompanied Gardner here.

"I always enjoyed the conventions," Gardner said, "but I enjoyed this one more than any other because I didn't have any responsibility."

Present Waiver Practices Legal, But 'Bad'--Frick

Cites Kiner and Slaughter Deals as Examples; Urges Further Major Expansion

By HY HURWITZ

BOSTON, Mass.

Ford Frick

Addressing 500 Massachusetts high school guidance officers and headmasters at Northeastern University on November 18, Commissioner Ford Frick advocated major league expansion and termed the current waiver regulation a "bad rule."

Frick, whose subject was "Athletics in Education," stressed the importance of sports in developing American youth.

"A boy who hasn't had the opportunity to have a baseball or a football under his pillow," Frick told the educators, "has missed a wonderful heritage. It is better for youngsters to have idols; someone on whom to center their youthful respect and esteem."

During an interview with local baseball writers, the commissioner discussed the shift of the Athletics to Kansas City, the possibility of drafting Los Angeles and San Francisco as major league territories and the waiver rule. He termed the move to Kansas City as one which will benefit the American League.

It is Frick's feeling that the major leagues now are too closely grouped. He pointed out that there are seven teams within a 225-mile radius of New York City and that a similar situation exists in the Midwest. He said he was highly in favor of expansion.

A. L. Could Draft Los Angeles

Although President Phil Wrigley of the Chicago Cubs also owns the Los Angeles franchise in the Pacific Coast League, Frick said that this territory could be drafted by the A. L.

"Should Los Angeles be drafted by an American League club," Frick explained, "it would be necessary to set up a board of arbitration to determine the amount of damages to be paid to the Pacific Coast League.

"The waiver rule is perfectly legal," Frick remarked. "It is in the books, but that doesn't mean it's a good rule. I do hope that the public can get to understand the rule as it is in effect today. When a team gets waivers on a player in September, those waivers stand until after the first month of the following season. In that way, a club can sell a player into another league after its own league had waived on him. That's how the recent Kiner deal was worked and how the Slaughter sale to the Yankees was worked last season."

The commissioner feels that if a player has been waived out of one league, he should be offered first to the bottom team in the standings of the rival league and then go up the ladder. He claimed he was responsible for legislation which made it necessary to go up the scale on waiver sales from June 15 to September 1.

Because of the rule as it is written now, the Yankees were able to buy Enos Slaughter from the Cardinals last season, as well as sell Vic Raschi to the same team.

'Managerial Shifts in A. L. Will Bring Balance'--Lane

for it ever have been more complex.

"The big deal between the Orioles and Yankees last week dramatically called attention to the strengthening of the American League. But actually that was only an incidental part in the sudden surge to restore the American League as the top power in the majors.

"There was no balance to the American League last season. It was the Indians, Yankees and White Sox in the upper bracket with the remaining five clubs just also-rans. The Red Sox in fourth finished 42 games behind Cleveland and the last-place A's were 60 games behind.

"In order to improve the league and restore better balanced competition, you have to reduce the cleavage between the second and the first-division clubs. And that is being accomplished in three different ways."

The volatile Lane listed them as follows:

(1) Natural rivalry arising between Baltimore and Washington.

(2) Change in ownership of the A's and the shift of the franchise to Kansas City.

(3) Stimulation of all five also-rans —Boston, Detroit, Washington, Baltimore and the A's—by managerial changes.

Only Two Managers Retained

"As a matter of fact, there have been six changes, since the White Sox moved up Marty Marion as manager after Paul Richards went to Baltimore," said Lane. "And six shifts might be a record for one league.

"It wasn't the result of any organized league effort. Nevertheless, it reveals there was an individual realization that something had to be done to correct the lop-sided situation in our loop.

"The Yankees and Cleveland are standing pat with their managers. But even they aren't standing pat insofar as personnel is concerned. By obtaining Pitchers Bob Turley and Don Larsen and Shortstop Billy Hunter from Baltimore, the Yankees have been improved for 1955 and so has Cleveland by the addition of Outfielder Ralph Kiner in a deal with the Cubs.

"However, to strengthen a league, you must first of all strengthen from the bottom up and that certainly is being done.

"It is generally agreed that the shift of the A's can't help but bolster our cellar team. Even without a single personnel change it is bound to be a more effective team next season, because of psychological reasons.

"The bickering in the front office of the A's during the last few years in Philadelphia and the uncertainty of the entire situation was bound to have an adverse effect on the players.

Oriole—Not Rivalry Stimulated

"The Kansas City shift also will have its effect in Washington and Baltimore, since they are now thrown into competition with each other. Baltimore no longer is on the schedule as a 'western' city.

"I don't agree with Clark Griffith that it will be harmful to both clubs. From my standpoint it is the best possible thing that could have happened toward strengthening the league.

"Good, vigorous competition is the very essence of a successful business. Actually, I don't believe that people will go from Washington to see games in Baltimore or vice versa.

"We are much closer to the Cubs, since we are right in the same city with our ball parks something like seven miles apart. Still we have our separate following and so do the Giants and Brooklyn, who happen to be in the same league.

"However, the competition set up between the White Sox and Cubs and the Giants and Brooklyn as well as the Yankees in the New York metropolitan area, is a healthy situation. Each club is battling to outdo the other one.

"And that will now be the case in the Washington-Baltimore duel. The Orioles, under Clarence Miles and Paul Richards, are going all-out to build the club into a winner. They have thrown the gauntlet down to the Senators with the million dollar deal with the Yankees. That was the best possible trade for the Orioles. They will win 12 to 15 more games because of a general bolstering of the team.

"It will help stir the Senators to action and bring them out of their rut. Charley Dressen has a lot of bounce and personal pride. He's new, ambitious and determined.

"It isn't that Bucky Harris wasn't a good manager. But the relationship between Bucky and Griffith was a handicap. Bucky and Griff have a great bond of affection. Bucky looks upon Griff as if he were his father.

"Because of that respect for Griff, Bucky was inclined to go along with him. He just couldn't be tough and demanding when it came to discussing players and the help he needed. It will be different with Dressen. He'll virtually be running the show with Cal Griffith as his immediate superior and Griff himself withdrawing more into the background.

Bucky Better Off in Detroit

"The fact that Harris just rode along with the tide in Washington doesn't mean, however, that he won't be effective in Detroit. Quite the opposite.

"Bucky and Spike Briggs always have got along splendidly. Spike has a great respect for Bucky's baseball judgment and Harris in turn knows he's now with an outfit that has the money to spend on players and a farm system. He can operate at his fullest efficiency in Detroit, whereas he was handicapped financially and emotionally in Washington.

"I personally believe that Freddy Hutchinson did a good job with the Tigers. However, Briggs always regarded Hutch as a freshman manager. He lacked confidence in him and vetoed suggestions which now, coming from Harris, he'll be willing to endorse.

"Hutch just couldn't 'sell' Briggs like Bucky will be able to do. Co-operation from the front office is important for a manager. In fact, for the most part it is the answer to success or failure.

"That also is going to be a factor at Boston. Lou Boudreau certainly couldn't be blamed for the failure of the Red Sox to make a pennant challenge after he lost Ted Williams and Mel Parnell for much of the season. But Lou somehow didn't click with General Manager Joe Cronin and Owner Tom Yawkey.

"Now they have brought up Pinky Higgins from their Louisville farm club. He's one of their own boys. Pinky was on the last pennant winner the Red Sox had in 1946. He endeared himself to Cronin when he came to Joe and told him that it would help the Red Sox if he traded him, because he was at the end of the line.

"Cronin saw to it that Higgins got started in the Red Sox chain as a manager and he has come up the line, managing in the farm system at Roanoke, Birmingham and Louisville. Higgins now fits in perfectly for the Red Sox, because he not only knows the young players coming up to the Red Sox but he also will have the full confidence and co-operation of the front office.

"And don't forget us," concluded Lane. "The White Sox will also do their part toward making the American League stronger. After all, the law of averages should dedicate that we won't again lose key men like Ferris Fain, George Kell and Billy Pierce for a good part of the season because of injuries."

MSL Queen Misses Minors' Beauty Contest—Loop Quit!

KINGSPORT, Tenn. — A pretty young lady is stranded in Kingsport and heart-broken because a promise that she would be sent to Houston, Tex., to participate in the minors' beauty queen contest was not fulfilled.

She is Miss Janice Harris, who was crowned Queen of the Mountain States League at the circuit's annual all-star game on July 11. She was entered in the contest by the Kingsport Cherokees.

Her victory entitled her to attend the National Association convention this week to participate for honors as "Miss Baseball of 1955." However, the Mountain States loop disbanded late in July, leaving the attractive Miss Harris without a sponsor to send her to Houston.

'A's Spirit to Rise on Surge of New Support in Kaycee'

CHICAGO, Ill.—"There will be an uplift in spirit among the A's when they are caught up by the enthusiasm of their new following in Kansas City, even as the Braves reacted in Milwaukee," said Frank Lane. "And the change in managership to Lou Boudreau will help it along.

"There is also the fact that Arnold Johnson with his bankroll and aggressiveness will demand an upsurge in the fortune of the A's. He doesn't want to be associated with a loser. And while money no longer will buy players in the majors, he certainly can go into the open market and purchase star minor leaguers as well as promising bonus kids."

52,583 Ticket Sale at Opener in Jersey City

Little Giants Delight Crowd With 13-Hit Offensive to Romp Over Bisons

By JIM LYNCH
JERSEY CITY, N. J.

Luke Hamlin

Jersey City's Little Giants lashed out a 13-hit attack to defeat Buffalo, 11 to 5, in the inaugural here, April 17, before an estimated crowd of 28,000. The total paid, under Mayor Hague's system of ticket sales reached 52,583.

The mayor, detained in Washington for a meeting with President Truman, missed his first opening game in Jersey City since 1917. Arthur Potterton, commissioner of revenue and finance, officiated at pre-game ceremonies in Hague's place.

Jake Wade, veteran southpaw, went the route for Jersey City, although pounded for eight hits by the Bisons. Operating with a six-run cushion from the first frame, Wade gave up two runs both in the second and third and one run in the eighth. Jersey City added to its first-inning total with two markers in the fourth and three in the third.

Bill Lillard Leads Attack

Bill Lillard, with two doubles and a single in four trips, was the big gun for the Jerseys. Home runs by Red Sinram and Jack Graham were other important blows for the Little Giants.

Les Mueller, who started for the Bisons, but couldn't get by the first inning, was charged with the defeat. Ted Gray, Aaron Silverman and Henry Perry followed Mueller to the mound for the Bisons.

Paul Richards, Buffalo manager, making his debut in the Shaughnessy circuit, wasn't able to master-mind his team to victory, but banged out a homer and a single in four trips to the plate.

Anse Moore, rookie right fielder for the Herd, also homered for the losers.

In other openers, April 17, Toronto overwhelmed the Orioles at Baltimore, 14 to 2, and Rochester thumped the Bears at Newark, 11 to 5. Catcher Gene Desautels went on a batting rampage for the Leafs, with three hits, including two homers, to send eight runs across the plate. Luke Hamlin, ex-major leaguer, scattered eight Baltimore safeties in going the distance. Johnny Podgajny started for the Orioles, but lasted only four innings.

Lip's Brother at Opener

BROOKLYN, N. Y.—There was a Durocher present at the Dodgers' opening game with the Braves—but it was not the banished Lip nor his wife, Laraine. It was Ray Durocher, a brother, who resembles the ex-pilot remarkably. He sat in the stands alone and unnoticed by the thousands about him discussing Leo's case. BEN GOULD.

Gamblers Arrested in Boston, Miami; Police Aid Promised New York Clubs

The game's nationwide drive on gambling has resulted in arrests in two widely-separated communities—Boston, Mass., and Miami, Fla., and with increased police safeguards at many places. Officials of the majors have ordered special police precautions against betting in the stands and President George M. Trautman of the National Association, after meetings with minor league presidents in several zones, has impressed on all club and league heads the necessity of "the constant attention of owners, players, managers, umpires and all connected with the game," finding "gambling is more prevalent than many people thought it to be."

Two men arrested at Fenway Park, during a Red Sox-Braves city series game in Boston, April 13, were convicted on charges of betting in a public place and fined $50 each. One of the pair appealed his fine, the other paid, but both pleaded innocent. They were seized by three of six policemen, who wore civilian clothes and sat in a first-base section of the stands, where the gambling fraternity has been known to congregate in previous years.

Nabbed at a night game between Miami and Miami Beach in the Florida International League, April 10, was a man who, police said, offered a bet of $25 to $10 on the outcome. He was arrested on the spot by one of a plainclothes detail assigned to the stands to break up gambling. Miami Police Chief Frank Mitchell said gambling would not be tolerated at the park this year, as was the case last summer, when the season ended amid charges that players were openly fraternizing with gamblers on the grounds. The chief declared his plainclothes squad would attend every game with orders to bring in all gamblers.

Meanwhile, in New York and Brooklyn, the betting gentry was told that its presence in the Yankee Stadium, Polo Grounds and Ebbets Field would "not be tolerated." Representatives of the three clubs met with Police Commissioner Arthur W. Wallender on April 14, and then issued what they termed a "clear-cut" statement of joint policy. The police head, backed by Mayor O'Dwyer, promised full support in the drive. He placed responsibility for enforcement on the borough and division commanders in the areas affected.

Only One Leading Ace in Inaugural Victories

Six of the seven pitchers with a record of 20 or more wins last season started in the opening games of 1947 and only one won the inaugural decisions. Dave Ferriss alone among the select group was not working and Hal Newhouser was the only one to win. The others, except Tex Hughson, lost, the Red Sox hurler giving way to Harry Dorish, who got credit for the victory over the Senators.

Spud Chandler and Johnny Sain were knocked out of the box, both in the seventh inning. Howie Pollet and Bob Feller were lifted for pinch-hitters in the eighth inning and were charged with the losses of their teams.

SCRIBES TAB CARDS, RED SOX

THE 1947 World's Series will be a repeat performance for the Cardinals and Red Sox, in the opinion of the majority of 96 major league writers polled by the Associated Press on the pennant races. The Redbirds were picked the winners by 88 and the Red Sox by 79. The Dodgers received five first-place votes, Chicago, two, and the Braves, one, in the National, and the Tigers, 12, Yankees, three, and the Indians, two, in the American. Graded by points, the forecasts ranked the teams as follows: National—St. Louis, 759; Brooklyn, 603; Chicago, 533; Pittsburgh, 363; New York, 303; Philadelphia, 219; Cincinnati, 154. American—Boston, 750; Detroit, 632; New York, 571; Cleveland, 502; Washington, 346; St. Louis, 296; Chicago, 265; Philadelphia, 104.

Jimmy Cannon has resumed his sports column in the New York Post, after an absence of more than three months because of illness. He underwent two operations.

Robert W. Saxton, sports editor of the Cincinnati Enquirer, has been granted a six months' leave of absence, effective, May 3, to accept the post of associate racing steward with the Ohio Sports Enterprise. He will serve as supervisor of racing at Beulah Park, Columbus; Ascot Park, Akron, and the Hamilton Fairgrounds. In Saxton's absence, Louis Lawhead, assistant sports editor since 1932, will serve as acting sports editor.

ST. LOUIS HAS NEWS TROUBLE

WITH no newspaper published in St. Louis after the Sunday editions of April 13, until the afternoon issues of April 16, because of a pressmen's strike, followers of the Browns and Cardinals were forced to fall back on the radio for news of the two teams. And the radio announcers covering the games had their troubles, because of a jurisdictional dispute between electricians and telephone men, and were forced to use short wave to their stations for rebroadcast. Ordinarily WTMV and WIL broadcast play-by-play direct from Sportsman's Park, but this spring, during renovation, circuits to the broadcasting box were disconnected. Then came a dispute as to who should install the new lines.

Dan Parker, New York Mirror sports editor, is president of the Damon Runyon Fund, with Walter Winchell, treasurer, and Leo Lindy, the restaurateur, secretary.

Extra Protection

PUTTING INTO EFFECT the order against unauthorized visitors, the Yankees took an extra measure of precaution by posting a uniformed officer outside the team's dressing quarters before the Stadium opener, April 15.

All major league parks now have their clubhouses barred to all except newspaper men and radio announcers.

Patriots and Caps Favored in Carolina League Race

RALEIGH, N. C.—Greensboro, 1946 pennant winner, and Raleigh, playoff titlists, are rated as the teams to beat as the Carolina League prepared to swing into its third season on April 23.

Opening round games will find Raleigh at Durham, Greensboro at Leaksville, Danville at Burlington and Martinsville at Winston-Salem.

Manager Charlie Carroll has a half-dozen returning regulars from last season's Patriot club which won the flag in a stretch drive. The list includes Pitchers Bernie Keatine and Lefty Willard Speaks, who won 34 games between them. Other holdovers are Infielders Matty Topkins and Sheepy Lamb and Outfielders Don Butzer and Bobby Falk. In addition the Pats have added Emo Showfety, .342 hitter released by Raleigh.

The Caps, under Manager Ray Thomas, boast the prospects of the classiest hurling staff in the league, paced by Roy Pinyoun, Charlie Timm and Al Henencheck, who captured 47 games last year. Raleigh also has back on hand, Catcher Harry Sullivan, Infielders Dave Baxter and Glenn Lockamy, and Outfielders Johnny Carenbauer and Jim Mills.

Manager Willie Duke at Durham will field one of the circuit's top-hitting teams, paced by Cecil Tyson, Nick DeLuca and Paul Crawford. Chuck Hastedt, a 16-game winner last season, heads the hurling corps.

The five other clubs of the league still are question marks, with newcomers slated to fill the majority of the spots. NEALE PATRICK.

Bat Blasts Give Booming Start to Blues, Birds

April 16 Openers Cut to Two Games by Mercury Drop; 9,764 at Kansas City

By BOB HOOEY
COLUMBUS, O.

Hal Anderson

The Kansas City Blues and the Columbus Red Birds, rated sixth and seventh in the scribes' pre-season ratings, got off to a flying start in the only two games played in the American Association's inaugural program, April 16.

Kansas City, in a daylight contest, delighted a home crowd of 9,764 by coming from behind with a five-run eighth inning to beat St. Paul, 8 to 4.

Playing at night with the temperature only six degrees away from freezing, Columbus, with 1,911 shivering home-towners looking on, defeated the Indianapolis Indians, 5 to 1, for Manager Hal Anderson's maiden victory.

Minneapolis was snowed out at Milwaukee, while the Louisville-Toledo tilt also was postponed because of bad weather.

Saints' Lead Overcome

It was 45-degree weather at Kansas City, but the low temperature did not stop the Kawmen after the Apostles had taken a four-run lead at the expense of Carl DeRose, star Kansas City righthander, in the sixth inning. The Blues came right back to blast Lefty Ed Weiland off the mound with a three-run outburst in the same round and then staged their big five-run inning in the eighth. In a collection of 11 hits off Weiland and Dick Coffman, the Blues were led by Hal Douglas and Ed Stewart, outfielders, with three hits each.

Pitcher Jack Griffore and First Baseman Mike Natisin were the heroes of the Columbus victory. Griffore scattered seven Indianapolis hits, walked only two and fanned nine. He was deprived of a shutout when Butch Moran doubled and Stan Wentzel singled to account for the Tribe's lone marker in the final inning.

Natisin stepped into the limelight in the first inning. After big George Woods, the visitors' starting hurler, walked two Red Birds, the portly first sacker blasted a long home run over the right field fence to give Griffore an early three-run lead.

Hot Missions Get Jump in Kickoff

By JOHN CRONLEY

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla.

The red-hot San Antonio Missions and cold, rainy weather marked the first week of play in the Texas League, Oklahoma City's home opener being set back for a record four days following the Indians' two quick wins in Dallas.

While most of the other clubs encountered one of the slowest starts in league annals, Jimmy Adair's Missions went merrily on their way, in spite of the fact that they were still a road club because their home field is not finished.

Getting a sizable jump on the remainder of the field, the Missions pounded to seven wins in a row, pasting Beaumont and Shreveport each three times and Houston once.

Santone again is getting the same type of superior pitching that enabled it to land in last season's Shaughnessy playoff, the first six rivals scoring a total of only 14 markers against Mission moundmen.

Rebs Off to Bad Start

Leading Adair's stellar staff is Ed Cole, who won his first two starts, and busting the ball hard for the league leaders is Owen Friend, new second baseman, who exploded three homers during the first six games.

Causing a mild surprise at the onset was the failure of the Dallas team, heavy favorite for the 1947 flag, to crack through for a victory. First, the Oklahoma City Indians, getting away fast under Roy Schalk, swept a pair from Al Vincent's Rebs, then Tulsa shaded the Rebels before the rains came.

Fort Worth, under its new playing manager, Les Burge, also was impressive until being stopped by the weather. The Cats clipped Tulsa twice in succession.

Except for San Antonio's runaway rush, and Dallas' slow start, there were few surprises. Beaumont opened weakly, hitting the win side of the standings but once in six games.

Additional help is pouring into nearly all eight camps, and personnel is due for a heavy turnover on several clubs before the derby contenders straighten away for the long grind.

Best pitched game of the first week was by Shreveport's Vern Williamson, who blanked Beaumont, 2 to 0, on four hits.

Exporters Take to Air

BEAUMONT, Tex.—President Guy Airey gave Beaumont the distinction of being the first Texas League club to travel by air when he completed arrangements for the Exporters to fly to San Antonio, April 18.

The flight was arranged so the Exporters would be able to play a night game here, April 17, and arrive in San Antonio in time for an afternoon tilt the next day.

Dean Still Ol' Diz

DIZZY DEAN has lost little of the popularity he carried while the ace of the Cardinals. Diz, now a St. Louis broadcaster, is shown in the middle of a group of youngsters, signing autographs at the opening of the Schultz and Russell Sporting Goods store, of which the Brownie catcher, Joe Schultz, is a co-owner, at a new location in St. Louis, April 12. Brownie teammates also were on hand for the store opening.

Slim Remembered

BROWNWOOD, Tex.—W. Bryan (Slim) Harriss has been away from the major leagues for a long time—but he is still benefiting from his pitching. Back in 1921 and '22, he stayed at a boarding house in Philadelphia, when a member of the Athletics. He had not seen the woman who operated the boarding house since 1928. But on April 15, Harriss, now a county commissioner, received a call to go to Philly and collect a bequest under her will, which disposed of more than $50,000 in cash and jewelry.

Dallas Unanimous Choice, Tribe Starts With Upset

DALLAS, Tex.—Predictions of Texas League sports writers were given a rude jolt in the first two days of the campaign when Oklahoma City twice thumped Dallas, 4 to 1 and 10 to 7.

A pre-season poll of 17 league scribes representing every city had established the Rebels, 1946 playoff and Dixie Series champions, as a unanimous choice to cop the regular-season race. The Indians, on the other hand, were placed last.

San Antonio was rated second, followed by Fort Worth, Tulsa, Houston, Beaumont, Shreveport and Oklahoma City.

Trautman to Open NBC

WICHITA, Kan.—The National Baseball Congress has announced that George M. Trautman, president of the National Association of Professional Baseball Leagues, will officially open the thirteenth annual national championship tournament here the night of August 15.

Last year Commissioner Albert B. Chandler was the principal guest at the tournament opening.

A banquet is being planned in honor of Trautman, to be attended by sponsors and managers of the state and bi-state championship teams which will come here to battle for the U. S. non-professional crown, first prize money of $10,000 and the right to represent this nation in the Canadian-American series at Toronto, Ont., and later non-professional World's Series at Havana, Cuba.

The old mark of 54,826 was set in 1946 at Yankee Stadium. The New York park reported an attendance of 72,200 for the dedication game in 1923, but approximately 20,000 were guests for the event.

In addition to Cleveland, the Phillies and Red Sox set opening-day records, the Phils drawing 27,203 and the American League champions 30,822.

This year's attendance exceeded the 1946 total of 236,730 by 8,328. In 1946, the American League drew 150,068 and the National 96,662.

Tom on Job as Red Sox Prexy

DUE TO THE ILL HEALTH of General Manager Eddie Collins, Owner Tom Yawkey of the Red Sox is devoting more time to club affairs than has been his custom. Here Yawkey is conferring with Pitcher Mickey Harris in the Boston clubhouse.

during his recent illness. From all parts of the coun of good cheer came to the Babe on his hospital bed from girls. When he left the hospital, a crowd of small boys was outside the door to shout a greeting to him. And when he took recently for a trip to Florida, youngsters surrounded the form home run king as he made his way to the plane.

The Babe Ruth Day ceremonies at hundreds of ball parks in the United States and in neighboring countries are in the nature of a thanksgiving and a celebration for Ruth's recovery from his illness, which led him into the valley of the shadow. Perhaps it took the gravity of his illness to demonstrate the affection which millions hold for this colorful figure, who, with his mighty slugging feats, his boyishness and his ever-ready grin, captured the imagination of the fans.

That affection will be demonstrated by the national pastime and its followers on April 27 in a tribute whose magnitude and warmth exceeds the accolades ever previously bestowed upon any individual in the history of the game.

A NEGRO IN THE MAJOR LEAGUES

In the seventy-second year of the National League's history, a Negro has made his appearance on its player rolls for the first time. Jackie Robinson, brought up from the Montreal farm, is listed as a first baseman with the Brooklyn club.

Once Robinson had taken the field with the Dodgers, it was remarked that it was quite odd that a Negro had not been seen in the majors before in the modern history of the game.

To a sport-loving public which had seen Negroes in professional football, Negroes in college gridiron competition, and Negroes winning world boxing championships, Robinson's appearance on a major league field hardly was a novelty.

To some of the ball players, the entry of a Negro into a field of endeavor hitherto closed to that race, albeit open to other non-Caucasians, admittedly was irksome. But that phase of the situation, too, will pass and before long we may expect to see any Negro ball player worthy of a place in the major leagues performing in that company.

As Robinson himself admitted when he was purchased by the Brooklyn club, his promotion to the majors involves certain peculiar responsibilities, both for Jackie as an individual, for the Negroes as a race new to the Big Time, and for exclusively Negro baseball as a possible feeder of the National and American leagues.

Negro baseball of the past was not too careful about its general conduct. It had no great respect for contracts, for schedules, for a sense of responsibility to Organized Baseball.

Last year a Negro report on Negro baseball admitted that Negro players had been guilty of certain irregularities which would not be countenanced for one minute by the commissioner of Organized Baseball.

It is up to Negro baseball to recognize the elevation of Robinson to the majors by cleaning house, and establishing itself as a clean, well-conducted feeder of the higher company.

To Robinson, no warning is necessary. He is a well-behaved, highly understanding man who recognizes his unique position and the fact that on him rests the burden of persuading Organized Baseball to engage more players of his race.

To the Negro fan, let it be said that he must approach the new situation with understanding and patience, two qualities his race long has utilized in its amalgamation into American life, especially in the South.

Pitchers undoubtedly will "test" Robinson's gameness, and there will be other incidents which may make the Negro fan angry.

But Robinson will establish his own position, and that of his race, in baseball, as he established it in the Junior World's Series last fall against Louisville.

In games in the Kentucky metropolis, Louisville pitchers sorely tried Jackie's temper. But after every trip into the dirt he came up smiling. He could take it. And, eventually, the Colonels forgot Robinson's color and treated him as just another Montreal player.

Jackie Robinson's presence among the Brooklyn personnel marks a vast forward stride for Organized Baseball in the social revolution which has gained a tremendous impetus through the world war.

The home runs Vernon does hit come as a surprise to him most of the time, he says. "I just happen to get a-hold of 'em with my regular swing, and if the timing is right it proves that the ball will go a long way without swinging your head off. Of course, if it gets down to the last couple of innings with the score tied or we need that long hit, I'm trying to powder that ball naturally enough."

"It's easier to hit if the pitcher has a little more respect for you," he said. "I began to notice it last year. I could tell I was beginning to look a little bit tougher to the pitchers, and they were trying to be a little more careful. They weren't cutting loose against me like they used to, and it was a nice spot to be in."

So is the league batting championship a nice spot to be in. Vernon got his salary doubled this season, as a direct result, and the other day Wheaties sent him a check for his indorsement of their produce that was triple the amount he used to get when he was merely Mickey Vernon, first baseman of the Senators. There was no new-car shortage for Vernon last fall. He got one of the first off the assembly line.

It's been so nice that he doesn't wa to step down from the batting thr until he's compelled to, he says. "Th have to outhit me," he says. "I'm going to resign."

THE NAPOLEONS OF BASEBALL

JOHN J. McGRAW.

McGraw, the Giant's manager, was born at Truxton, N. Y., in 1873. He began to play baseball when he was but seventeen years of age, and in 1891 Manager Barnie engaged him for the then tail-end Baltimore club. In 1900, along with Catcher Robinson, McGraw was sold to the St. Louis National League club, and he played all that season in the Mound City. In 1901 he and Robinson organized a new Baltimore club, and in 1902 he was transferred with several other players to New York. Under McGraw's management the Giants won the National League championship in 1904-05 and the world's championship in 1905, lost the league pennant only by a technicality in 1908, finished third in 1909, a good second in 1910, and first in 1911-12.

CONNIE MACK.

Cornelius McGillicuddy, better known as Connie Mack, is one of the cleverest of managers. He was born at Brookfield, Mass., in 1862. For six seasons he caught for Pittsburgh, and he was manager from 1894 to 1896. Then he assumed the management of the Milwaukee (Western League) club. In 1901 he transferred his Milwaukee franchise to Philadelphia and organized the Athletic Club, one of the mainstays of the American League. In 1902 he molded a championship team from material that would have defied any other manager. In 1903 the Athletics finished second, in 1904 fifth, in 1905 first, in 1906 fourth, in 1907 second, in 1908 sixth, in 1909 second, in 1910 and 1911 first, in 1912 second, and this year again in first place.

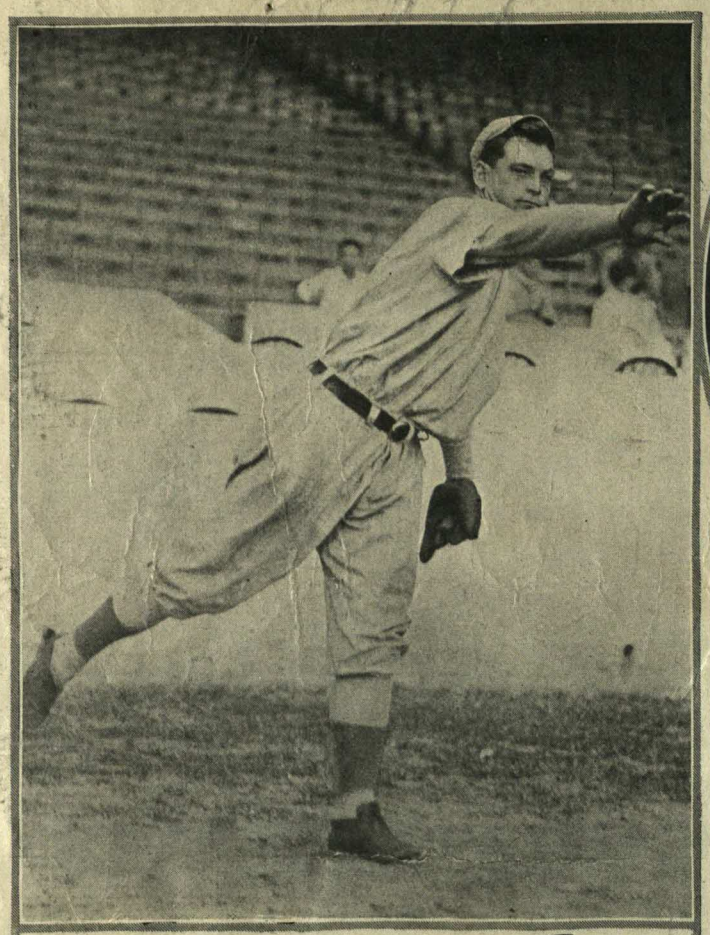
IN THE BOX FOR NEW YORK



CHARLES M. TESREAU.

The "spitball" pitcher of the New York Giants was born in Ironton, Mo., in March, 1889. He is a giant in physique and weighs about 230 pounds. He pitched for Houston, Galveston, and Shreveport. McGraw got him with Shreveport, and he joined the Giants in the Autumn of 1910. In the Spring of 1911 he was sent to Toronto of the International League for another season in the minor leagues. He did such splendid work in the last half of the season that New York claimed him back in the Autumn.

RICHARD MARQUARD.

"Rube" Marquard was the leading pitcher of the New York team in 1911, and its mainstay for the first half of the 1912 season, during which he won nineteen successive games, tying Keefe's 1888 National League record. For his release Indianapolis received $11,000. In 1909 he pitched eighteen games, winning five. He has since demonstrated that he was worth all McGraw paid for him. He was born at Cleveland, Ohio, in 1888.

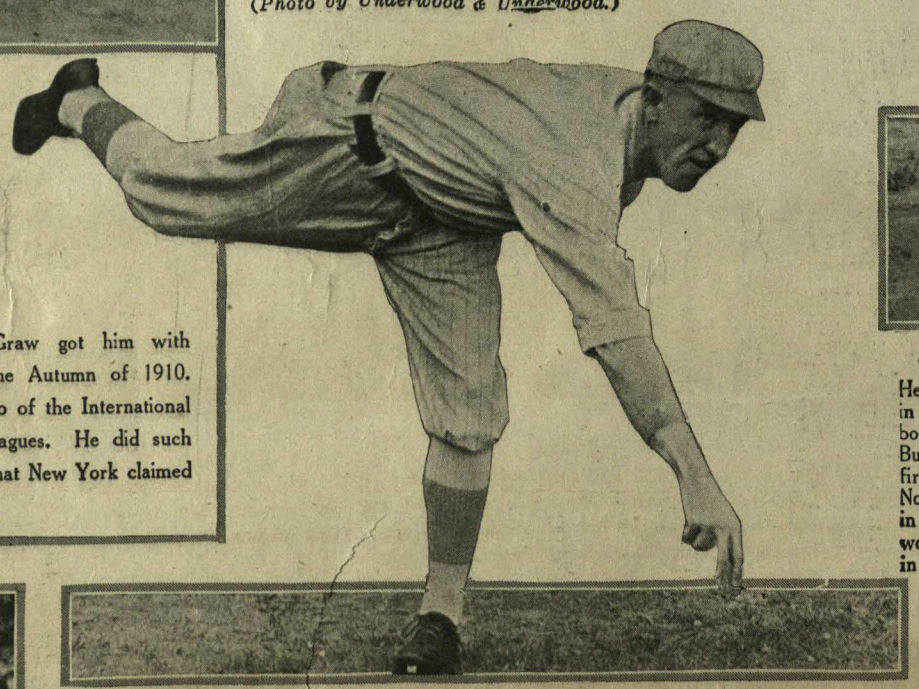
CHRISTOPHER MATHEWSON.

"Matty" is one of the most famous players of the land. He is a native of Factoryville, Penn., where he was born in 1878. After he had gained some reputation in the box for the Keystone (Penn.) Academy nine, he entered Bucknell University, where he "made the team" in his first year. He played with Taunton, and later with Norfolk, where he was found by the New York Nationals in the Fall of 1900. In 1905 Mathewson topped a wonderful season record by shutting out the Athletics in three world's series games.



ALBERT DEMAREE.

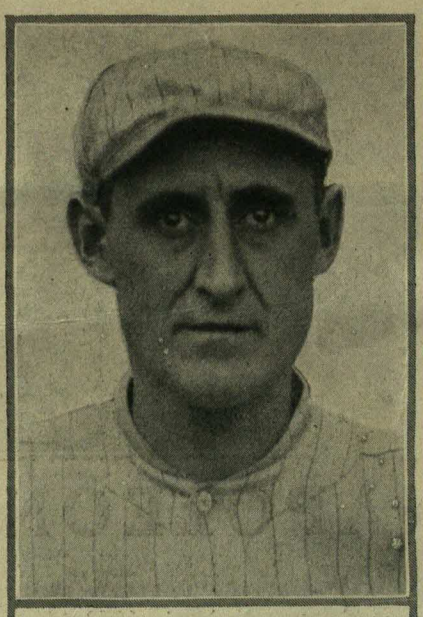
Demaree is serving his first year in major league ranks. He has made a remarkable record as a pitcher, leading the league in this department. He was born at Chicago and is 26 years old. He pitched two seasons in the South, but made his great record in 1912 at Mobile, Ala., in the Southern League, when he made the strikeout and shutout record of the league. He has little speed and depends upon a remarkable curve and complete control.

OTIS CRANDALL.

This clever and hard-hitting young right-hander was born at Wadena, Ind., in 1879. Before signing with Cedar R[illegible]7, he played with an in[illegible] in Frankfort, Ind. With th[illegible] last two seasons he has w[illegible]ercentage of his games ar[illegible]ily. In the 1912 season he [illegible] the team's most reliable re[illegible]

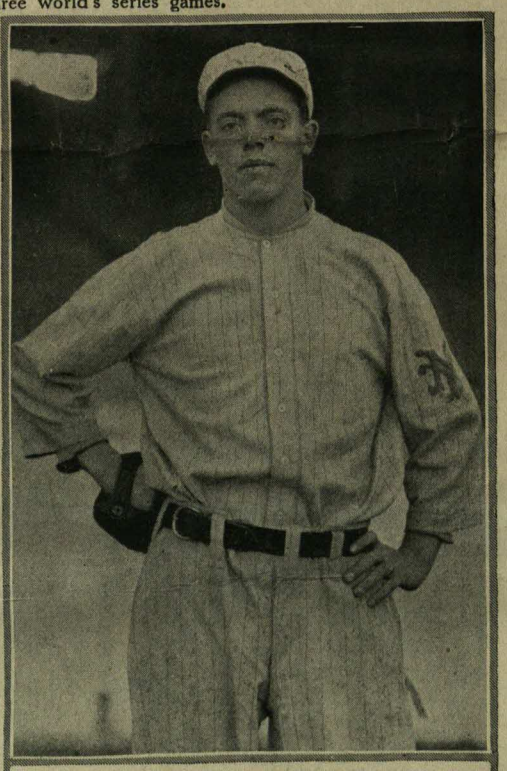
ARTHUR FROMME.

Born at Quincy, Ill., Sept. 3, 1883, Fromme is one of the veterans of the game. He began his baseball career playing for Quincy in the Three I's League, in 1905. He joined the St. Louis Cardinals in 1907, but poor health prevented his doing himself justice, and he was released to Cincinnati, where he did efficient pitching up to this year, when he fell off and was traded to the New York Club. Here he has shown signs of his old form.



GEORGE WILTSE.

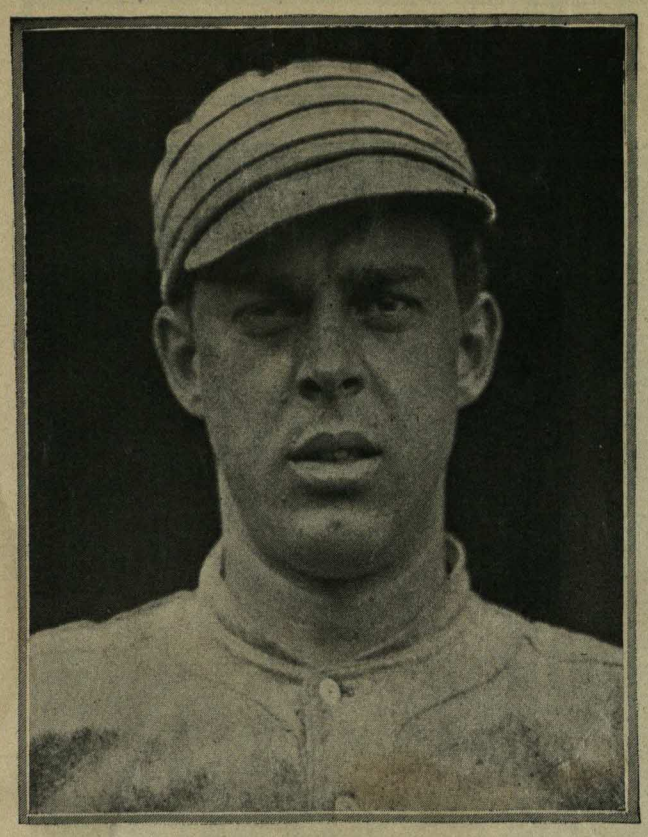
The veteran "southpaw" was born in Hamilton, N. Y., Sept. 8, 1880. He played his first professional ball with Albany, in the New York State League, in 1900. In 1902 he joined the Scrantons, but finished the season with Troy and again signed with the same club in 1903, playing in every position except that of catcher. In the Fall of 1903 he was drafted by New York.



FERDINAND SCHUPP.

Schupp is one of the latest recruits to the New York Club ranks. He was born at Louisville, Ky., twenty-one years ago, and stands 5 feet 8 inches. He played in the amateur clubs around Louisville. For one season he was on the Decatur Three I's League. He has pitched in but two games this season as a relief twirler.

PITCHERS FROM PHILADELPHIA



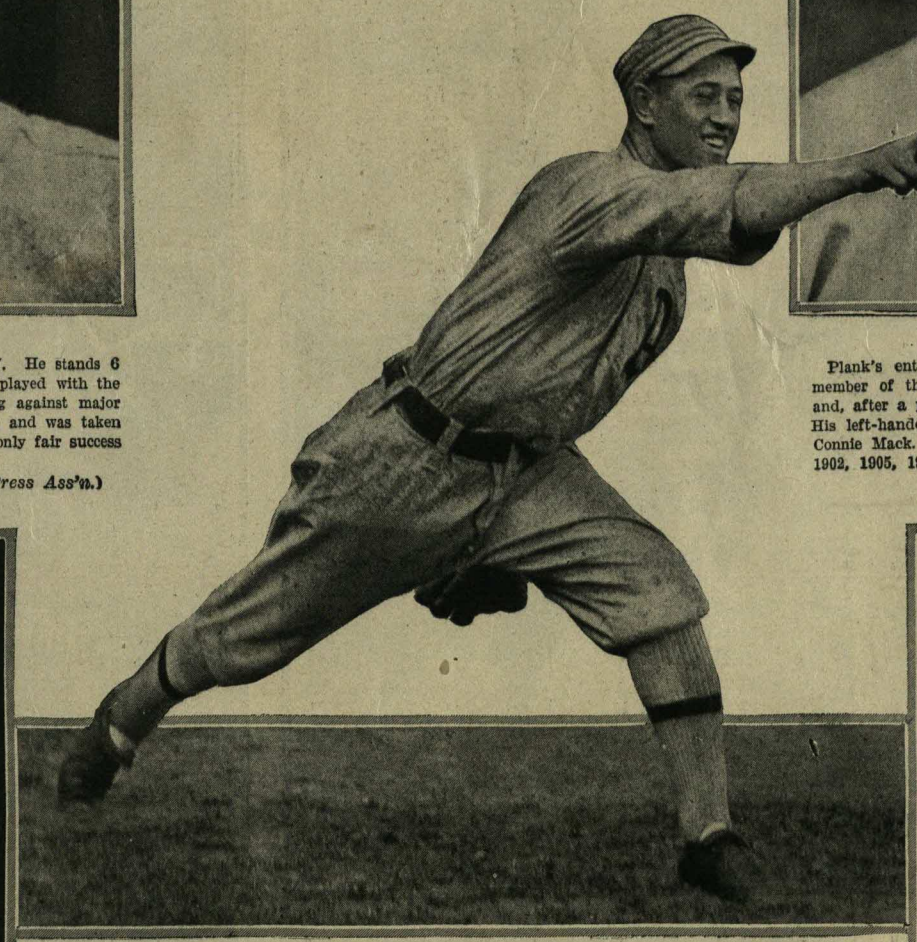
CARROLL BROWN.

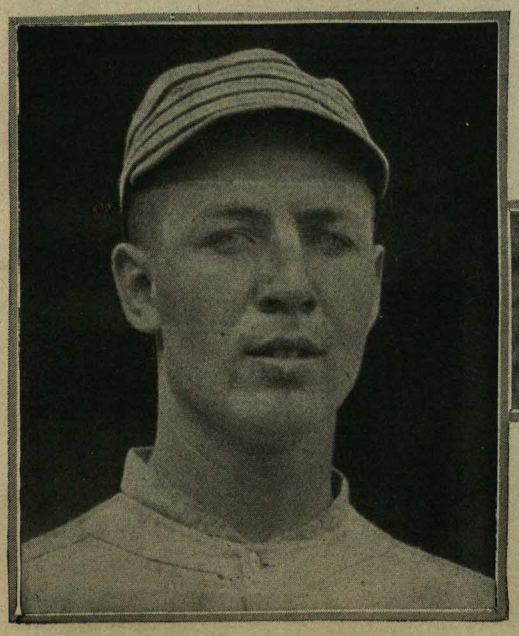
Brown was born at Woodbury, N. J., on Feb. 20, 1887. He stands 6 feet 2 inches in height, and weighs 192 pounds. Brown played with the Atlantic City independent team and made a fine showing against major league clubs. He played in Bridgeport in 1910 and 1911, and was taken in hand by Connie Mack at the close of 1911. He had only fair success in 1912, but this year has been one of the stars.

(Photo (c) American Press Ass'n.)

EDWARD S. PLANK.

Plank's entire experience as a professional has been gained while a member of the Athletics. He was born at Gettysburg, Penn., in 1875, and, after a public school education, took a course at Gettysburg College. His left-handed pitching against college teams attracted the attention of Connie Mack. That was in 1901. Plank helped the Athletics to win the 1902, 1905, 1910, and 1911 pennants.



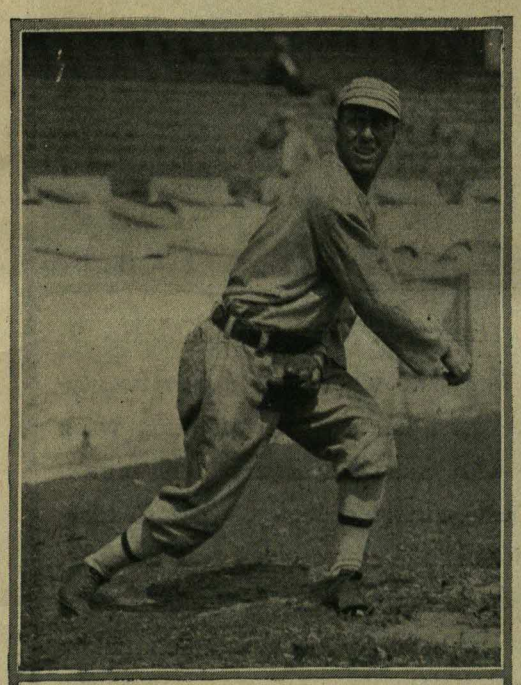


BYRON HOUCK.

Houck was born in Prosper, Minn., Aug. 28, 1887, is 6 feet ¼ inch in height, and weighs 180 pounds. Houck had virtually no minor league experience when Mack took him from the independent ranks in 1911. In 1912 Houck had an even break in his pitching, winning 8 games and losing the same number. He is regarded as a find, but this year, though showing flashes, he has not performed as well as Brown.

LESLIE J. BUSH.

Bush was born at Brainerd, Minn., Nov. 27, 1893. He is 5 feet 10 inches in height and weighs 173 pounds. Bush's only professional experience was gained with the Missoula, Mont., team of the Union Association last year. He made a remarkable record, and Manager Mack signed him. He is possessed of rare speed and fine curves and control.



JOHN M. COOMBS.

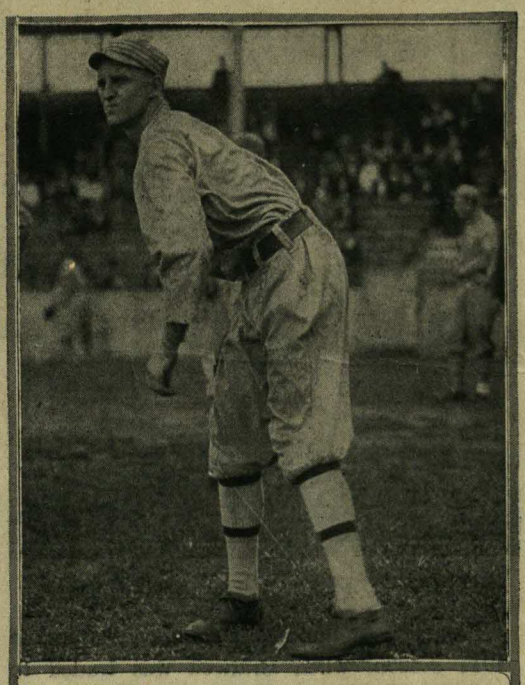
Coombs hails from Portland, Me., and weighs 190 pounds. In 1902-03-04-05 he pitched for Colby College, and was considered the best twirler ever turned out of that institution. Mack landed him in 1906. He strained himself in a game about two months ago, and did not recover quickly from the injury, which resulted in putting him out of this year's world's series.

ROBERT J. SHAWKEY.

Shawkey has had more minor league experience than any of the other young pitchers. He was born at Brookfield, Penn., on Dec. 4, 1890. He is 5 feet 10 inches tall, and weighs 175 pounds. His first playing was with Harrisburg in the Tri-State League in 1911, when he won ten games and lost ten. Mack took him South in the Spring of 1912, but turned him over to Baltimore before the season opened. He won 17 and lost 18 games last year with Baltimore. This year he was the winning Baltimore pitcher when Mack got him back for the Athletics.

J. WELDON WYCKOFF.

Wyckoff is among Connie Mack's college finds, having jumped from the Bucknell College nine into the Athletics' fold by way of the semi-professional ranks. He was born at Williamsport, Penn., on Feb. 19, 1892. He is 6 feet tall, weighs 174 pounds, has good speed and fair control, and has shown enough form this year to warrant further trial.



HERBERT J. PENNOCK.

Pennock is one of the youngest and most remarkable players in the major leagues. He was born at Kenneth Square, Penn., Sept. 10, 1894, so he is only 19 years of age. He is tall and slender, 6 feet in height, and weighs about 155 pounds. The young pitcher is self-taught. He was found by Mack last year, when only 18 years old.

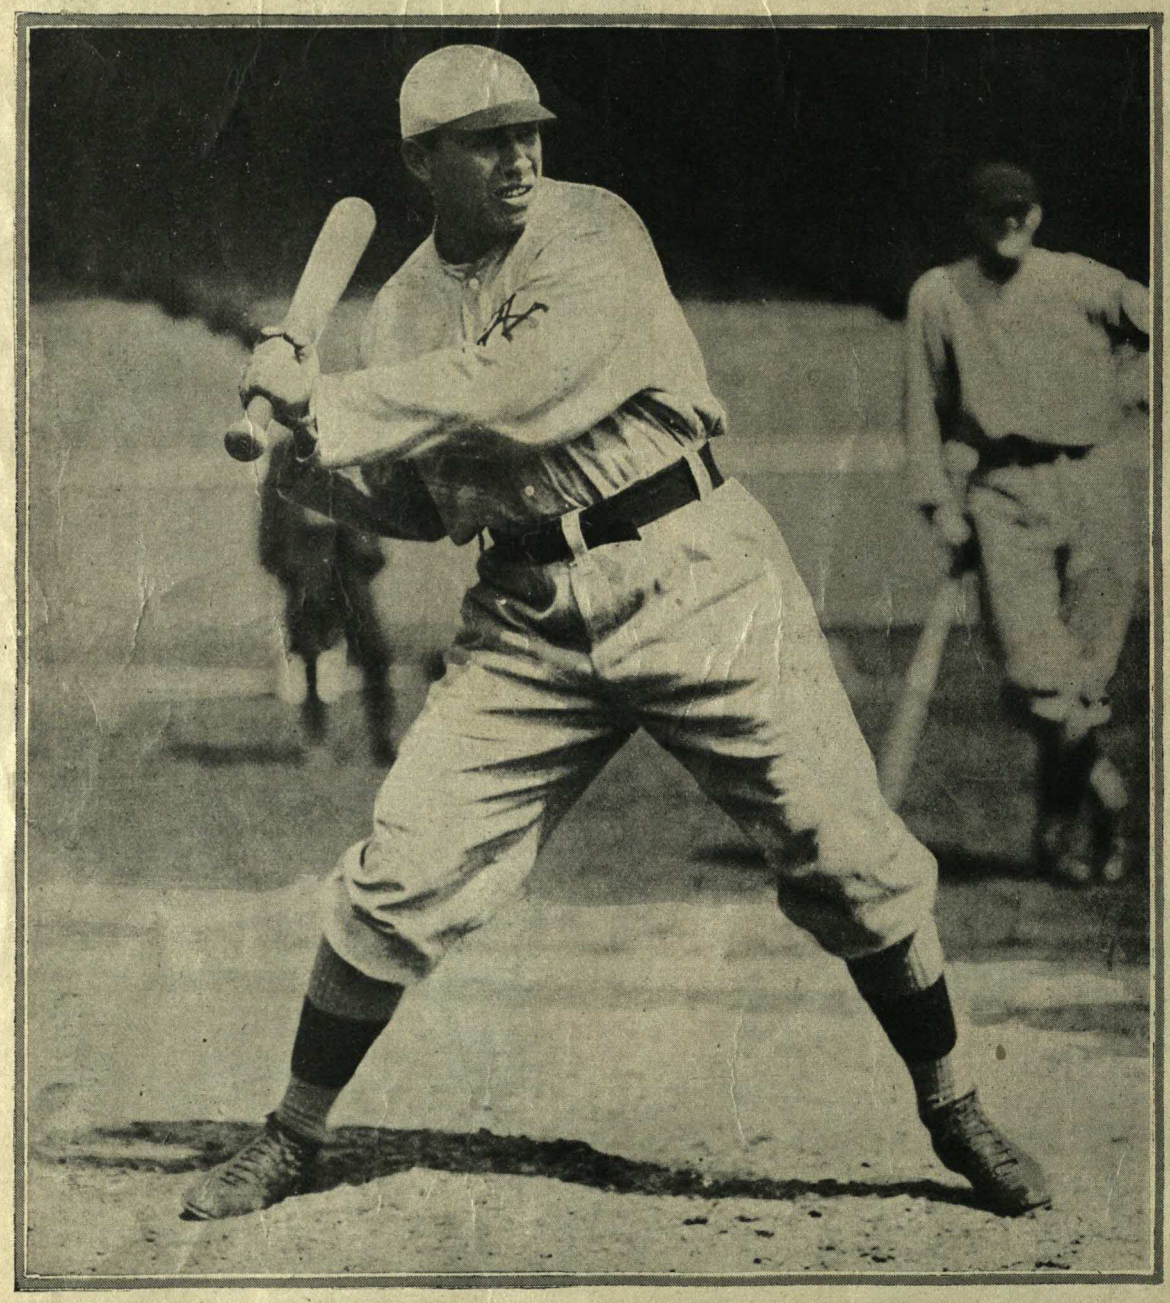
CHARLES ALBERT BENDER.

Bender is a Chippewa Indian, and was born at Brainerd, Minn., May 5, 1883. He is 6 feet 1 inch tall, weighs 170 pounds, and is a natural ball player. When 18 years old he played first base for Carlisle Indian School. In 1902 he pitched for Dickinson College at Carlisle, and in the Spring of 1903 was signed by the Athletics. He was the pitching star in the memorable 1905 world's championship series with the New York Nationals, and won the only game credited to the Athletics, shutting out the New Yorkers. (Photo (c) by International News Service.)

RECORD HITTERS OF THE GIANTS.



JOHN T. MEYERS, CATCHER.

"Chief" Meyers proved one of the real baseball finds in the 1910, 1911 and 1912 seasons. Meyers is not a reservation Indian, though much of his time has been spent in the California reserves. Reared at Riverside, Cal., where he was born July 29, 1882, he had every advantage of early education. After a year in college and on the Harrisburg team of the tri-State League, he decided to seek the diamond as a vocation. He drifted West to Butte, Mont., of the Northwestern League, and made such a reputation there that St. Paul of the American Association procured him almost four years ago. From St. Paul he came in the Fall of 1909 to the Giants.

ARTHUR FLETCHER, SHORTSTOP.

Fletcher got his chance as a regular in the 1911 season, when Bridwell was traded to [illegible] for Herzog. After Herzog was placed [illegible] base, Fletcher was assigned regularly [illegible] field. He was born at Edwardsville, [illegible] years ago, and was purchased from the [illegible] Club of the Texas League by the New [illegible] lub in the Spring of 1908.

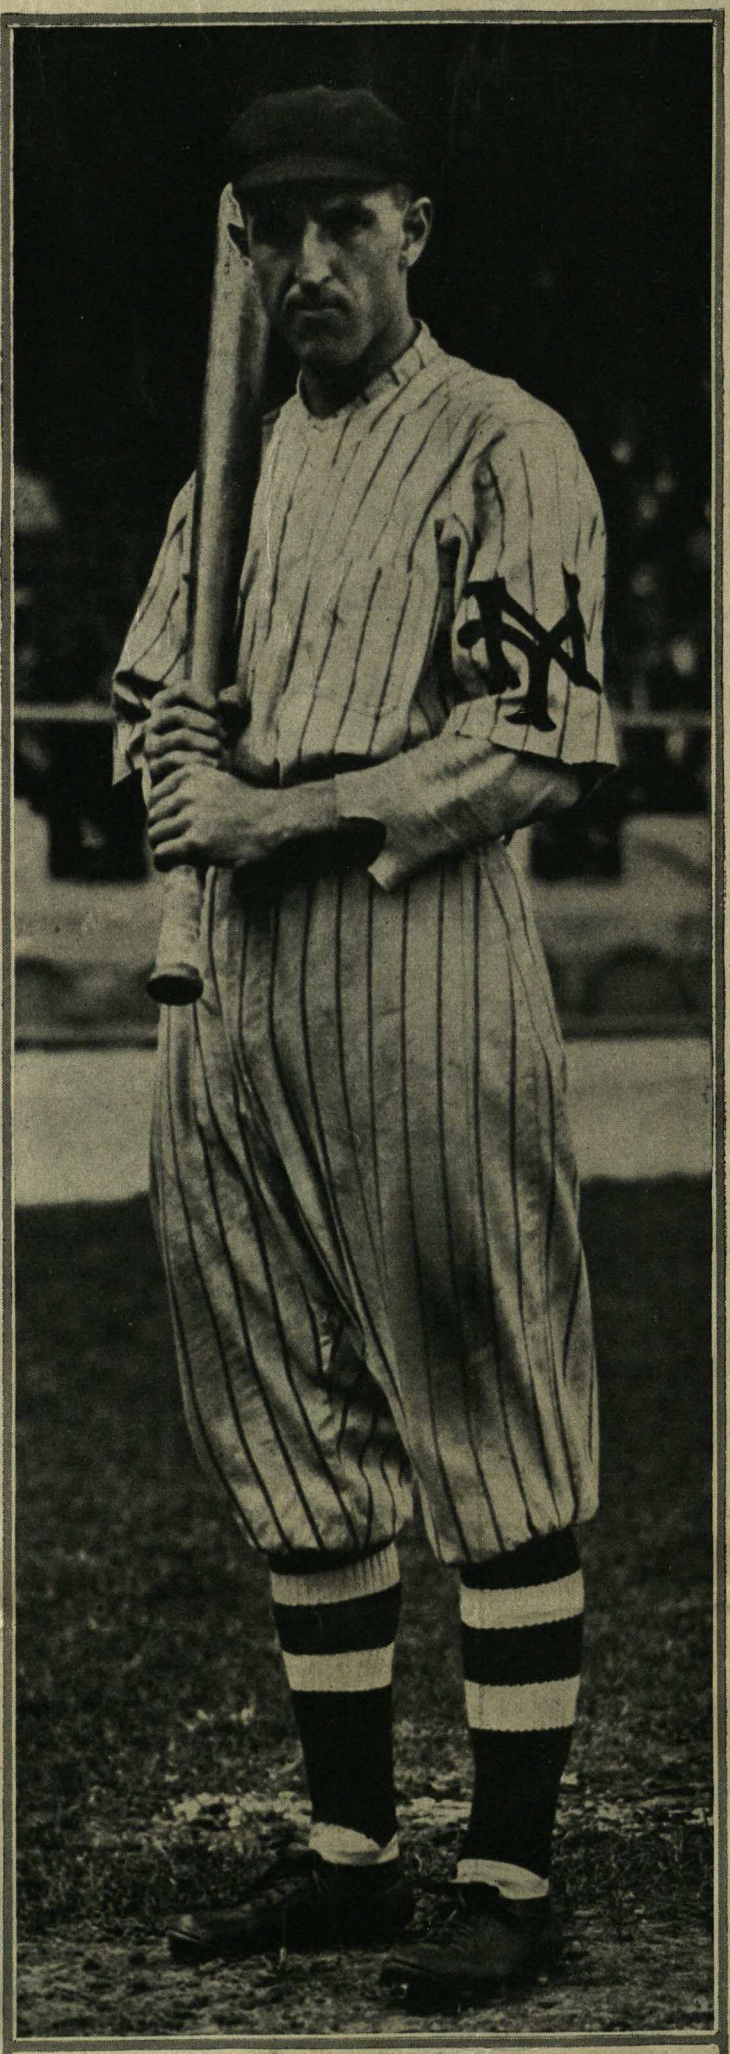
ARTHUR J. SCHAFER, THIRD BASEMAN

Born at Los Angeles, Cal., 26 years ago, Schafer came to the New York team without professional experience. He was a member of the Santa Clara College team when Manager McGraw was attracted by reports of his great skill and signed him a trial in 1909. He joined the Giants in mid-season and was used as a substitute the balance of that season and throughout 1910. He went to Japan in the ensuing winter to coach Japanese college teams. In 1912 he rejoined the Giants, and at various times during the season he rendered excellent service as an all-round of Baseball." He doesn't have to play, but he likes it.

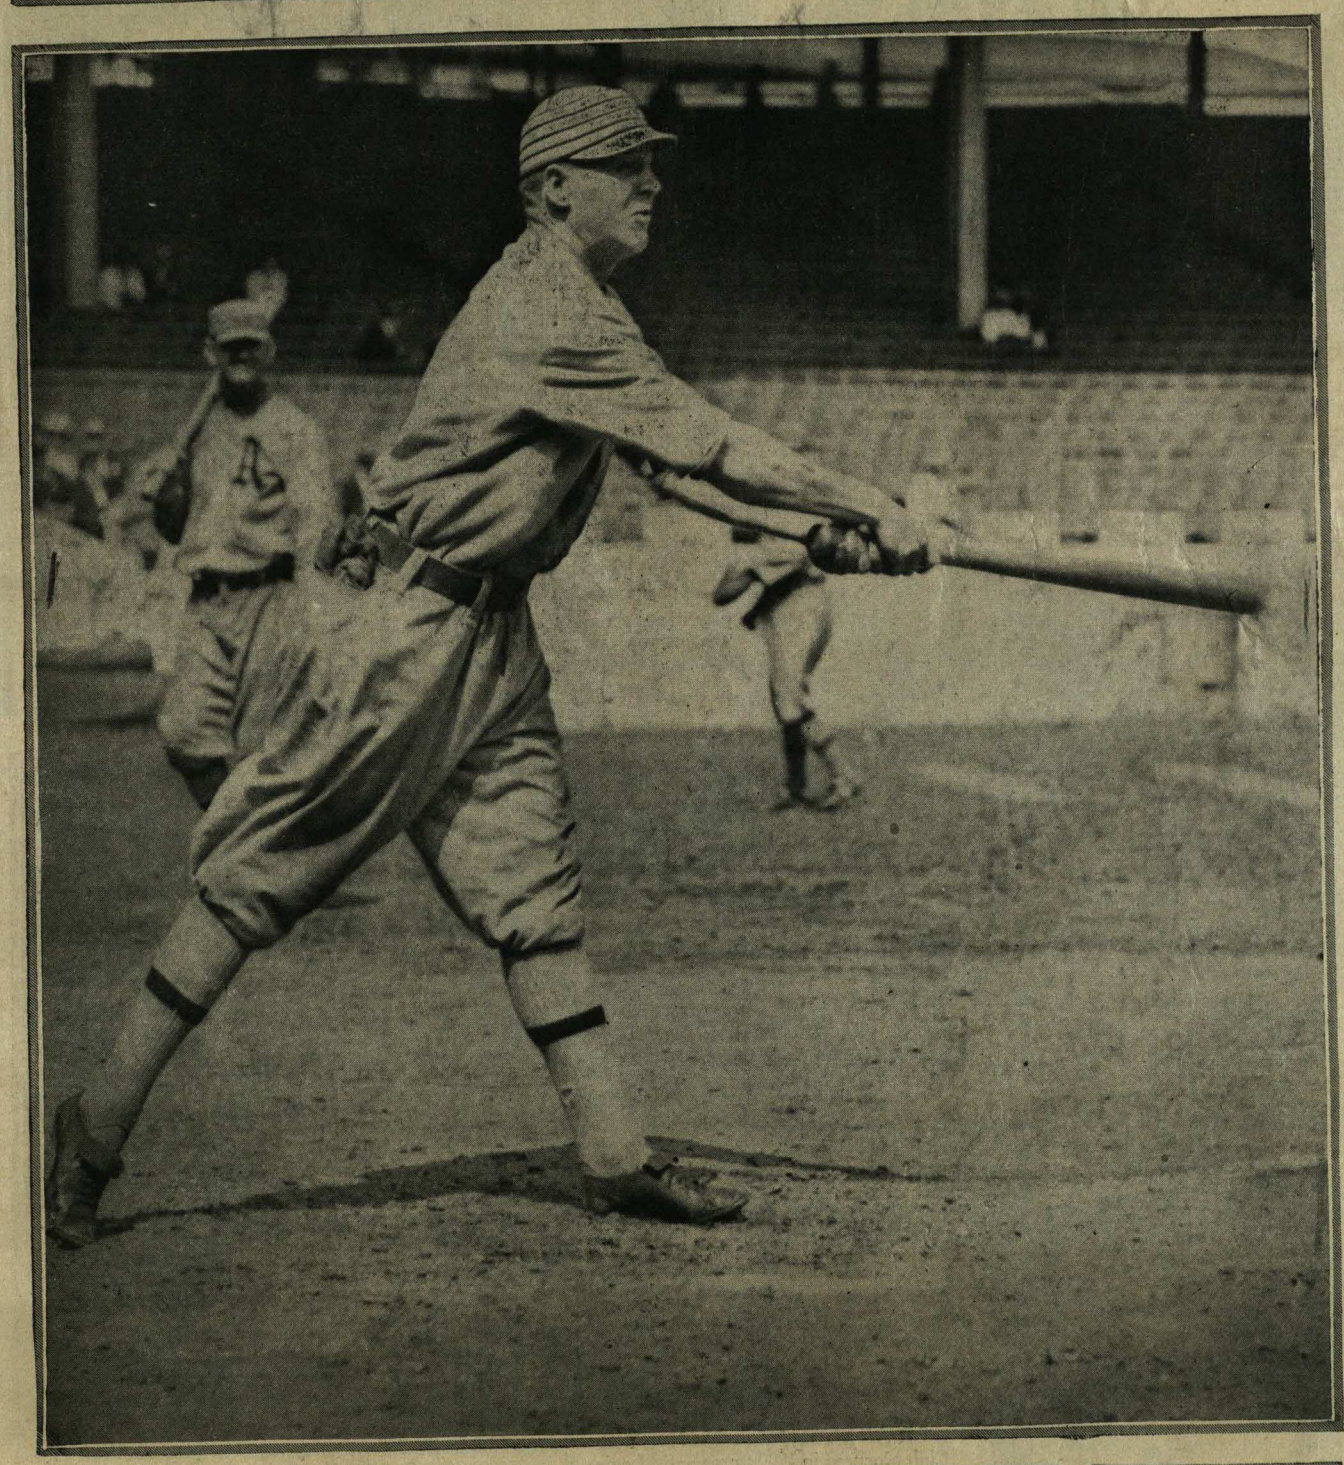


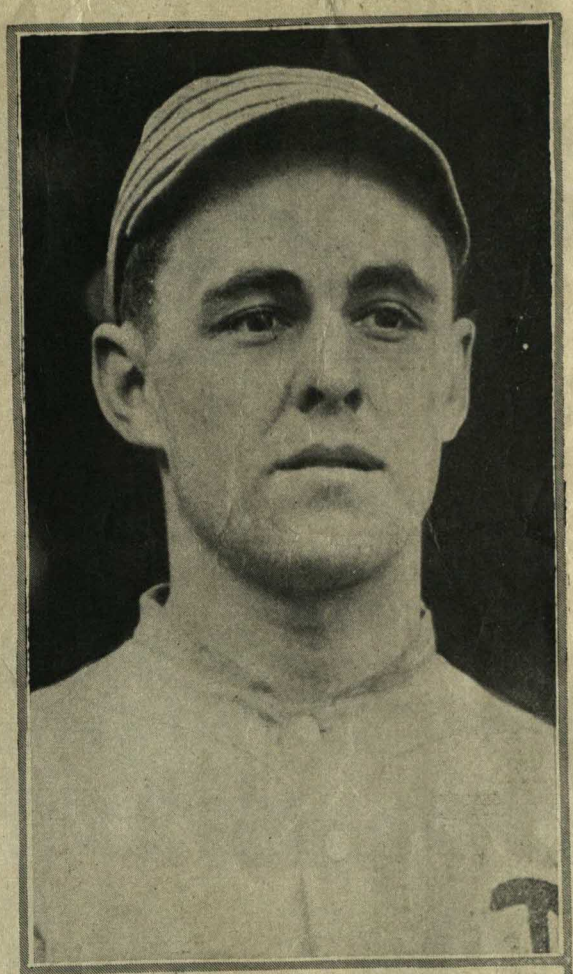
CHARLES L. HERZOG, THIRD BASEMAN.

He comes from Maryland, where he was born twenty-seven years ago. First he attracted attention when playing baseball with independent and semi-professional clubs in the Cumberland Valley. The Reading Club of the Tri-State League gave him a trial in 1907, and he at once made good. The New York Club drafted him from Reading and used him as a substitute infielder and outfielder until 1910, when he was sent to the Boston Club in a trade. In 1911 he was shifted to short field, where he did splendid work. In July the New York Club bought him for cash, plus Shortstop Bridwell, and placed him at third base, where he has done stellar work ever since.

THE INFIELD—PHILADELPHIA'S PRIDE

EXPERTS HAVE DECLARED THAT NO TEAM EVER HAD A STRONGER COMBINATION THAN THESE FOUR ATHLETICS.



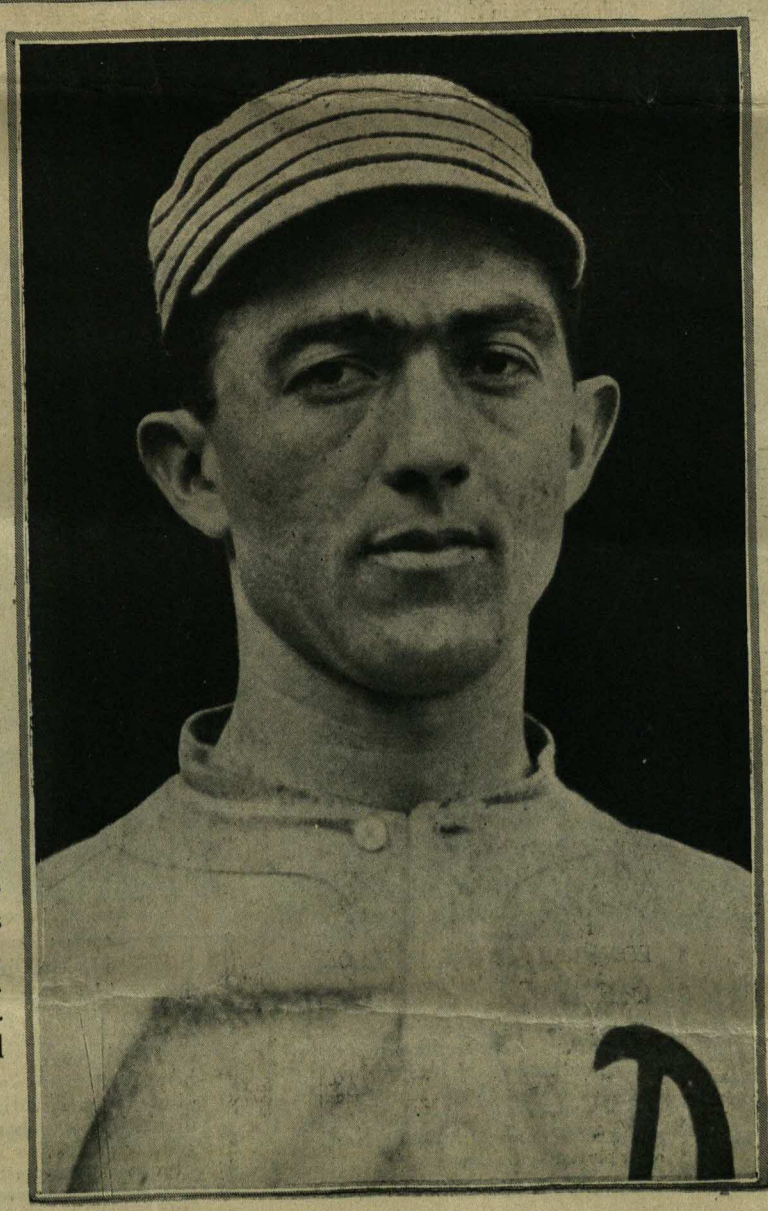


JOHN P. McINNES, First Baseman

"Stuffy" McInnes is one of the most brilliant young players ever lifted into a major league at his age. He was born at Malden, Mass., in 1890; weighs 155 pounds, and is 5 feet, 8 inches in height. He began with the Haverhill, Mass., team three years ago, but was secured by Connie Mack for the 1910 season. McInnes had not much opportunity of showing his merit that season, but in the few games in which he pitched he showed considerable form. In mid-season of 1911, Davis declined so much in batting that it was decided to give McInnes a trial at first base, and he made good at once. McInnes is a right-handed thrower and batter, and a hard hitter.

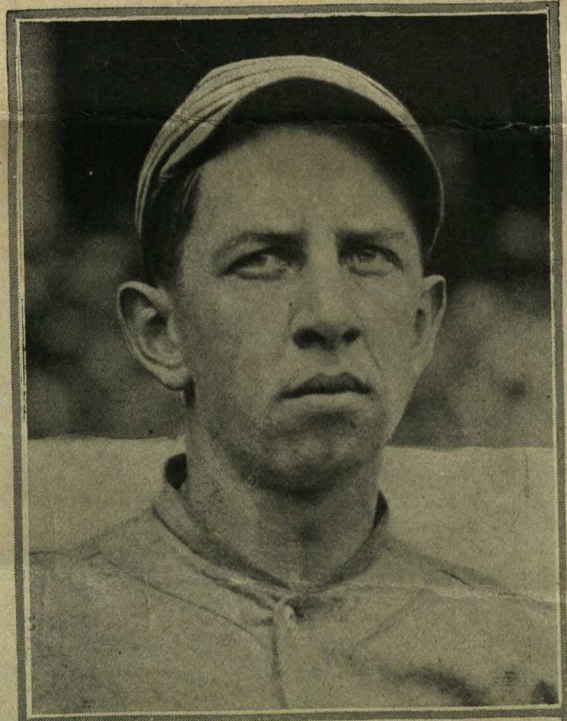
JOHN J. BARRY, SHORT STOP.

Barry was born at Meriden, Conn., April 26, 1887, weighs 160 pounds, and is 5 feet, 8 inches in height. Barry went to Holy Cross College, Worcester, Mass., where he soon gained prominence and attracted the attention of several major league managers. Connie Mack was the fortunate man, for he had Barry's name on a contract in 1908. Barry had played every infield position at Holy Cross, but Mack soon discovered that he was a natural short stop, and placed him there. Barry is a right-handed thrower and hitter.



J. F. BAKER, THIRD BASEMAN.

"Home Run" Baker was born in Trappe, Md., on March 13, 1886, is 6 feet tall and weighs 175 pounds. His first professional engagement was with the Reading, Penn., Tri-State League team, in 1908, and his work there soon attracted Connie Mack's eye. Mack decided that Baker would be an acquisition to his team and engaged him in the Fall of 1908. He was a big success with the Athletics from the jump in 1909, and was the first player to knock a ball over the wall of the new Shibe Park, in the Spring it was opened. His batting average in 1910 was .307, and he fielded .920. Baker has improved steadily and now is ranked with the best third basemen in the league. He is a left-handed batter and right-handed thrower.



EDWARD T. COLLINS, Second Baseman.

Collins was born at Millertown, N. Y., May 2, 1887. He is 5 feet, 10 inches high, and weighs 160 pounds. He first came into prominence at Columbia University, where he played baseball and football. He excelled in both branches of athletics and finally was persuaded to play for the Athletics. He did so at first under the assumed name of Sullivan in 1906, but in 1907 he resumed his correct name. For two years he was kept on the bench, but two seasons ago he got a place on the regular team and at once made good. His hitting, fielding and base running put him in the front ranks, and today he is considered one of the best ball players in the country. Collins is a left handed batter and a right-handed thrower.

GIANTS HAIL FROM MANY STATES

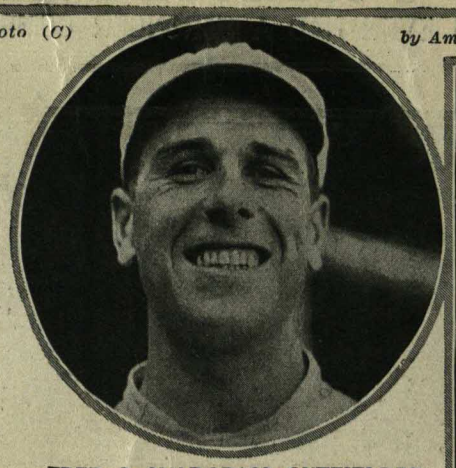
GROVER C. HARTLEY, CATCHER.

Hartley has been playing professional baseball only a short time. He started the season of 1910 with the Springfield, Ill., Club of the I. I. I. League. In August he was sold to Toledo, and on September 1 New York drafted him. He has had little opportunity to show with the Giants, owning to the constant availability of Meyers and Wilson for service.

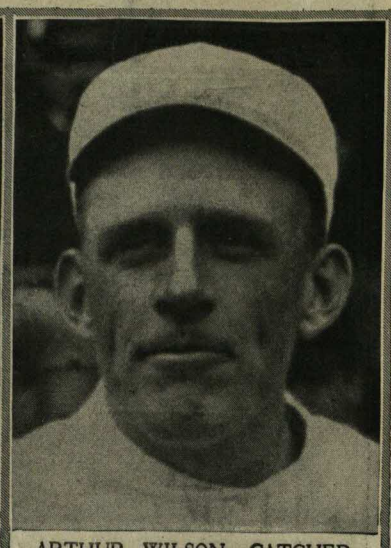


FRED C. SNODGRASS, OUTFIELDER.

Snodgrass, whose batting created a sensation in the National League season of 1910, was born at Ventura, Cal., on October 18, 1887, and now makes his home at Los Angeles. He is a right-handed batter and thrower. Since 1909 he has been tackling the outfield job with success.

LAWRENCE DOYLE, SECOND BASEMAN.

"Larry" Doyle was purchased by New York in July, 1907, for $4,500, the highest sum ever paid for a player in the minor league class. He was born at Caseyville, Ill., July 31, 1886. In his youth he was a coal miner.



ARTHUR WILSON, CATCHER.

Wilson joined the New York Club in 1909. In 1910 he caught in 26 games. had a fielding average of .975 and hit for .269. In 1911 he caught in 60 games and batted around .285. He was born at Macon, Ill., December 11, 1885. New York purchased him in 1910.

JAMES THORPE, OUTFIELDER.

"Jim" Thorpe is principally famous through his remarkable performance in last year's Olympic Games, in which he established an enviable record. He was declared a professional shortly after his return to this country for playing baseball in the Appalachian League during 1909 and 1910. He has been called the "perfect athlete," is 33 years old, stands over six feet, and weighs 185 pounds.

GEORGE J. BURNS, OUTFIELDER.

Burns was born at St. Johnsville, N. Y., 23 years ago. He attracted attention with the Utica Club of New York State League in 1910. The New York Club purchased hum that Fall.

JOHN BANNERMAN McLEAN, CATCHER.

McLean, the tallest catcher in the National League, stands 6 feet 5¼ inches and weighs 228 pounds. He was born in 1882 at Cambridge, Mass. Cincinnati purchased him in 1908, and he joined the Giants this year.

(Photos by Underwood & Underwood.)

JOHN J. MURRAY, OUTFIELDER.

"Red" Murray, whom the New York Club procured in 1909 from the St. Louis Club, was born at Arnott, Penn., on March 4, 1884, and acquired the rudiments of baseball while a normal school student at Lock Haven, Penn. He played professional ball at Corning, N. Y., and Elmira, N. Y., in 1904 and 1905 and was a premier while at Notre Dame University. He is of bulky build, fast on his feet, and a top-notcher in his profession.

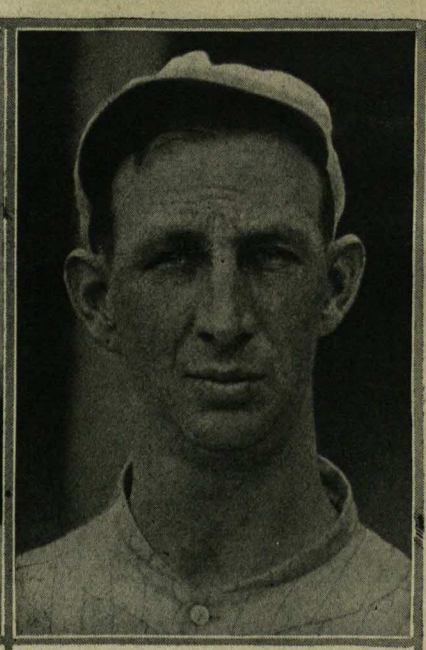
CLAUDE COOPER, OUTFIELDER.

Cooper hails from Crowell, Texas, where he was born in 1890. He was a member of several amateur teams and in 1910 joined Fort Worth of the Texas League. He played for two seasons, showing great speed both in the field and on the bases. He batted over .300 and attracted the attention of Manager McGraw when the Giants were training at Marlin Springs, Texas, last Spring.

FREDERICK C. MERKLE, FIRST BASEMAN.

Merkle was purchased in August, 1907, from the Tecumseh Club of the Southern Michigan League. The youngster was born at Watertown, Wis., December 20, 1888, and weighs 190 pounds. He began semi-professional ball as a pitcher about Toledo, Ohio, his home.

(Photo (c) by the International News Service.)



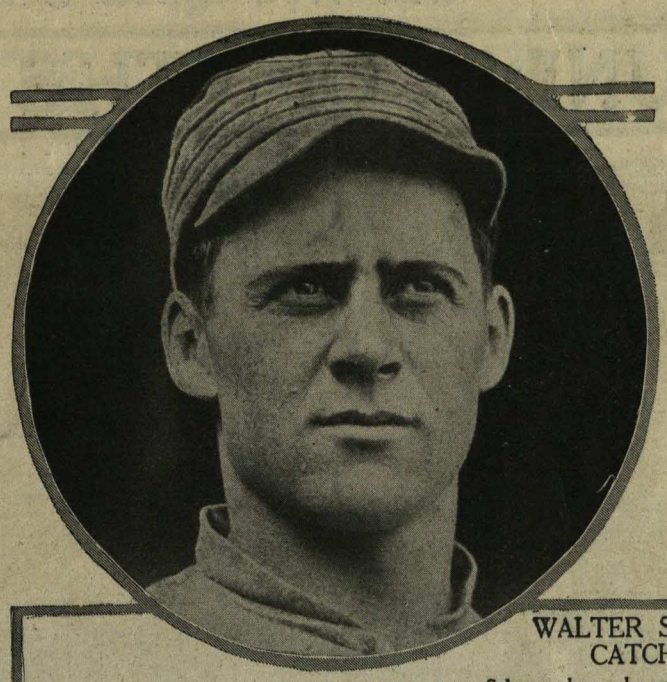
EDWARD L. GRANT, INFIELDER.

Grant is the utility baseman of the Giants. He was born in the West and joined the Philadelphia National League Club, where he gained an enviable reputation both for fielding and batting. He is particularly fast on bases. Manager Dooin transferred him to the Cincinnati Club, where he played one season before he was exchanged with several other players to the Giants.

HAROLD McCORMICK, OUTFIELDER.

McCormick was born in Philadelphia in 1881 and is a graduate of Bucknell College. He made his professional debut in 1901 with the Providence team under the name of McMahon. In 1903 he played with the Jersey City Club, from which the New York National League Club purchased him. He remained out of baseball until 1908, when he was reinstated and transferred by Philadelphia to New York. In 1909 he again retired for two years, but reported once more in 1912.

ATHLETICS OF WHOM MACK IS PROUD



WALTER SCHANG, CATCHER.

Schang shares honors with Schalk of Chicago as the best young catcher of the year. He was born in Wales, N. Y., on Aug. 22, 1890. He is 5 feet, 8 inches tall, and weighs 180 pounds. Schang has developed with amazing rapidity. Last Spring he came to the Athletics after but a few months of professional experience. In 1912 he was playing with the Pullmans of Buffalo, a semi-professional team, when Manager Stallings of Buffalo took him into the International League. In the last few months of the season he batted at a .334 clip. He has been the catching mainstay this season.

JOHN W. LAPP, CATCHER.

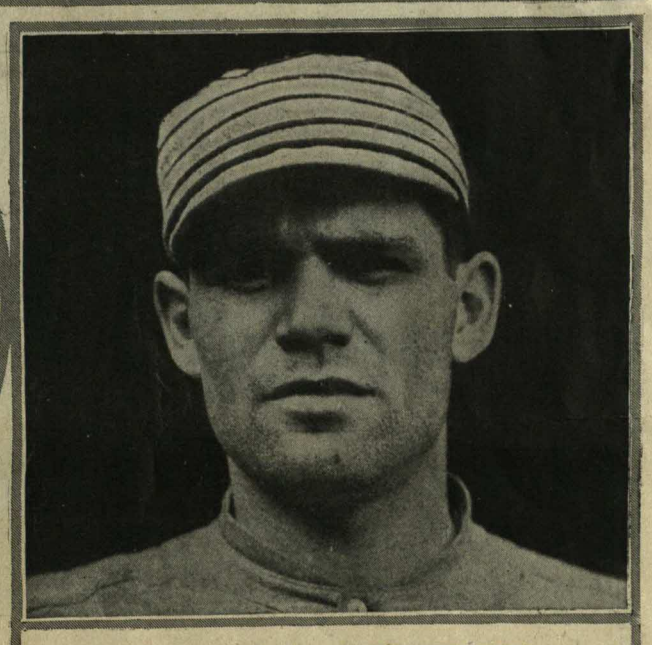
Lapp first saw the light in Frazer, Pa., on Sept. 10, 1884. He played amateur ball with Berwyn in the Main Line League in 1906, and in 1907 he went to Portsmouth, Va. Lapp tarried but a short time in the south, returning to Chester, South Atlantic League, the same year. He went to Hazelton, Atlantic League, in 1908, and was reinstated in the Fall of that year. Since that time he has been with Connie Mack, except for a few games in 1911 with Newark. Lapp is right-handed.

REUBEN W. OLDRING, OUTFIELDER.

Oldring was born of American parents in New York City, May 20, 1884, and learned to play ball on the lots of the East Side. In the latter part of 1905 he was taken from the Hoboken Club by the Montgomery Club of the Southern League. Oldring's work with Montgomery attracted general attention and in the middle of the season the Athletics purchased his release. At the end of the Southern League season he returned to New York and played a number of games with the New York Americans. He made such an impression that the New York Club, unaware of the Athletics' purchase, drafted him in 1906, which draft was subsequently set aside by the National Commission. Oldring stands 5 feet, 9 inches, and weighs 180 pounds in playing condition. He throws and bats right handed.

IRA THOMAS, CATCHER.

Thomas was born in Ballston Spa, N. Y., Jan. 22, 1881. He weighs 195 pounds, and stands six feet two inches. In 1902, he secured his first professional engagement at Hartford, Conn., and after that was with Newark, Providence, the New York Americans, and Detroit. Mack needed a catcher two seasons ago, and paid a fancy price to the Tigers for the backstop. That the purchase was justifiable has been proved, and today Thomas has few superiors behind the bat. He is a right-handed thrower and batter.

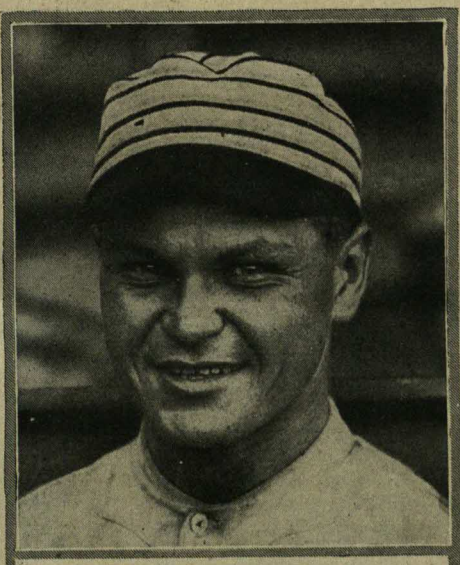


EDWARD MURPHY, OUTFIELDER.

"Eddy" Murphy was born at Hancock, N. Y., Oct. 2, 1891 He is 5 feet 11 inches tall, and weighs 165 pounds. He made his first appearance in professional ball at Scranton, Pa. in 1911, in the New York State League. The following year found him at Baltimore in the International League, with which club he led the batting and was considered one of the best men in the League. Manager Mack secured him for the Athletics in the Fall of 1912. He bats left handed and throws right.

JAMES WALSH, OUTFIELDER.

Walsh was born in Ireland Sept. 22, 1888. He is 5 feet 10½ inches in height, and weighs 175 pounds. He played on several amateur teams in Central New York and was tried out by the Syracuse Club, New York State League, four years ago. One year later he was transferred to Baltimore of the International League, where he established a big reputation as a heavy hitter. His work in this line placed him at the head of his club last year and at the end of the season he joined the Athletics.



AMOS A. STRUNK, OUTFIELDER

Strunk for a long time led the American League in batting, although he was not often enough at bat to allow him to rank in the official averages for the automobile which was awarded to the leading batsman. Strunk is a six footer, and weighs 165 pounds. He is right-handed. He attracted attention in 1908 in the outlaw Atlantic League, from which Mack picked him. He was farmed out to the Milwaukee Club in 1909, but did such brilliant work that Mack recalled him.

DANIEL MURPHY, OUTFIELDER

"Danny" Murphy, the great outfielder and long-distance hitter, was born in Philadelphia in 1876. He first played professionally with Worcester, Mass., when only 18 years old. He was not quite fast enough, however, and Attleboro, Mass., secured him in 1899. One year later he went to Norwich, Conn., and before the season was over he had been bought by New York. He was returned to Norwich in the Spring of 1902. In July of that year Mack bought him for the Athletics. He played second base regularly until 1909, when he was assigned to the outfield to make room for Eddie Collins.

PETER F. DALEY, OUTFIELDER.

Daley was born in California in 1884. He gained his early experience in the minor league teams in the West. His first work in the bigger professional leagues was with the Oakland, Cal., club of the Pacific Coast League, in which he was the heaviest batter for nearly two seasons. He was purchased by the Athletics last Spring and has been a valuable utility man for the outfield. He throws and bats with the left hand.

WHEN THE HOME GROUNDS OF THE GIANTS AND ATHLETICS ARE THRONGED.

HOME FIELD OF THE NEW YORK NATIONALS—THE POLO GROUNDS.

The history of the Polo Grounds dates back to 1888, when New York won the National League championship pennant on the old baseball field north of 110th Street, between Fifth and Seventh Avenues. When the lease of those grounds ran out the club got a new home at 155th Street and Eighth Avenue. It was known as Manhattan Field, and was intended as the permanent home of the Giants, but in 1890 there was a revolt in the National League ranks, and the players organized a rival league known as the Brotherhood. Grounds adjoining Manhattan Field were leased. The brotherhood quickly went out of existence, and the Giants took possession of their former rival's home in 1891 and changed its name to the Polo Grounds. In order to head off further opposition, Manhattan Field was held under control of the New York club for a year, when the National League assumed the lease. This was held until three years ago, when the New York club secured a thirty-five-year renewal of the lease of the Polo Grounds, with the stipulation that Manhattan Field would not be used for baseball or football without the sanction of the club. The grandstands and the bleachers were destroyed by fire in 1911. The seating capacity of the present structure is 38,000, but with standing room there is accommodation for 45,000. It is the largest stadium in the world devoted to baseball, and cost $750,000. Officially it is called the Brush Stadium, in memory of John T. Brush, the late President of the club, but popularly it retains its old name of the Polo Grounds.

SHIBE PARK, PHILADELPHIA, ONE OF THE FINEST BASEBALL FIELDS

Philadelphia set the pace for modern baseball stadiums, and the National League park in that city was the first of its kind erected for baseball purposes in this country. The invasion of the Quaker City by the American League in 1901 found the city totally unprepared for a second team. President Benjamin Shibe and Manager Connie Mack selected an entire block in the northwestern part of town and erected a wooden structure, which proved inadequate. The continued popularity of the Philadelphia Athletics, owing to their successes in the championship races, made it necessary to furnish additional accommodation for the followers of the game. It was decided to enlarge the grounds, but this made it necessary to move, as the city refused to close the street. A plot was purchased by the club on the outskirts of the city. Permanent buildings, grandstand, bleachers and club offices were put up. The new home of the Athletics is called Shibe Park. It is built in Colonial fashion on the cantilever style, with a two-story grandstand and bleachers extending on three sides of the playing field. It is attractive in appearance, and all the interior arrangements are in keeping with the necessities of the game. Owing to the park's location, it has been possible to extend the playing field, which is one of the largest in the American and National Leagues' circuits. The present grounds are the fourth occupied by the Athletics since the club was organized by William Sharsig in 1881.

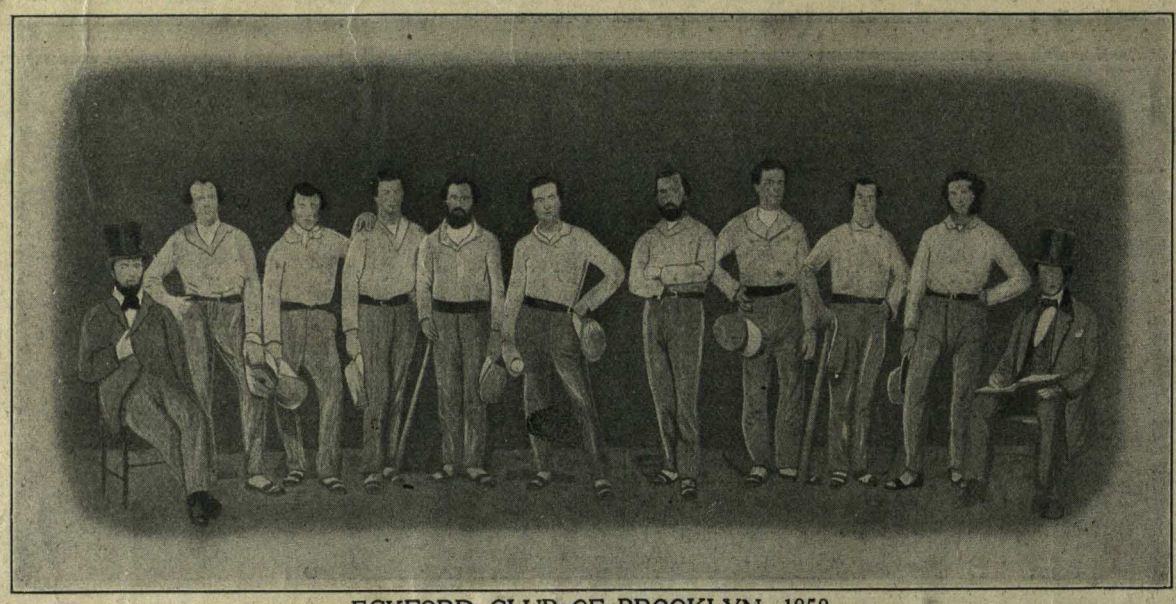
AMERICA'S GAME FROM EARLY DAYS.

For many years it was popularly supposed that baseball had its origin with the English game of rounders. In order to determine this point, a commission composed of A. G. Spalding, A. G. Mills, Senator Arthur P. Gorman, Senator Morgan G. Bulkeley, Nicholas E. Young, A. J. Reach, George Wright and James E. Sullivan was appointed in 1907, and it was shown conclusively that baseball was of modern and purely American origin.



ECKFORD CLUB OF BROOKLYN, 1858.
During the early days of baseball in New York the Eckfords of Brooklyn were frequently contenders for Metropolitan Championship honors. The club developed many of the best players in the '50s and the '60s, including Al Reach, later Captain and Second Baseman of the champion Athletics of Philadelphia.

America's national game originated with the Knickerbocker Club, New York City, in 1845. The club published certain elementary rules in that year, although in 1839 the first known diagram of the diamond, indicating the position of the players, had been drawn by Abner Doubleday in Cooperstown, N. Y. This diagram provided for eleven men on a side, instead of nine. The diagram for the players as they stand to-day was adopted by the Knickerbocker Club.

The first regular match game of baseball under the Knickerbocker Club rules was played in New York on June 10, 1846. The Knickerbocker and New York Clubs were the contestants. It was not until five years later that another match game was played, June 3, 1851, when the Knickerbockers defeated the Washingtons, 21 to 11. The old rules, crude compared with those of the present day, governed the game up to the time of the organization of the first National Association, at Cooper Institute, on March 9, 1859. This was followed by four games of the Excelsior Club of Brooklyn in July, 1860, when they defeated all the opposing teams in Western New York, Pennsylvania and Maryland. Many clubs then sprang up in the East, and in 1866 the Atlantics of Brooklyn and Athletics of Philadelphia played for the championship in Philadelphia before 30,000 persons.

From the date of the first convention in New York the game grew rapidly in popularity. The great civil war put a serious check to the sport, but as soon as the war was over baseball took a new lease of life. To the convention in New York, on Dec. 13, 1865, thirty clubs sent delegates. There were representatives of St. Louis, Chattanooga, Louisville, Washington, Boston, Philadelphia and other cities.

ON TENTED FIELDS—IN PRISON PENS.
Baseball was popular at the time of the civil war, and regimental nines played on the parade grounds when the soldiers were in camp. Impromptu teams were made up and games played by the Union soldiers when confined in Confederate prison pens. (Photos from "America's National Game.")

In 1869 the Cincinnati Club put its entire team under salary, establishing the present professional system. The success of this salaried nine was so decided that it gave the game a great impetus all over the country. Teams were organized in every city, and the game soon was on a severely professional basis. In order to purify the sport, the first "Professional Association" was organized in 1871 and called the National Association. To suppress the betting evil, which had crept into the sport, the National League was organized in 1876. The League has lived, flourished and grown stronger every season. The Presidents have been ex-Gov. Bulkeley of Connecticut, William A. Hulbert of Chicago, A. G. Mills of New York, N. E. Young of Washington, Harry C. Pulliam of Pittsburgh, and the present incumbent, Thomas J. Lynch.

The National Agreement was adopted in 1883, and is the supreme law in the settlement of disputes which arise between associations or leagues, or between clubs of different organizations. On Feb. 29, 1877, a second prominent baseball league, known as the International Association of Baseball Clubs, was formed, and in 1882 the American Association took the field. The latter was the first rival to the National League. It flourished until 1891, when the National League absorbed all that was left of it. The American League was created in 1900 by Byron Bancroft Johnson, who is still its President. It was bitterly opposed by the National League, and considerable difficulty was experienced in obtaining grounds in New York and other National League cities. The fight was waged several years, and the parent League was robbed of many of its best players. In the end the National League was compelled to recognize its rival, and a National Commission was formed, comprising the Presidents of each league and a third member selected by the two. This Commission is now supreme in baseball matters in the United States.

ATHLETICS OF PHILADELPHIA IN 1874.

The Athletics was the first great professional team in Philadelphia. The club was organized in 1871 and made an enviable record in the National League. Adrian C. (Pop) Anson played his first professional game on the Athletic team.

CHICAGO AND ALL-AMERICA WORLD TOUR TEAMS.

In the Winter of 1888–'89 A. G. Spalding introduced baseball abroad through a tour of the world. The teams were the Chicago National League and an opposing nine comprising the best players in the league. The men visited Honolulu, New Zealand, Australia, Egypt, Italy, France and England.

JOHN MONTGOMERY WARD, probably the most widely known baseball player the country ever produced. He was playing from 1887 to 1895. Having started as a pitcher he developed into the leading shortstop of the National League. He was Captain of the Giants for several years and the organizer of the National Brotherhood of Baseball Players.

Most of these players were sufficiently well known to be remembered. In the upper left hand corner are Miller, McGinn and Dunn; in the upper right corner, Warner and Gilbert. In the front row are Bresnahan, Mathewson, Taylor and Cronin. Among those near the centre are Bowerman, McGraw, McGinnity, Van Haltren, Mertes and Brown.

Baseball had its origin on Manhattan Island, and a club was organized on Sept. 23, 1845. Games were played later on a plot at Twenty-seventh Street and Madison Avenue. In 1865 the game became Nationalized by the returning soldiers from the Civil War, and a small factory in New York began the manufacture of baseballs. In 1868 the Mutuals of New York played a series of games with the Athletics of Philadelphia. Many clubs were organized; the most famous was the Atlantic, which came into prominence in 1869-1870.

Interest in the game increased, and it was well patronized, but it had its real commencement in 1884, when Providence and the Metropolitan Clubs played their series in New York for the world's championship. In 1888, the original New York Giants captured the National League pennant and subsequently defeated the St. Louis Browns, the champions of the American Association in the race for world's honors. The New York team that year included Buck Ewing, Tim Keefe, Mickey Welsh, Roger Connor, D. Richardson, John M. Ward, James O'Rourke, Mike Tiernan, George F. Gore and other equally famous players, probably the greatest aggregation of players ever brought together.

John B. Day was the first president of the club, and Jim Mutrie was the secretary and manager. He was succeeded by Andrew Freedman, who was at the head of the club for several years. In 1904 John T. Brush sold out his interest in the Cincinnati National League Club and bought the control of the Giants. He brought with him John J. McGraw as manager, and from that date the Giants came into life again, winning the National League flag in that year, as well as in 1905, and in the latter season beating the Athletics of Philadelphia for the world's pennant.

The aggressive policy of McGraw, backed up by the Club's President, has given New York five National League Championships.

DEVELOPMENT OF PHILADELPHIA'S ATHLETICS.

Philadelphia, with Boston and New York, shares the honor of being one of the first cities to harbor baseball. The Athletics and the Keystones were the great teams in Philadelphia during the sixties. In 1871, eleven years after the organization of the Athletics, that team entered the race for the National baseball championship, competing with all the great teams in the East and West, and coming out victorious. The Athletics remained in the National League for six years, and then played independently.

It was in 1881 that the American Association was formed at Cincinnati, and the Athletics remained in the Association until September, when they disbanded. The second great era in baseball, however, really came in Philadelphia in 1883, when the Athletics won the championship of the American Association, the club having been reorganized in 1883 by William Sharsig, Lew Simmons, and Charlie Mason.

From this time forward until 1890 the Athletics cut little figure in the American. In 1890 the Louisvilles captured the Association flag, and the Athletics finished at the tail end of the procession. In 1891 Boston won the pennant, and the Athletics finished in fourth place. This was the last year of the American Association.

In 1901 the American League forced its way into Philadelphia, and Connie Mack transferred his Milwaukee franchise in the Western League to the Quaker City and organized the Athletic Club, with Benjamin Shibe as President. Mack continued as manager. He is now equal owner with President Shibe, and has become one of the really big figures in the baseball world. Since he has had charge of the Athletics he has been winning pennants with supposedly classless baseball players. Mack has picked up mere youngsters and inexperienced players and built them into steady, winning players.

In 1902, 1905, 1910, 1911, and again this year, Mack won the American League championships with the Athletic team, while prior to this season the world's series had been captured by the Philadelphia American League team three times. No other team in either the American or National League has won so many championships in twelve years.

ON OLD 110TH STREET GROUNDS

When this photograph of New York's Giants and Philadelphia's National League team was taken the baseball season of 1888 was just opening. All the stands were filled in the old Polo Grounds, north of 110th Street, between Fifth and Seventh Avenues. The Giants in that year won the National League Pennant, while the St. Louis team won the trophy of the American Association. Veteran baseball enthusiasts may be able to identfiy New York's players in the picture, including Slattery, Mike Tiernan, Buck Ewing, Roger Connor, Johnny Ward, Danny Richardson, Foster, Mickey Welch, Jim O'Rourke, Gore, Hatfield, Whitney, Tim Keefe, Titcomb, and Murphy. The two silk-hatted men were Jim Mutrie, the Giants' Manager (on the left,) and Harry Wright, Manager of the Dwarfs.

WORLD CHAMPIONSHIP IN OTHER YEARS.

Baseball games to decide the World's Championship date from 1884, but there was an interval with no contests between 1891 and 1902, inclusive. So the series of 1913 stands seventeenth on the list. Records previous to this year were as follows:

Panthers Vs. Topeka Today; Fans to Greet McAllister

—By Staff Photographer.

Lewis McAllister,

in whose honor today at Morris park has been designated as "McAllister day."

When Dale Gear leads his Topeka club of the Western league out to Morris park this afternoon to inaugurate a two-game series with the 1914 Panther squad, local fandom will be given a twofold treat. In addition to welcoming several players who gained fame in the Texas league in former days, the fans will receive their first real glimpse of the men Manager Nance has been whipping into shape for the coming pennant chase. The game this afternoon and the Sunday contest will be called promptly at 3 o'clock.

In honor of Lewis McAllister, captain and chief catcher of the Topeka team, who began his baseball career in Fort Worth eighteen years ago, in company with "Kid" Nance, Dale Gear, Harry Steinfeldt and others who later went to the "big show," today is to be known as "McAllister day," and a large number of the friends of the former Panther city player are planning to accord him a hearty greeting. McAllister will appear in today's game, and also in tomorrow's combat.

Gear, Glaze, Forsythe and Riggs, all former Texas leaguers, also will be seen in Topeka uniforms, and the majority of strange faces in today's contest probably will be seen in the Fort Worth line-up.

Manager Nance is especially well pleased with the progress his squad has made during the past week, and he expects his men will give good accounts of themselves in the two games with the Western leaguers. Of last season's Panther team, Howard, Salm, Kneaves and probably McAvoy will be the only veterans who will participate in this afternoon's pastiming. For the mound work, Darnell, Mears and Speer will be selected.

Dimpfel, a right handed pitcher, who was with the Montgomery team in the Southern association last season, has been signed by Manager Nance. Roy Fentress, the star of the 1913 hurling staff, is expected to report here either today or Sunday. To date Eberline and McCafferty are the only two Panthers who have not forwarded their signed contracts. The former, it is understood, will be traded or sold, while the latter has signed as an umpire in the Western league.

The probable line-up for today's game follows:

Fort Worth.	Position.	Topeka.
Salm, Thompson	First Base.	Koerner
McAvoy, Mason	Second Base.	Dowd
Nokes, Parkin	Third Base.	Cochran
Kneaves	Shortstop.	French
McLaurin	Left Field.	Fosythe
Howard	Center Field.	Riggs
Lee, McIver	Right Field.	Gear
Jordan, Curry	Catcher.	McAllister, Rapp
Darnell, Mears, Speer	Pitcher.	Faircloth, Glaze

TEXAS LEAGUE HAS HAD MANY UPS AND DOWNS

Will Celebrate Thirty-Fourth Birthday at Opening of Present Season.

The Texas League which will soon begin its thirty-fourth season, is one of the oldest and most flourishing baseball associations in the country. Several times in its existence the league has met with adversities and forced to drop out of the limelight for a short time, but it always came back bigger and stronger than ever.

The league was first organized in 1881 and was composed of teams representing Fort Worth, Dallas, Waco, San Antonio, Houston, Galveston and a team from Denison and Sherman combined. The league began in April and closed in September. Early in the first season Waco dropped out, forcing Austin to do likewise. Officials of the league were Alex Easton of Galveston, president, and J. C. McNealus, secretary.

The league flourished for four years, but in 1884 it was so strong that most of the players were signed by the larger leagues of the East and North, which so depleted the material that the league did not reorganize the next year.

In 1888 the league was revived, and lasted for three years. In 1895 the league was organized for the third time, composed of teams from Dallas, Shreveport, Fort Worth, San Antonio, Austin, Galveston, Houston and Sherman-Denison. It disbanded again in 1898, on account of the Spanish-American war.

The present Texas League was reorganized in 1902 and has been very successful. Not once has the league been broken up on account of improper schedules, lack of interest or other extraneous matters, and every year eight teams have made up the circuit.

Winners of pennants in the various years of hte league's existence were as follows: 1881-82-83-84, Dallas; 1888, Dallas; 1889, Austin; 1890, Galveston; 1895-96, Fort Worth; 1897, San Anton[illegible] 1899, Galveston; 1902, Corsicana; 19[illegible] Dallas; 1904, Corsicana; 1905, F[illegible] Worth; 1906, Cleburne; 1907, Austin; 1908, San Antonio; 1909, Houston; 1910, Dallas; 1911, Austin; 1912-13, Houston; 1914, Houston and Waco, tied.

The league this year will be represented by teams from Ft. Worth, Houston, Galveston, Waco, Beaumont, Shreveport and San Antonio. Austin's poor showing in last season's race necessitated the sale of the Texas League franchise of that city to Shreveport, which town was once in the Texas League.

Paris and Temple, Texas, and Oklahoma City, Okla., have been members of the league at different intervals.

POP'S PALAVER

Ceece Is Gone.
Was a Good Cat.
Will Be Missed.
Victim of Fate.
Gray in Uniform.
Good Luck, Boy.

By Pop Boone

Quiet reigned in the ball orchard. Where but a few minutes before were 1,500 persons engaged in the noisy business of rooting at a wonder game from their standpoint there remained but the droning of the sports writers' voices, phoning the box score. Down in the concession stand John was putting things to rights after a busy day.

From the clubhouse walked a familiar figure—a man's figure that has come to be loved by the ball fans in the days of yesterday. No jaunty steps as of old characterized the slow, almost reluctant advance to the exit gate. In his right hand he carried a bat; in his left an empty suit roll. He stopped to shake hands with a couple of police officers who had lingered a moment to drink a coke. Then he walked on out through the wicket.

So passed Cecil Coombs, who has been a good Cat and a valuable one. When he again goes through the wicket he will be in an alien uniform—almost a hostile one, for he is slated to join the Spudders at once. No more will the fans see him walk to the plate with two bats in his hands, smooth off his standing place with one of them, then toss it to the boy; no more will they watch his deliberate assumption of his stance, on the back line of the batter's box; no more will they thrill at his battle with opposing pitcher for a walk, or see one of his ringing hits wing its way into left field.

He is a good lead-off man and a good fielder. For us he rose to heights of baseball he had never before assailed. At Dallas he was known as just a good ball player, but when Dallas turned him loose nobody wanted him but us. For Fort Worth and the Cats he turned into one of the best all-around men in the league. 1921 he led the league in the numb of walks; last year he hit .311 f us. Always he was fighting to t last ditch—and I can't forget t many late rallies he has started wh all seemed lost.

Cecil has gone and I'm sorry. I was more a victim of fate than la of usefulness. He just happened be on the bench when a winni combination was found, that's a Room had to be made for anoth pitcher. Five pitchers can scarc carry on a hard campaign. In effort to keep four outfielders, t Cats were instrumental in calling league vote on raising the pla limit to seventeen men. It was vot down. No club can carry four o fielders and six pitchers. Four o fielders are all right, but five pit ers are not enough. So waivers w asked of the clubs and Wichita Fa refused to waive. Dolly Gray was uniform yesterday. He is right as fox and rarin' to go.

And good old Cecil Coombs wall reluctantly out of the well-loved b orchard, his head down—a sadness his heart that was echoed in m and will be echoed in the hearts the fans. Good bye, and good lu Cecil!

Goes to Spudders

Cecil Coombs, Cat outfielder, who played remarkable ball in the outfield for Jake Atz's tribe in 1921 and 1922, has been sent to the Wichita Falls Spudders to make room for Dolly Gray on the pitching staff.

Athletes Who Battled for Fort Worth in '95

THESE were the athletes whom Fort Worth acclaimed in 1895. They are W. H. Ward's Colts, who represented Fort Worth on the diamond in that year. The picture was preserved by B. A. Burks, Denton, Texas. Cy Mulkey, one of the players, gave the photo to Burks in 1895.

Cat, Steer Feud Began in '95; Thrillers Recalled by Ward

DO YOU remember the good old days folks—when "Ward's Colts" were winning baseball games for Fort Worth—'long about 1895? That was a good many moons ago and many baseball games have been won and lost since the, then, pride of Fort Worth team reigned supreme in the Texas League.

However, there has never been any more exciting, hard fought games played than in the good old days when W. H. (Bill) Ward was managing the "Ward's Colts" for Fort Worth.

Ward, 2005 Hemphill Street, had a 15-year franchise on the Fort Worth Baseball Club, known as the "Ward's Colts" beginning in the year 1888. That is the year in which the Texas League was formed. However, the league was broken up for one season because of the Spanish-American War. The Texas League was composed of four clubs, Fort Worth, Dallas, Corsicana and Paris. There was also a South Texas League which was in no way connected with the "Texas League." There was a consolidation effected later between the South Texas League and the Texas League due to the efforts of Ward, Doak Roberts, Dr. Roby and Morriss Black.

Games Were Thrillers.

The consolidation developed into the present Texas League.

Ward chuckles as he lives over again the [illegible] extra to pitch the remaining games of the series.

McAlister wasn't just a pitcher, being considered as the best utility player in the game. Lou pitched and Fort Worth won. Ted Sullivan took his club to Dallas and said he would never bring them to Fort Worth again.

Ward Likes Baseball.

Players in photo: W. H. Ward, manager, 1; Wolover, captain and catcher, 2; Gettman, center field, 3; Palmur, left field, 4; Mulkey, pitcher, 5; Menefee, right field and catcher, 6; Godell, pitcher, 7; Chamberlain, pitcher, 8; McColley, first base, 9; Hill, second base, 10; Reynolds, shortstop, 11; Pequinney, third base, 12.

Ward has lost track of all of the above excepting Cy Mulkey, pitcher, who is now farming near Sherman and McAlister, now connected with an automobile factory in the East.

There's nothing Ward loves more than to talk baseball and he is still pulling for the "Cats" just as he did his "Colts" in the old days, but whether it's Colts or Cats it all just means "Fort Worth" to Ward.

Galveston Beats Houston.

Special to the Gazette.

GALVESTON, TEX., May 22.—About 1000 spectators witnessed the third game this afternoon between the Galveston and Houston teams. The defeat of the home club yesterday and the caustic criticisms from the local press have had a marked effect upon them to-day, for they played a splendid game, batting the balls all over the field, beating the visitors badly by a score of 8 to 2. The chief feature of the game was the fine fielding on both sides. Nothing passed them and they took in half a dozen difficult sky scrapers with their left hands. The batteries were Trap and Proeser, Lohbeck and Dunn.

Dallas, when each club selected its own umpire, paying his $5 after each game. When the home club failed to win the umpire did not always get his usual $5, which solves the mystery of why the games were thrillers in the good old days.

Fort Worth and Dallas were the strongest clubs in the league during the seasons 1894-95-96 and rivalry between them had its beginning in the games played those seasons. In the year 1896 the most thrilling series between the two clubs took place, according to Ward. At that time, the late Ted Sullivan was manager of the Dallas club and had won the first half of the split season. Dallas was very strong and Ward's "Colts" of Fort Worth were crippled, with only one reliable pitcher, Louis McAlister, a Fort Worth product. His relatives still reside here.

They had a three-game series to decide the winner of the last half of the season, which, if won by Fort Worth would tie up the honors for the entire season with Dallas. The first two games were scheduled to be played in Fort Worth, and McAlister was chosen as the starting pitcher. Fort Worth won the first game, 6 to 2, and Ward was so well pleased with the effectiveness of Lou's pitching that he promised him $25 per day

DIXIE CHAMPS HOIST 1921 PENNANT

Wartime thrills were afforded several thousand fans who witnessed the ceremonies at Panther Park Wednesday afternoon when flags won by the Conquering Cats on the field of battle were run up beneath the Stars and Stripes. Men stood in the stands with bared heads as the band played the National Anthem. Women, too, stood and as the last note of the "Star-Spangled Banner" died away, the crowd broke out in the grand roar and kept it up as the band, American Legion color guard and baseball players came swinging back across the field to the quickstep tune of the old "March King's" famous "Stars and Stripes Forever." It was an inspiring observance of National Flag Day.

Weather conditions for the raising of the new pennants showing that Fort Worth had won the Dixie championship in 1920 and 1921 were ideal. Fans were in a mood to pay honor to their favorite athletes, the ceremony was short and simple and the home guard showed appreciation by winning a ball game, which is against all traditions.

Players on both teams lined up at the plate shortly after 3:30 o'clock. A guard of ex-service men representing the American Legion and carrying the colors headed the line. Amon G. Carter made the short and simple speech of presentation, complimenting the Cats and predicting they would be in the Dixie title series this coming Fall against the champions of the Southern Association. Robert K. Hanger received the flags. The band struck up a quickstep and the flags, the 1920 emblem carried by Tiny Goodbred and the 1921 emblem by Acting Manager Art Phelan, were taken to the flagpole in center field and raised.

John Jacob Atz, who piloted the Champion Cats to both Dixie championships, sat in the home players' dugout until the flags were about to be raised. Then he hobbled to the edge of the dugout. Nothing could induce the disabled skipper to appear before the crowd, but when the flags fluttered to the breeze, he apparently forgot there was a soul in the park other than himself. His eyes were shining and a smile lit up his mobile face.

"Boy, oh, boy!" he murmured. "Ain't that grand!"

And it sure was all of that and then some more.

RAISING THE 1920-21 DIXIE CHAMPIONSHIP EMBLEMS AT PANTHER PARK

Skipper Jake Atz's smile reflects his joy as the championship flags floated in the breeze. The flags as seen through the camera of Frank G. Evans, staff photographer; players lined up for ceremony; marching to flag raising; Acting Manager Art Phelan, who has played an important role in the steady successes achieved by the Cats.

BUZZIN' ROUND WITH BILLY BEE

COPYTRITE

Some years ago the greatest of all slang slingers, Billy Baxter, in a letter to "Dear friend Jim," said, "Sometimes you eat too much, sometimes you drink too much and sometimes you do both. At any rate you feel like the very old scratch the next morning." And that to our way of thinking expresses in a dumb sort of a way, the dull feeling we have this May day in bidding farewell to Cecil Coombs, who goes to the Wichita Falls club via the waiver route. There was a tug at the heart when we saw Cecil walk out of the Panther lair after Friday's game. He carried an empty kaiki suit roll and it reminded us of an incident years ago in "covering" a cyclone aftermath in Brinkley, Ark., where many people had been killed. Two vacant stores had been turned into hospitals. Doctors had sent out curt orders to let the dead stay in the fields and bring in only the injured. This woman had escaped with her life and all she took from her wrecked residence was an empty bird cage with the door swinging wide open. She carried it up and down the debris filled street until some one took her gently by the hand and led her in where hot coffee and sandwiches were being served to the storm refugees.

CECIL COOMBS

COOMBS isn't through as a ball player by any means. The fact Wichita Falls claimed him at the price of $1,500 testifies to this, because Wichita Falls isn't very shy on outfielders when a man like George Whiteman can be kept on the bench. But his passing from the Cat lineup is like breaking up home ties. Coombs has been a stout-hearted ball player for the Cats. He came here as a free agent from the Dallas club, which couldn't use him, although he had played in every game of their 1920 campaign. We remember well when he walked into the office of Paul La Grave and made terms with the Panther chieftain. Both were satisfied. Coombs gave satisfaction as a player and in turn was pleased with the treatment accorded him. He played in two Dixie series. He was an outfielder by preference, but many times served well on first base when Kraft was laid up by injuries.

Last year Coombs had the most successful season of his long career. He hit .311. He was titular leader among first baseman, although he played in only 10 games. He had 104 putouts, six assists and participated in four double plays without an error. He played 146 games in center field, had 313 putouts, 14 assists and 10 errors, so that with four other Texas leaguers he had the glory of being on the honor roll for having been in every game in which his club participated. Fuller, San Antonio; Felix, Shreveport, and Summa and Adams, Wichita Falls, were the others. Fuller is the only one besides Coombs left in the league today and he is on the injured list. Manager Coleman, by the way, expects him to join the Bears in Dallas next Wednesday.

THE passing of Coombs from Fort Worth was necessary—that is, it was Coombs, Sears, Stellbauer or Calvo. There were many who thought Coombs might be retained in preference to one of the other outfielders because he can play first base and play it well. The Panther management felt, however, that in Sears, Calvo and Stellbauer they have one of the strongest outfield organizations in the league from a "shagging," throwing and hitting standpoint, and that to break it up would be suicidal.

Someone had to go to make room for Sam "Nelly" Gray, the pride of Paris, who had a tryout with Cleveland this Spring. Coombs seemed to be the logical man to let out.

Gray, by the way, has more stuff than almost any pitcher who has ever been on the local lot. If he gets control he may prove to be the best pitchers in this man's league.

The Cats, holding the bottom rung of the league ladder, capture their first home start, 5-3, from the San Antonio Bronchos. Manager Walter Morris sent McKay to the mound for the Cats and he held the Broncs to five safe blows. The box score:

Do you remember when this team was cutting a wide swath in Texas League circles? It certainly was the pride of Fort Worth fandom and deserved all of the praise it got for many of the players went to the "big show."

Middle row: Walter Boles, famous all around player, who has been doing a bit of catching for Los Angeles when not tied up with his law practice; Harry Clayton, De Witt Feegler, Ed Wicker and Alex Dupree. Below: George Whiteman, present manager of the Houston Buffs; Tom Carling, Dred Cavender (manager), Harry Berry and Ollie Gfrorer.

CATS LAND IN THIRD PLACE IN CLUB FIELDING

Little to Boast Over in Showing of Individual Players in Loop Figures.

DALLAS, Texas, July 15.—Poor fielding generally is recorded in the mid-season fielding averages of the Texas league, released today by William B. Ruggles, statistician. No phenoms are uncorked, though Turgeon, Beaumont shortstop, has a good showing.

Fort Worth landed in third place among the clubs, largely due to a good showing of the pitchers. Calvo, center fielder, and Phelan, third baseman, are the only Cats to land anywhere near the top of the heap in their respective divisions.

FIELDING AVERAGES.

All players participating in all or parts of 10 games at one position, pitchers in 5. Abbreviations: G—games; PO—put-outs; A—assists; E—errors; DP—double plays; FA—fielding averages; SB, CS—opponents' stolen bases, caught stealing.

MUSINGS OF OUR MASTER MINDS—"DUTCH" HOFFMAN

Dutch Hoffman, Whose Big Bat Crashed Our Four Safe Blows

ED (DUTCH) HOFFMAN.

Dutch Hoffman, the veteran second sacker of the Cats, broke loose yesterday—and when Dutch and his Big Bat gets loose—somebody's goin' to catch hell—and it happened to be the Chicks. He only connected with the ball safely four times out of five trips to the plate, three of the hits being for two bases. Dutch is in a dangerous position as second baseman on the Russwood park infield at Memphis, as there is a three-foot drop-off between the oil path and the outfield directly behind his stand. However, Dutch musta not been nervous, for his batting average doesn't show it.

HERE THEY ARE, THOSE CATS WHO FORT WORTH BASEball fans expect to step out this year and snatch the old rag for the series and let it wave once again over the home grounds at La Grave Field.

Hatching Out

SPORTORIALS

The Team of Other Days.

(A revery by Frank Leroy Chance in collaboration with Rudyard Kipling.)

Beneath the grand stand's drifting shade,
When hits begin to fly,
I sit me down and watch, alas,
Another ball game die;
With blood-red eyes I see the score
Across the sunset haze—
Sainted Diana! Give me back
The Team of Other Days.

Ah! Shades of Overall and Brown,
Of Sheckard and of Kling—
Of Tinker's peg across the field
And Preister's whirring wing—
When game by game we ripped the race
Along remembered ways,
And Steinfeldt's wallop helped to lift
The Team of Other Days.

But Steiny's clout has vanished now,
And Slagle's day is done;
No more the smash from Hofman's bat
Drives in the winning run;
No more the hook from Brownie's curve
Awaits my hurried call—
No Evers tears around the path
As Schulte slams the ball.

Glare down, Fanatic, from your perch
And bid the Rooter roar,
While down the field I charge in vain
To meet the winning score;
But when the battle dust has cleared
Across the star-swept haze,
My pipe brings back the Old Machine—
The Team of Other Days.

—Collier's Weekly.

EVER get in an argument about who won the pennant in such-and-such a year?

Well, here's a list of the pennant winners in the Texas league since 1902, with the name of the manager of the victorious club. Paste it in your bonnet—you may have use for it later:

1902—Mide O'Connor, Corsicana.
1903—C. B. Moran, Dallas.
1904—Jim Maloney, Corsicana.
1905 — D. Cavender, Fort Worth.
1906—Ben Shelton, Cleburne.
1907—Brooks Gordon, Austin.
1908—George Leidy, San Antonio.
1909—Hunter Hill, Houston.
1910—Jam Maloney, Dallas.
1911—Dale Gear, Austin.
1912—J. Fillman, Houston.
1913—J. Fillman, Houston.
1914—Pat Newnam, Houston, and Ellis Hardy, Waco, tie.
1915—Ellis Hardy, Waco.
1916—Ellis Hardy, Waco.
1917—Ham Patterson, Dallas.
1918—Ham Patterson, Dallas.
1919—Billy Smith, Shreveport.
1920-21-22-23 — OUR OWN JOHN JACOB ATZ OF FORT WORTH.

Show Me the Way to Go Home

Saw Moses Yellowhorse yesterday and he said he was comin' along fine. "Arm's all right and am gettin' so I can lay the ball about where I want to," said the Chief. Hulvey looked good as relief man yesterday. Left went like a house afire—holy cow!

And yet, chances is the Cats went round and round like a den of panthers when they loaded into the bus after droppin' that ball game yesterday. Never did see a bunch of dudes hate to lose like they do. Even in September after the race is over, the Cats fuss when they lose one. Well, that is characteristic of all champs—hatin' to lose, even at dominoes or checkers.

'Tother day we referred to the Cats as approximately a .700 per cent ball club. Some guy writes in and says that was takin' in a lotta territory. And in the Wichita Falls Times we find where Al Parker has figured up the Cats' composite standing for the last five years. We won 466 games and lost 213 for an average standing of .685 — which is approximately a .700 per cent ball club.

Wichita Falls finished next to the Cats during the five years, more than a hundred points back, with a standing of .556. Dallas' standing was .503, which is approximately a .500 per cent ball club.

Not meanin' any dirty crack, either. Read 'em and weep:

In the composite Texas League standing, both members of a "twin city" team are credited with victories won by their club and charged with its defeats, but where a franchise has been transferred during a playing season from one city to another, each city is credited or charged with games played in its uniform. Since there have been several "twin city" combinations, the won and lost columns in the standing do not check properly. Thus Fort Worth is credited with defeating Sherman 29 times and Denison 21 times, when actually, the Panthers defeated Sherman 21 times, Denison 13 times, and the Sherman-Denison team 8 times, the latter defeats being charged against both cities. The percentage column shows only games actually won or lost except for Denison and Sherman where each city gets credit and charge for games played as the Twin Cities. Including the 1931 season, there have been 18,306 games played to a decision in the 39 years of play since 1888 (no Texas League in 1891-93-94 and 1900-01); 1,117 more were played in the South Texas League, 1903-06, making a total of 19,423 games actually played by Texas League clubs.

Manager Hap Morse Will Put Oscar Fuhr on Mound in Attempt to Triumph.

SEPTEMBER 17, 1932.

BY BILL PARKER,
Associated Press Sports Writer.

DALLAS, Sept. 16.—Faced with the necessity of winning three consecutive games if they are to represent the Texas League in the Dixie Series, the Dallas Steers are primed for their gigantic task against the Beaumont Exporters.

The three-out-of-five game playoff will be resumed here Saturday night at 8 o'clock. In the opening games at Beaumont the Exporters won both, 5 to 3 and 9 to 6.

Two up and requiring only one more victory to be Texas League champions and Dixie Series contenders, the Exporters are confident of concluding the series with Saturday night's game.

Realizing their comeback fight must be near sensational, but eager for the test, the Steers believe they will have the series squared at two-all by Sunday night and that a fifth game will be necessary to determine the champions. The Steers pointed to their record as one of the greatest home clubs in history of the league as their foundation of confidence.

Manager Hap Morse has nominated Oscar Fuhr, veteran southpaw, to face Beaumont in the third combat. Fuhr won 21 and lost six for Dallas this season. He beat Beaumont in his only game against them during the regular season. McMullen will be Fuhr's battery mate.

Manager Del Baker refuses to definitely name his third game hurler. It probably will be Luke Hamlin, right-hander, who won 20 games and was one of the league's leading pitchers. Reiber will be his battery mate.

Advance ticket sales indicates a crowd of 15,000 for Saturday night. Estimated crowds of 5,000 and 4,000 saw the two games at Beaumont.

M'GHEE HOMERS IN NINTH FRAME FOR LONE RUN

JULY 11, 1935.

Circuit Blow Inside Park Came With Two Out; No Oiler Got on First Base.

GALVESTON, July 10 (AP).—The ultimate in baseball thrills came to Galveston fans Wednesday night when Eddie Cole pitched the first perfect game in the history of the Texas League and Maggie McGhee hit a home run inside the park for him, to win 1-0, after two were out in the ninth inning.

Cole kept the Oilers completely baffled with the hopping fast ball and a curve that was breaking for called strikes. The last two men in the ninth went out on called strikes. He fanned eight altogether and threw three straight strikes past Heinie Mueller in the sixth after having issued three balls.

Ed Selway, Tulsa righthander, had given but four hits and kept the Bucs away from the plate successfully despite McGhee's lead-off triple in the fifth. McGhee caught his first pitch after two were out in the ninth and drove it on a line to the "home run pocket" in right center. The relay to Catcher Gus Brittain drew him out from the plate slightly and he barely missed tagging the runner. He lay prostrate and dejected until the crowd had almost ceased cheering, then arose and threw the ball over the grandstand.

The game was a heartbreaker for Selway to lose. He showed some of the stoutest pitching of the year when McGhee tripled to left center to open the fifth. Bob Linton beat out an infield hit down the first base line when Shoap, Selway and Crawford couldn't get together, with McGhee holding third. Cole lifted a short fly to right with no advance and Governor grounded to the box after Linton had swiped second. He sent Frink down swinging at a three-two curve.

In the eighth Frink bunted after one was down and the pitcher threw the bill into right foul territory. Frink circled the bases before the ball could be retrieved but ground rules sent him back to second. He died on base when Fausett grounded and Prerost popped.

Only in the fifth and eighth innings did men reach second off him until McGhee hit his homer in the ninth.

Ruth Smashes Out Two Doubles; Speaker Adds Another Pinch Hit

CLEVELAND, Sept. 22.—The Yankees had no trouble beating two Indian rookie pitchers today, 9 to 3, despite the fact that each of them fanned Ruth once. Ruth, however, made two doubles and drove in two runs. Speaker, batting in the ninth, added another pinch hit to his already long record. Score:

Jenny Dolly

Jenny Dolly (Mrs. Bernard Vinissky), 47, one of the Dolly Sisters, popular dance team of several decades ago, committed suicide June 1 by hanging herself in her Hollywood apartment.

The sisters made their debut at Keith's Union Square Theater, New York, in 1909, later touring in vaude here and abroad. They appeared at the Jardin de Paris and the Piccadilly Circus, London, after which they returned to this country to appear in the Ziegfeld Follies of 1911 and A Winsome Widow in 1912.

After this engagement the sisters parted, Jenny going with Harry Fox in vaude and a number of plays. The sisters reunited in 1920 and appeared in Jig-Saw, The League of Notions, and other London productions. One of their last appearances was in The Greenwich Village Follies at the Shubert Theater, New York, in 1924.

Miss Dolly was married three times, the first two marriages ending in divorce. She married her present husband, Bernard Vinissky, a Chicago attorney, in 1935, and they adopted two daughters, Klair and Manszi, who survive with her husband.

PANTHERS WIN IN FINAL FRAME FROM BRONCHOS

1918

By United Press.

SAN ANTONIO, June 29.—The Panthers took their second consecutive win from the locals Saturday by the score of 5 to 2. The game was tied up until the ninth inning when three hits and an error gave the visiters their winning scores.

Jacobus pitched great ball throughout and held the homelings to two hits, one of which was a fluke three bagger.

SKIPPERS COP BARGAIN BILL FROM GASSERS

Special to The Star-Telegram.

WACO, June 29.—Waco twice defeated Shreveport Saturday, 6 to 0, and 3 to 1. Better pitching, opportune hitting and brilliant fielding set the Gassers down.

Leslie won the first game by crashing the ball over the left wall with two on bases. Pearson pitched great ball all the way. Moore held the visitors in check after the first frame. Hungling's error in handling Rezza's throw to the plate let in the necessary runs in the fifth.

Navs on Long End.

WACO, May 23.—Waco defeated Galveston, 7 to 2, here Thursday. Blunk, who started the game for Waco, was wild and the Pirates made one run before he was relieved by Donalds, who held them scoreless until the ninth, when they made another tally.

The Navigators batted Couchman freely and errors by his teammates added to the Waco run column.

Buffs Win in Rally.

DALLAS, May 23.—The Bisons staged a batting rally in the ninth inning Thursday and defeated the Marines, 7 to 6, after the score had been tied three times during the game. Matteson was driven to cover and Johnson relieved him. The locals batted Talley out of the box in the seventh. Hiett finished the game.

The game was featured by home runs by Schliebner and Collins. Callahan and Truesdale are both out of the game from injuries.

Finn 'Aces' to Meet Wachtel in Second; First to Whittaker

Another battle is almost sure to result in the second home meeting between the Finn "Aces" and the Atz "Kittens" this afternoon at Panther Park. The article of baseball indulged in between these two clubs at every meeting has been of the high order, with the victory in the balance between the pitchers. Paul Wachtel stands out as the slabman to be named by Manager Atz to work today, and either Mullins or Jack Harper will oppose him. In this meeting the fans may expect another such tangle as the opener Thursday, when the last man at bat decided the fray.

An accident, which may materially name the league position of the Bronchos, occurred just prior to starting the game Thursday. Hale, the crack third sacker of the "Aces," in making a practice play, sprained his left ankle, and according to the attending physician, he will be kept out of the game for several weeks. Hale has a big league future and at the present time is leading the Texas League in batting. The accident to Hale is to be regretted by every fan and player in the circuit.

The first game of the present series on Thursday was entirely in the hands of Ross and Bill Whittaker as moundsmen. Both pitched excellent ball and the fortunes of the game pleasantly went to Whittaker, in that the necessary run for a decision was pushed across by the Cats in the first stanza, after which neither club could count. Each club secured five blows, all of which were kept well distributed. Sensational fielding on both sides was a feature of the day. The only boot of the game came in the sixth inning, when Stow, attempting a double play from Burch's hit through the box, missed fire and failed to get either man. The play was well taken and the error was of an excusable nature.

After Stow popped out to third base in the first frame, Atz singled to right field. He was forced at second by Ziggy Sears on a ground ball to Fuller. Kraft swung the keystone blow which grabbed the case Ace from Finn's deck. It was a pretty double to right center and Sears scampered in. But futile attempts were made to get around the paths by either club during the remainder of the game, with both pitchers standing fast against the opposing batsmen in the clinches.

This afternoon's game will begin at the regular time, 4:30 o'clock.

BUFFS HAMMER MATTESON AND TRIM HAM-PATS

Special to The Star-Telegram.

HOUSTON, June 29.—Though Hiett let up in the eighth round perceptibly, the Buffs had a sufficient margin of runs to defeat Dallas here Saturday. The score was 8 to 4.

Matteson was batted from the box and Compere, who relieved him, fared little better.

Popular Panther Skipper

BILL (KID) NANCE. JUNE 28, 1914.

Popular and genial manager of the Fort Worth Panthers, who, after a long series of tough luck breaks and injuries to star players, has finally rounded his athletes to form and has them started on an upward journey to mingle with the league leaders. Within the next few days Nance expects to have his full strength in the field again, which with the addition of another pitcher he is trying to land will make the Panthers a tough club for any team to tackle. Nance is a hard working, aggressive manager and is popular with his players and the fans alike.

SENATORS LOSE IN GAME WITH BUFFS SCORE IS 12 TO 0

Special to The Star-Telegram.

HOUSTON, June 27.—Houston won the first game of the transferred series from the tail-end Senators today by the score of 12 to 0.

The contest was so unequal that many of the fans filed from the park long before the end came. Austin started out with Graboski, a Moulton, Texas, semi-pro. In less than five innings he walked seven men and made a wild pitch. Bowen finished the game. The Buffs hit all and stole bases at will. Mowry made four hits. Cummings of the Rice Institute, a college football and baseball star, played short for the visitors. Manager Moran is expecting two new infielders from Milwaukee tonight.

Managerial record, Fort Worth finished second in 1917, second in 1918, won the second series in 1919 after finishing second in the first series, but lost the playoff to Shreveport. On the season Fort Worth won by an easy margin. In 1920 Fort Worth won both series and defeated Little Rock, Southern Association champions, in playoff.

TABLOID TALES OF THE CATS

No. 6—Edward Hoffman.
No. 7—Emory E. Rigney.
No. 8—Frank L. Haley.

The initial corner of the dashing Panther infield having been disposed of individually because Big Boy one time committed the crime of pitching, and therefore took lots of room in the record, we now cheerfully direct your attention to three other sterling athletes—Edward Hoffman at second base; Emory E. Rigney at shortstop, and Frank L. Haley at third. That's a set of threes that will make any opposition read and weep. Here's what they've done:

HOFFMAN, EDWARD ("DUTCH")

TABLOID TABLES OF THE CATS
No. 2—Clarence O. Kraft.

This is the second of a series of nutshell facts regarding members of the Champion Fort Worth team. Where blank spaces occur and the letter A, B. or C appears, it indicates that no record is in the book, or the player did not participate in sufficient games to get in the records. The introduction gives birthplace, date, present residence, whether married or single, height, weight, throwing arm and batting position, occupation other than baseball, then the year, club he was with, league, and full averages for the time he has been playing baseball until a recent date. In this instance, the Cat talked about is "Big Boy," home run hero, who is in the dignified and solemn records:

KRAFT, CLARENCE O.—Birthplace, Oakland, Cal., June 9, 1887. Present residence, Fort Worth, Texas. Married. Weight 185. Height 6 feet. Throws right-handed. Other occupation, automobile salesman. Motor Transport Unit 309; six months overseas.

TABLOID TALES OF THE CATS
No. 3—Robert Whittaker

The third noble athlete whose life's record on the diamond is presented herewith, was the pitching hero of last year's Cats and today he ranks pretty high in the estimation of fans. He is generally known as "Buzzer Bill," "Ol' Bill," "Pooch" or just plain "Bill," who has a glittering eye. He was christened:

WHITTAKER, ROBERT.

Panthers and Broncs Battle 14 Innings to Deadlock

Visitors Drive Moses' Slants to Wilderness, but Fentress Saves Recruit a Defeat.

Dred Cavender's Bronchos kicked up an awful rumpus at Morris Park Saturday afternon and when the shades of night began to fall and the little white pill was hardly discernible as it whizzed up to the plate Umpire Baumgartner called time with the score in a deadlock, 4 to 4. Fourteen innigs passed into history in the interim and the performance will be continued Sunday afternoon when a double-header will be staged.

Moses, the recruit pitcher recently purchased from the Memphis Club of the Southern League was given his first assignment by Kid Nance. It did not take the Broncs long to drive Moses back to the "Bull Rushes" and Kid Nance less time to see that Moses had absolutely nothing, not even a prayer.

Roberts No Puzzle.

Roberts, a young gent with a fancy windup, was first introduced by Dred Cavender and a windup seemed to be about the limit of Mr. Roberts' repertoire. After uncorking a wild pitch in the third which put Smith in position to score on an infield out, young Roberts came right back in the fourth and walked a batter, uncorked another wild pitch and was dented for a double, Red Munsell, who had been warming up on the side lines, was then rushed to the mound.

The first man to face Munsell binged a single to left. In the sixth the Panthers scored again. After the sixth the homelings were in scoring position innumerable times, but on each of these occasions some Broncho did just the right thing at the right time and the scoring ceased.

Roy Fentress was the man to save the bacon for Moses. Fentress took the slab at the opening of the third. From then until the end of the game he labored untiringly. In the sixth inning, only, was Fentress in trouble. In that frame three singles and a double netted the visitors three runs. After the sixth Fentress was only in one bad hole and that was in the twelfth frame, when Clarke tripled to deep right with only one man down. The next two batters popped up easy flies and the Bronc hopes of a victory went glimmering.

Collins Is Parked.

The Nags opened up on Moses at the very outset. Sheffield slapped a single over second, and then stole second as Collins fanned. Collins resented being called out and showed his resentment so strongly that he was chased to the bench and later clear out of the park. Moses turned loose a wild pitch and Sheffield took third. McMahon singled to center, scoring Sheffield. Kibler singled to the same pasture and a singular double play was the result. McMahon, who was under full speed, continued on to third. Howard relayed to Smith, who in turn tried to get McMahon at third. The throw to third was too late, but Kibler was thrown out by Atz trying to make second. McMahon made a dash for home, but Lee's peg to the pan was true and McMahon was nabbed sliding in.

Moses got by fairly well in the second, although fast fielding alone saved his hide. At the beginning of the third Fentress went in and aside from the fatal sixth when the Broncs put over a trio of runs did remarkably well.

The Panthers took the lead in the fourth when Salm walked and went to second on a wild pitch. Atz doubled to center, scoring Salm. Munsell relieved Roberts. Haigh bingled to left and Atz came home.

In the first half of the sixth the Broncs took a one-run lead on singles by Munsell, Goodwin and McMahon, and Knaupp's double.

The Panthers came right back in their half of the same frame and tied the count again. Atz hit to McMahon, who threw wild to first and Atz went to third. Haigh singled over second and Atz scored.

Scoring Ceases.

Right there the scoring ceased. In the tenth the homelings had a good chance, but Harry Haigh took a nap on first and was nipped off by Hauenstein. McLaurin, batting for Brown, was an easy infield out and Smith flew out to center.

In the twelfth McLaurin again had a chance to break up the game with three men on and only one down, but again he lost a chance to be a hero by fanning. Smith flew out to left.

Haigh's unerring aim cut off all hope of a Broncho victory, three of the visitors being thrown out stealing second in the last three innings.

ELEVEN NEW

All Marks Made by 'Big Boy' Kraft Last Year Remain as High

Eleven new records have been written into the Texas League statistical archives by the campaign of 1925 just closed. Four of the new official marks are individual. The year's crop of new targets for the future Lone Star loopers to assail falls far short on the individual side of 1924 when seven new records were made and one tied. The surprising batting spree of the year was unable to produce any such astonishing tramp down the line as Clarence Kraft evolved last year and not one of his 1924 marks fell.

New record honors were well scattered among clubs and players. The two greatest individual feats were the setting of a new two-base hit record by Rinalc Williams of Dallas and the passing of the base on balls mark by Frank Edington of Fort Worth. Both far overreached the old figures. With 70 two-baggers, Williams led by 17 a mark previously held jointly by George Whiteman, Houston (1921) and Ike Boone (San Antonio), 1923. Edington drew 26 more passes than Kedzi K. Kirkman, San Antonio, secured in 1922. Konetchy of Fort Worth broke a five-year-old record set in 1920 by Fred Schliobner of Galveston, .995, when his first base fielding average for this year finished at .996. Another great feat was the accepting of 495 chances in center field by Gus Bonowitz, Shreveport, 84 more than the best previous record, 411 by Leslie Myers, San Antonio, 1924.

San Antonio in Lead.

Four of the new club records were made by San Antonio, two by Fort Worth, and one by Waco. The Bears scored 1,036 runs, 28 more than Wichita Falls' high mark of 1922. With 2,582 total bases, they far surpassed the record Houston set in 1924 at 2,389, although the Buffs' old mark made largely on doubles and triples is a more honest figure as San Antonio piled up an early lead in the band-box in which the club started the season. By batting in 962 runs, San Antonio wrested from Fort Worth a record made last year with 884. Waco's club record was the astonishing home run figure of 181, beating Fort Worth's 119 of 1924. Both San Antonio and Fort Worth also passed the old figure. Fort Worth broke one of its own records by drawing 782 bases on balls against 754 last year. Edington secured nearly one-sixth of that total. San Antonio made a new extra base record and Fort Worth succeeded in having more runners stranded on base than ever before.

The list of records brought up to date shows a correction over those published in previous years which credited Fort Worth with a club fielding record of .982 in 1917. On the actual figures that year Fort Worth fielded only .972 and San Antonio's average in 1924 of .973 was in consequence really a record.

Two 1907 Records.

Two records still remain on the books from 1907, the first year of the present league, total chances for catchers by Kerns of Dallas and fielding average for catchers, Alexander of San Antonio. The latter has since been tied.

In the Fourth Inning Howard Doubles; Is Caught Napping. Two Hits Followed Which Would Have Meant a Score.

If there ever was a pitcher that deserved a game, Charley McCafferty, the big Panther right-hander, was entitled to the one played at Morris park yesterday afternoon, yet the Senators won, 2 to 1.

Two clean hits is all that was made off of Big Mack during the nine hotly-contested innings. It is true the visitors are credited with four hits, but two of them were the merest scratches that fast fielding would have cut down.

The game was literally tossed away by Bobby Wallace in the third inning, when he heaved the ball to the grandstand, with two men out and three on bases, letting two runners cross the plate with the winning runs.

Either stupid base running or stupid coaching has lost nearly every game that the Panthers have dropped, and yesterday's tilt was no exception. In the fourth inning the home team registered three clean hits, one of them a double, without counting a runner. Just another case of the base runner sleeping on the paths, and this time Pep Howard was the fall guy. It happened something like this: After Allen had gone out on a high fly to Netzel, Howard smacked a terrific double to left field. While the crowd was still cheering him for his mighty blow, Pitcher Bottorf turned and whipped the ball to Swampy Thompson, who was playing short for the Senators, and who covered second on the throw, nailing Howard off by a yard. Just what the third base coach was doing all this time is a puzzle yet to be solved. Following Howard's death, Akin singled to right and Eberline singled to center, but Wallace's out retired the side.

Thompson the Star.

The work of Thompson at short was a revelation to his Fort Worth admirers. The local boy had two putouts and six assists to his credit at the end of the argument, two of his assists retiring the side when a bobble would have proven disastrous to the Senators.

The visitors counted twice in the third, which proved ample enough to gain the long end of the verdict. With one down, Bottorf singled to right. Netzel was walked, Brainard's drive through the pitcher's box hit Umpire Mullaney, which entitled the batsman to a hit. With the bases full and only one down, McIver hit to McCafferty, who forced the runner at the plate. On the next play Cook hit a grounder to Wallace, who pegged wild to first, two runners scoring. Cook was then thrown out trying to steal.

The home team made their lone tally in the seventh with two down. Workman gained life on Hille's error, stole second and came home on Vance's ripping single to right. On the throw home Vance went to second, but McCafferty struck out retiring the side.

In the ninth for a fraction of a second things looked bright when Eberline hit a hard liner that looked good for a safety, but Second Baseman Smith made a remarkable one handed stab of the drive retiring the runner. Wallace and Workman were easy outs and [illegible]

GALVESTON, April 21.—The Broncos got to the Galveston pitchers hard today and took the third game of the series 8 to 3. Roberts was batted out of the box in the fifth and Morton substituted, but too late to head off the already victorious visitors. San Antonio used three pitchers, Palm being retired in the second, when he injured a finger at bat. Cravenstein went bad in the sixth and allowed the Pirates their first two scores, and was succeeded in the seventh by Browning, when he again showed signs of failing. The locals put up a ragged deefnse and failed to hit in the pinches. The score:

KIKE'S SPORTOSCOPE

Manager Morris announced last night that he would work his new sidewheel hurler, Jew Kane, in this afternon's opener with Carson's Navigators. Kane has been working out at El Paso and is in good condition to take his regular turn on the hurling mound. With the coming of Kane Manager Morris began the wedeing out of his surplus pitchers. Jack McAdams is the latest victim of the pink slip. McAdams has been here for over a month, but has never rounded into condition to work, and it was thought useless to carry him on the pay roll longer.

Two former Texas league hurlers were opposed to each other in the American league yesterday, and reports of the game say that it was a great pitchers' battle. The opposing twirlers were Klawitter, formerly with Shreveport, on the mound for the Detroit Tigers, and Lefty Russell, last year with the Panthers, doing heavy duty for the White Sox. Acording to the detail, Russell had a shade the best of the pitchers' argument, but the final score favored the Tiger hurler. Windy City fans are loud in their praises of Russell's work, and predict a great season for him with Callahan's outfit.

The question now arises, "Do the Panthers get enough slepe at night?" Evidently not from the way members of the team have been taking quiet snoozes on the paths each afternoon at Morris park. Poor coaching and poor base running have lost nearly every game that the locals have dropped this year, and there certainly must be some remedy for these faults. Howard's seance on second yesterday, after driving a beautiful double to left field, cost Fort Worth the game, as the two succeeding batsmen rapped out corking singles.

Everybody has an off day, even an umpire. Yesterday was certainly Dom Mullaney's off day, and in every instance the home team was the victim of his bad judgment. Up until yesterday Mullaney had done splendid work. In fact, it would be hard to find a better arbitrator, but yesterday the wind evidently blew dust in Dom's lamps, for time after time he was wrong and Austin derived the benefit of his mistakes. In the second inning Wallace lined to left field for what ordinarily would have been at least a double, and the ball fell a foot inside the foul line, yet Mullaney called it a foul. In the third inning, when Austin had three men on bases and one out, McIver hit to McCafferty, who forced Bottorf at the plate. Vance made a quick peg to first and nailed McIver by a yard, but Mullaney called him safe. On the next play Cook hit to Wallace, who threw the ball away, allowing the visitors to score their only two runs. If Dommy had called McIver out it would have changed the situation entirely.

Only one clean hit was made off McCafferty yesterday, and he certainly deserved to win. Three of the Senators' four hits were to the infield. The other was a Texas leaguer by the visiting pitcher. The best pitching in the world will not win games if the team behind the pitcher fails to make any runs. Too bad, Mack, that you had to lose such a game. Here's hoping that a little ginger will be injected into the home team, and that there will be no repetition of such skull base running as was pulled off in the past few games.

Swampy Thompson, the local boy who was with the Panthers last season and who was recently signed by Austin, was the real scintillating star of the visitors' inner works. Swampy's fielding was remarkable. On two different occasions he beat the home team out of a run by nice stops and a quick peg to first.

San Antonio 3, Waco 2.

WACO, July 25.—San Antonio bunched hits in the fourth inning today for enough runs to win the game. It was a hard fought contest, but both San Antonio pitchers were steady in the pinches. The score:

HOUSTON, April 21.—Houston celebrated the raising of its three championship flags by defeating Beaumont 6 to 3. The locals clustered six of their nine hits, including two triples and a double, in the second, six consecutive batsmen hitting safe for five runs. Ware held his opponents almost helpless, though his support helped largely in the last six innings. A remarkable running catch by Mowry featured. The score:

DALLAS, April 21.—After pitching shut-out ball for six innings, Bader blew up in the seventh this afternoon, and the entire Waco team batted around him, scoring six men. Before that period of cannonading neither team had scored and neither could come again. Ogle held the Giants to four hits, scattered over as many innings and was never in danger. The Navigators played errorless ball behind Ogle, but Bader had three costly errors on his team. The score:

TEXARKANA 8, DURANT 3.

TEXARKANA, April 21.—The locals won their fourth straight game at home today, defeating Durant in easy manner by score of 8 to 3. Two home runs, two three-sackers and numerous singles came in bunches and meant runs. Manager Jewell was ordered from the park by Umpire Bonner because of insistent arguments over a decision on a force-out at second base. Three pitchers were used by the visitors, but the locals had no difficulty finding them when hits were needed to score runs. The score:

Spudders 11, Marines 10.

WICHITA FALLS, Aug. 11.—Hitting viciously in the pinches, and overcoming a six-run lead in the seventh, the Spudders carried their winning string to ten or Wednesday with Dallas, 11 to 10. Works hit a home run in the seventh with three on. Bobbie Stow hit a circuit clout in the fourth. Kandler, a pitching find from Oklahoma, hurled well for the Spudders in the last two frames.

Eight Texas League Records Are Broken; Boone Smashes Six

Eight Texas League records were broken during the 1923 season and one tied. Of these, three were club records and the remaining six individual. All of the latter were smashed by the dazzling offensive power flashed by Ike Boone of San Antonio.

Boone wiped from the record book one of the oldest Texas League marks when he set the batting leadership at the amazing high figure of .402 this year, becoming the first Texas Leaguer to hit in the .400 class and taking the honors from Bob Edmondson, whose .391 hung up for Galveston in 1908, has topped the loop ever since. Boone's record is the better all-round one as he participated in nearly every game for his club, while Edmondson appeared in less than 100 games. Boone's other achievements this year consisted in shattering more recent figures. He surpassed in base hits by 16 Homer Summa's 1922 mark of 225. His total base figure of 391 bested Kraft's 1911 record of 376 and he surpassed another record of Kraft, made in 1921, in runs by scoring 134, just two better. He tied George Whiteman's 1921 two-base hit record of 53 and set a new mark in three baggers with 26 over Ray Blades' 1922 mark of 20.

Spudders Make Record.

Wichita Falls took away Fort Worth's total base record set in 1921 at 2,226 by compiling 2,291 this season. The Spudders also ran up the club home run record to 93, besting Galveston's mark of 87. San Antonio set a new record for three-base hits with 97, seven better than Shreveport's 90 of 1921. San Antonio fell one point short of tying Wichita Falls' record batting average of .308 set last year, but no other Texas League marks were even threatened.

The oldest mark left on the record book is one that probably will never be tied—Butch Kerns' total chances for catchers, made in 1907, which was 1,115. This is also a world's record, major and minor. Thebo's 1908 stolen base mark still stands, as also does Able's 1908 strike-out record and Alexander's catching average, the latter, however, tied in 1911 by Lemon.

Following are the figures:

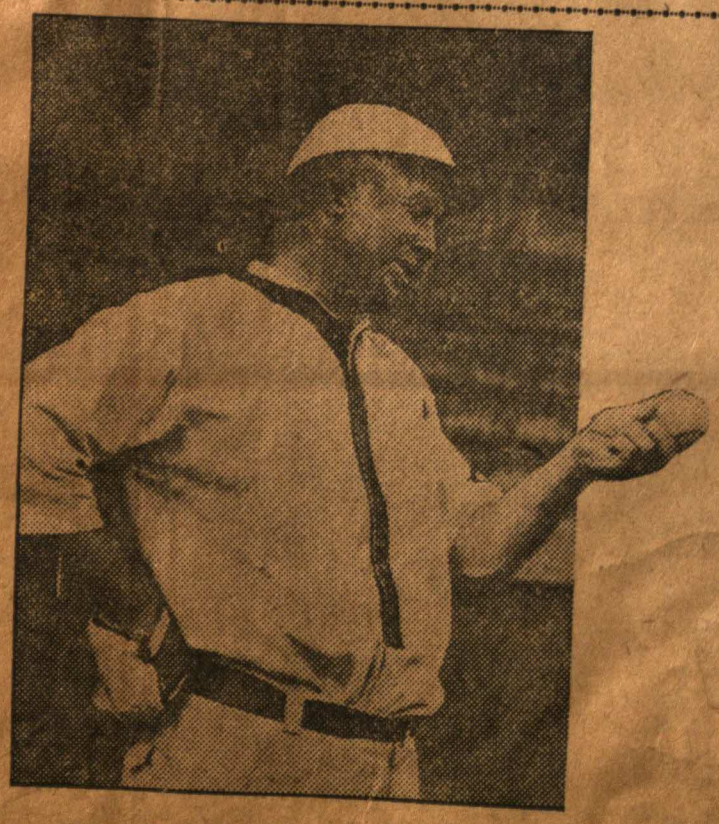
LOOKING FOR A SMOOTH (?) SPOT



Josephus Pate, Hero of Dixie Series.

Old Man Pate's boy, Josephus, stands out as the hero of the Dixie series. The big southpaw, a Fort Worth boy, after winning thirty games during the regular season, continued his sensational mound work in the titular series, coming out of three battles with the Chicks' tailfeathers.

Four Panthers Finish Above .300 Hit Mark; Stoner Tops Hurlers

Final official batting averages of the Texas League for the 1923 season show that three Panther regulars finished above the .300 mark. Jack Calvo led the Atzmen with the splendid mark of .342, topping Clarence Kraft by 18 points. Stump Edington wound up with .307.

Ike Boone, sensational San Antonio fly chaser, hit two points above .400, the first Texas leaguer to accomplish the feat. He also established a league record for total base hits, having hit safely on 241 occasions, far above the record of Summa, and led all run getters with 134 tallies.

Vache led in stolen bases with 40, while Clarence Kraft again topped the four-base maulers with 32, tieing his 1922 record and lacking but three homers of tieing the league record, held by Hack Elbel, former Shreveport-Galveston first sacker.

Lil Stoner led the circuit in games won and lost, although O'Neill of Shreveport, who appeared in but 19 games, finished with a better percentage. Other Cat hurlers with notable marks include the "big four," who, with Stone, are Johns, Wachtel and Pate.

The following averages include .300 hitters:

Scoreless Tie in Texas League Ball Game

★★★ ★★★ ★★★ ★★★

Battle Was Between — Fort Worth, Cleburne

★★★ ★★★ ★★★ ★★★

Recalled; Played in July, 1906

BY LEROY MENZING.

While John B. Foster, noted sports writer, is reminiscing over pitchers' battles, it may be interesting to Texas League fans to recall a game played here July 23, 1926. Fort Worth and Cleburne were the opposing teams. It ended in a scoreless tie after 19 innings.

The game, played in the old baseball park on Pine Street, had such notables of baseball as Tris Speaker, Dode Criss, George Whiteman, Chief Wilson and others in the teams' lineups.

Speaker, Whiteman and Criss were members of the Cleburne Railroaders, while Wilson performed for the Fort Worth Panthers.

Alex Dupree, who still resides in Fort Worth, and Hickory Dickson, now dead, were the opposing hurlers. Later in the season Dickson helped in keeping Fort Worth from winning the Texas League pennant with an iron-man stunt in a double-header. He blanked the Panthers, 2 to 0, in each game. Dickson later pitched for the New York and Boston Nationals, and the Pittsburgh Federals. He led the Texas League in victories one season.

There They Are.

W. H. (Bill) Ward, who has operated a picture show here for many years, owned the Fort Worth Baseball Club, while Dewitt Fleegles, now connected with the armored car collection service here, was secretary and business manager.

Dred Cavender, who resides here, was left fielder for the Panthers. Boles, shortstop of the Cats, practiced law here for several years and is now in Los Angeles, Cal. Shelton, right fielder for Cleburne, is in the cotton business at Terrell. Criss, first baseman, went to the majors as a pitcher, but achieved fame as a pinch hitter.

Although the game went 19 innings without a score, a record game for the Texas League, it wasn't a world's record. 'Way back in July 18, 1891, Fargo and Grand Forks had played 25 innings without a score at Devil's Lake, N. D., and as long ago as May 11, 1877, Howard played Manchester at Cambridge, Mass., for 24 innings without a ghost of a tally.

The 1906 game is expected to hold the Texas League for a while.

The Game.

Here is part of the writeup of the game, which appeared in the Fort Worth Telegram, July 24, 1906:

"For five or six innings the game went along smoothly, nobody scoring and nobody apparently trying to work very hard because of the heat. Along about the seventh Fort Worth warmed up and went after things, but, like the clothes the man left on the bank when he went in swimming, they weren't there.

"From then until the ninth the game ground along steadily and with a fair amount of ginger. Still nobody became very excited and nobody had tallied.

"But in the tenth the tragic climax of the drama began slowly to obtrude itself upon the eager multitude.

"And from then until the end of the nineteenth there were 10 innings of baseball such as are seldom seen outside the covers of Frank Merriwell or Diamond Dick biographies.

"Long hard drives into the outfield, cannon-ball throws to the bases and plate, flying catches after 50-yard sprints, scooped up grounders by infielders bent double in their eagerness to head off the whizzing sphere, hits that looked like three-baggers and wound up in measly singles, two-foot bunts that netted a base, strikeouts by some of the mightiest batters in the league—all a galaxy of possible and impossible baseball combinations flashed before the crowd in an hour and a half of the most sensational playing a Fort Worth crowd ever witnessed.

Players Tire Out.

"The players were so tired they could scarcely drag themselves to their positions; the setting sun cast the shadow of the grandstand far out across the infield and half-way over the outfield; the pitchers' arms moved more like machines than flesh and blood, but still the two teams struggled for the lead that never came.

"'For heaven's sake, break it up, Harry,' called the weary Rodgers to Clayton near the end of the eighteenth and Clayton did his best, but to no purpose.

"If Salm hadn't cut second base short in his effort to make a two-bagger into three; if Whiteman hadn't made such a wonderful throw from deep center and nailed Dupree at the plate; if Cavender had taken his scratch chance to dash home from second when Dixon dropped the ball; if a score of other strifling things had or hadn't happened perhaps somebody would have scored and perhaps the record would have not been smashed."

Dodgers Rack Up Profit of $75,000 on Training Season

By BEN GOULD

BROOKLYN, N. Y.

Jackie Robinson

The Dodgers, thanks to the presence of Jackie Robinson, proved to be the greatest Grapefruit League attraction since the days of Babe Ruth and Dizzy Dean. Figures spoke impressively when it was revealed that the Flock played to 76,962 fans in nine exhibition games on the road since returning to the United States.

This was undoubtedly one of Brooklyn's most successful junkets, for the team picked up a profit of about $15,000 on the road, which, added to the $60,000 guarantee they earned in Trujillo City, gave the Dodgers an over-all profit of approximately $75,000.

Fans in Florida, Texas, Oklahoma, North Carolina and Maryland turned out in droves. The biggest throng was the 15,507 crowd which set a record for an exhibition game at Fort Worth, where fans paid 90 cents to watch the game from a hill-top outside the park.

The 8,892 fans who turned out at Tulsa likewise marked an all-time record in that park.

The figures:

April 3—Fort Worth	7,563
April 4—Fort Worth	15,507
April 5—Dallas	11,370
April 6—Oklahoma City	10,937
April 7—Tulsa	8,892
April 8 and 9—Asheville (combn)	9,041
April 10—Baltimore	9,000
April 12—Baltimore	4,652
	76,962

it is now," said Durocher in Baltimore, which could mean anything.

The Dodgers chopped two outfielders from their roster, but followed the move up immediately by signing on two hurlers to keep the status quo at 40.

Little Al Gionfriddo, who made the "miracle catch" on Joe DiMaggio in the last World's Series, robbing the Yankee Clipper of a home run and winning the sixth game of the Series for the Dodgers, has been released outright to the Montreal farm club of the Brooks. Gionfriddo, at five feet, six inches, was the smallest player in the National League. He was obtained from the Pittsburgh Pirates last spring and saw service with the Dodgers chiefly as a pinch-hitter. He is 27 years old.

Outfielder Cal Abrams, who had been brought up for a trial with the parent club after batting .345 for Mobile last season, was returned to the same club on option.

The Dodgers bought from Montreal the contract of Pitcher Dwain Sloat, 28-year-old southpaw who won 17 games and lost nine last year for Fort Worth of the Texas League with an earned-run average of 1.99. The Brooks also picked up the contract of John Hall from Mobile, where he won 18 games, nine of them shutouts, and lost eight.

Catcher Bruce Edwards preceded the club to Brooklyn for treatment of his sore throwing arm.

It's Official! Cats Capture TL Title, 4-0

Homers by Bragan, Schmees Tighten Lid On Sloat's Second Shutout of Final Series

BY LORIN McMULLEN.
Star-Telegram Sports Writer.

The Cats are the official Texas League Champions! For the first time in the Shaughnessy play-off plan history, the Fort Worth club Tuesday night claimed a straight-race leader and a post-season victor as Dwain Sloat's lean left arm throttled the power-packed Tulsa Oilers at LaGrave Field, 4-0.

It was the fourth Fort Worth victory in a gruelling series that saw the Oilers take two decisions, one end in a 14-inning 3-3 tie and the Cats notch all their triumphs by shutouts.

For Sloat, it was a magnificent climax to a "dream" playoff campaign that saw him hurl two shutouts in the final series and carry another big load in the preliminary round against Shreveport, whom he also defeated twice.

In between his last two starts, he sandwiched in several innings of furious bullpen work during the extra-inning tie at Tulsa Sunday.

But, with his young teammates worn and inclined toward jitteryness under the extreme playoff pressure, Sloat never wavered in the pay-off final.

And as he demonstrated his mastery, the inexperienced Fort Worth kids rallied to the cause and handed him one of their finest supporting performances of the year.

Manager Bobby Bragan, who took over the club on June 30, earned a full share of credit with Sloat for crystallizing the team's spirit and efficiency in the clinching victory.

He blasted out a two-run homer in the second inning and from there on there simply were no mistakes made.

It came after Irving Noren had reached base on Johnny Lane's error.

In the third inning, George Schmees led off with a terrific blast over the 380-foot left-center fence. These, incidentally, were the first home runs yielded all season by Eldred (Bud) Byerly, the Tulsa starting moundsman.

That was all Byerly gave, though, through the six innings he worked.

Then he retired for a pinch hitter and Everett (Bud) Lively finished. He gave up a run in the eighth when Schmees cracked another mighty drive into right center for a triple and he trotted in on Homer Matney's quick single through the center.

Thus, all Fort Worth runs were produced with none out.

Aside from these enumerated in the scoring, the Cats had only three other hits. Dee Fondy bounced a single off Byerly's glove in the first. Irving Noren singled with two out in the sixth and John LeGros doubled down the left field line, off Lively, in the seventh.

Sloat allowed no Oiler to reach third, yielded more than one hit in any inning only once.

This came in the third when Byerly singled withone out and Usher singled with two out. A terrific line drive by Charles Kress to Schmees ended this inning.

Sloat had a streak right along here where the Oilers smashed some bullets—but all were handled. Later, then, he called on deep reserve strength and finished strong.

Bill Capps belted a mighty wallop to Noren with one out in the fourth and the giant Russell Burns, the next batsman, fired a cannon shot toward left which LeGros, unbelievably, snagged. It perhaps was one of the really hard blows of the series.

Then, in the fifth, Fiala made the greatest fielding play of the night.

With two out and Byerly on first by virtue of his second single, Johnny Lane fired a hot grounder to left just out of Le Gros' reach. Fiala raced for the

DYER REACHES TERMS FOR 2 MORE SEASONS

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 28 (AP). President Robert Hannegan of the St. Louis Cardinals announced Tuesday night that he and Eddie Dyer, manager of the National League club had "come to terms" for two more years.

EDDIE DYER.

Hannegan added that the agreement was oral, no contract has been signed. He wouldn't say whether the agreement called for an increase in salary.

Dyer took over the Redbirds in 1946, leading them to a pennant and world's championship. The club fiinshed second in the National League race last season and is in a three-way fight with the Brooklyn Dodgers and Pittsburgh Pirates for that spot this year.

Detailed Account Of Playoff Game

FIRST INNING.

OILERS—Lane popped to Fiala. Usher struck out. Kress flied to Noren. No runs, no hits, no errors.

Bragan Charge Brings Opinions From Players

BY LORIN McMULLEN.
Star-Telegram Sports Writer

The Cats have one member, Alfonso Carrasquel, who has trouble with his English, but no dummies.

DICK WILLIAMS.

Therefore no one rushed to enter into head-and-head debate with the Texas League president.

Nevertheless they did consider themselves somewhat entitled to opinions on the qualifications of their manager, Bobby Bragan, and showed no reluctance to express them. It just happened they contrasted with those of the circuit official.

To the charge that Bragan "has no control over his players," Walter Fiala said:

"I've never seen him miss a trick."

'S MATTER—IS HE TOO HIGH UP? by Hal Coffman

Tulsa Monopolizes Loop Honors, Statistics Reveal

Tulsa monopolized individual and team honors during the regular Texas League baseball season, final and official figures released Saturday by Statistician W. B. Ruggles show.

Tommy Tatum swatted .333 on 532 times at bat for top batting honors. He also led in base stealing with 37 thefts.

Harry Perkowski posted an outstanding record when he won 22 games while losing 10, appeared in 40 games, had 21 complete games, pitched 263 innings, fanned 163 and issued 105 bases on balls.

In team batting Tulsa finished far ahead with a mark of .282 and also led in runs, hits and doubles.

Dee Fondy of Fort Worth hit .328 and Bill Sommers of San Antonio hit .326 for the next best marks behind Tatum.

Ed Garcia of Oklahoma City won 19 games and lost 16 to be almost as active as Perkowski.

Cloyd Boyer of Houston had 188 strike-outs to head that department.

Because he did not appear in 100 games, Danny Boone of Oklahoma City was not eligible for batting honors. He finished with a mark of .355.

HYMAN PEARLSTONE, No. 1 Dallas fan, with one of his souvenirs—a catcher's mitt.

Pearlstone Has Subscribed to Game's 'Bible' Since '88

DALLAS, Tex. — Hyman Pearlstone, baseball's champion fan, has been a subscriber to THE SPORTING NEWS since 1888.

"I've been reading it for 62 years," he said. "I wouldn't be without it."

Texan Makes Trip With A's for 44th Year

By BILL RIVES

DALLAS, Tex.

Hyman Pearlstone, baseball's champion fan, is on the road again with the Philadelphia Athletics.

This is the forty-fourth consecutive year that Pearlstone, president of a hardware firm in Dallas, has made at least one road trip with the Athletics.

For 20 of those years he wore the uniform of Connie Mack's men, although he never has been a professional player.

The Lip Rides Again in Texas

MANAGER LEO DUROCHER of the Giants ran into an American League umpire who remembered Commissioner A. B. Chandler's instructions to arbiters, at Fort Worth, Tex., April 7, and Lippy drew a $100 fine as a result. Leo didn't like one of Charley Berry's decisions on a play at second base in the fifth inning, continued his argument from the bench. He even refused to leave the field, when ordered to depart. Result: the automatic $100 levy ordered by the Commissioner some seasons back for failure to obey an umpire's orders in an exhibition game. The Commissioner's stand is that a game's a game, even before the season.

YOUR PROBLEMS AND MINE

BALL PARK by Jeff D. Ray

In old days it was a crime to criticize the king. With the growth of democracy it came to be said that a cat can look at the king. Because they receive so much criticism, much of it unjust, I hesitate to speak a word of disagreement with the Fort Worth Ministers Association. But I hope a man can without offense disagree with his own crowd. Confessedly unworthy, I have for 70 years been ex officio qualified to enter automatically any ministers' association. While a busy life prevents frequent attendance on their meetings, I am constitutionally a member of the one in Fort Worth. When 2,000 miles away from home I picked up the Star-Telegram, I was surprised to see the following item:

"The Fort Worth General Ministers Association voted Monday to ask the owners of the Fort Worth Cats baseball team to set aside a section in the grandstand as a non-beer drinking reservation for 'ministers, Christian laymen, their wives and children.'"

Maybe I am so decided on such subjects that like the Indian's tree I lean the other way. But I could never find myself willing to ask any public favors for a minister and his family, just because he is a minister, that would not be accorded to all others, say ditch diggers and men of other legitimate, honorable callings. I do not mean to be offensive but it seems to me there is almost an element of snobbery in this ministerial request. Are ministers and their families so sacrosanct that they must be specially shielded from meeting upon the level their fellowmen? Is the Cats' ball park so vile that ministers and their families, without special protection, should not go there? I do not at all believe that it is. But if it is true, then there are two solutions. Either do not go, or continue an impartial movement to rid the entire field of morally objectionable features—liquor along with the rest. I do not suppose the Cats will pay much attention to a request for a specially rarefied corner for "ministers and Christian laymen"; and I do not blame them. But I am of the fixed opinion that if the ministers' association went before them as real men seeking the public good, and not as clergymen seeking special class favors, they would receive not only courteous but favorable consideration.

Under the tutelage of B. H. Carroll and R. C. Burleson, I learned to take my place as a man in the rough and tumble with other men, having no thought that, because I am "of the cloth," I am entitled to enjoy the privileges of class legislation.

POPP LOST HIS GAME.

Sammie McMackin Was in Gilt Edge Form on Saturday.

The game Saturday was the kind that suits a large number of persons, but it was not the kind that confirmed cranks like. It was clean baseball but being a pitcher's battle it left no chance for excitement. The contest to a large extent consisted of three men walking to the plate and either striking out or making little hits down to the infield. The lack of hitting, and the absence of men on bases made it impossible for the combinations and conditions that make a game critical and give to it a real baseball interest. The only thing in the game that lent an element of excitement was the closeness of the score. It made it possible for Danville to bat out a victory at any time if they had been in batting form. McMackin pitched the finest game ever seen on the home ground. Five little singles were made off him. In four innings only twelve men faced him and no one got a hit until the fifth inning. Popp pitched for Danville and was batted for seven singles and two doubles. He had fine command of the ball but the locals were lucky in getting their hits bunched. The runs came in the third. McMackin made a hit, went to second on a single by Longley and scored on McDivitt's two bagger. In the eighth Longley made a hit. McDivitt followed with his second two bagger. Hagerty made a single and both Longley and McDivitt scored.

Danville's lone run was made in the fifth on a hit by Hulseman, a sacrifice by Abbott and a single by Bowen. In the ninth there was an exciting finish. Two runs would tie the score and three would win the game. King came to bat and made a few swipes without hitting the ball. Abbott took him out out and substituted McIntyre, who is a hard hitter. Mac flew out to third base. Walters and Wright lined out singles, and Hulseman, the heavy hitter of the team, came to bat. He hit a hard one down to Bammert but the little shortstop got it, fielded Wright out to second and Kiernan promptly doubled Hulseman at first, ending the game. The score:

Cats Bump Oilers, 4-0, Capture Title

ball, stabbed it with his glove and while falling toward the left field line, fired to Gino Marionetti at second for the side-retiring force out.

Le Gros put out another blaze in the seventh when, with two on and none out, he scooped up Pinch Hitter Ham Schulte's hot grounder, sped back to step on third and fired a strike to Fondy at first for a double play. After that the threatening inning was easy for Sloat.

Sloat's last big test came in the eighth, when he faced the 2-3-4 power men of the Tulsa line-up. Starting with Bob Usher, who fouled off six pitches, Sloat struck him out. Then he slipped a called third strike past Kress and stopped Tommy Tatum on a grounder to Le Gros.

Thus he disposed of the club's heavier guns in 1-2-3 order and eliminated the necessity of facing Capps or Burns with men on base.

That left them for the ninth, but Capps grounded out to Le Gros, Burns walked, Al Unser popped to Marionetti, who went back into center field for the ball, and Jay Haney, who belted a long drive to Schmees to end the game.

The crowd of 9,600 boosted the total attendance for the seven-game series to 49,968, of which 36,670 were attracted at La Grave Field.

The Dixie Series is next for the champions, who will await outcome of the Nashville-Birmingham playoff.

It stood, after Tuesday night's game, at 3-2 for Birmingham.

Manager Bragan said the athletes would take Wednesday off but he considered sending at least one pitcher over to watch the final game or games. His chief lieutenant, George Dockins, scouted Tulsa batsmen just before the final Cat-Oiler round.

Early Trials of League, Set Up in 1888 by John McCloskey, Recalled; Four of Original Cities Now in Circuit

By FLINT DUPRE,
Sports Editor of Dallas Journal.

DALLAS, Tex.—Opening of the Texas League race on April 13 carried special significance for officials, players and fans of the circuit, as well as for Organized Ball in general, for that date marked the start of the fiftieth anniversary season of the Lone Star loop, founded in 1888. Emerging from many vicissitudes, changes in club membership and an occasional interruption in operation, the Texas now is a strong Class A-1 circuit, recognized as one of the staunchest of minor loops and as a fertile field of development for future major league stars.

Even in this jubilee year, a change was made, Shreveport coming back to solidify the circuit when Galveston surrendered its franchise. Thus, the 1938 representatives are Dallas, Fort Worth, Shreveport, Oklahoma City, Tulsa, Houston, San Antonio and Beaumont. The original members were Dallas, Fort Worth, Austin, San Antonio, Galveston, Houston, and New Orleans, admitted briefly in the latter part of the first season.

No club has played straight through the 50 years, as there was actually no league in 1900 or 1901. The circuit of 1899 was strictly a South Texas League, and the one in 1902 was strictly North Texas. From 1903-06, the Texas League remained in North Texas and the South Texas cities were in the South Texas League, the two loops consolidating in 1907. Dallas and Fort Worth have remained in every year of the loop's existence, except 1899, and Houston and San Antonio have been represented continuously, except for 1902.

Prior to 1902, the Texas League finished out one season. That should give some of the present-day players and officials an idea of how tough it was to put professional ball on a self-maintaining basis in earlier days. However, after that year the circuit never lost any time, although the schedule was cut short in 1918 because a great war was in progress. On July 7 that year, with Dallas on top, President J. Walter Morris announced that the schedule would be discontinued in the interest of winning the war.

McCloskey Independents Inspired Loop.

Synonymous with the history of the Texas League is the name of John J. McCloskey, father of the circuit. A first baseman and an outfielder, who had played with Louisville, El Paso and St Joseph, McCloskey organized a strong independent team in Joplin, Mo., and in 1887 barnstormed in Texas. This sent interest in the game soaring and that winter, the circuit was organized, with Honest John's Joplin team representing Austin. Later that season, McCloskey transferred the club to San Antonio.

Heads of the Texas

During the 50 years since the founding of the Texas League in 1888, eighteen actual presidents and one acting head have presided over the circuit which observes a jubilee this season. The late J. Doak Roberts, who served during two different periods, put in the biggest total of years as head of the circuit. Here are the presidents since the loop was organized:

1888—Fred Turner, Austin, and Robert Adair, Houston.
1889—Louis Newburg, Waco.
1890—Joseph Seinsheimer, Galveston.
1892—Si Packard, Houston.
1895—J. C. McNealus, Dallas, and C. P. Gregory, Sherman.
1896-1898-1902—John L. Ward, Fort Worth.
1896-1897—Louis Heuermann, San Antonio.
1899—George B. Dermody, Galveston.
1903—Newton H. Lassiter, Fort Worth.
1904—William A. Abey, Fort Worth.
1904-05-06 and 1921 through 1929—J. Doak Roberts, Dallas.
1907-1908—Dr. William R. Robbie, San Antonio.
1909 through 1913—Wilbur P. Allen, Austin.
1914-1915—William R. Davidson, Waco.
1916 through 1920—J. Walter Morris, Fort Worth.
1929—W. B. Ruggles (acting part of year).
1930 through 1937 (and still going strong)—J. Alvin Gardner.

McCloskey once told W. B. Ruggles, official league statistician, that he thought the birth of the Texas loop in 1888 was due to the fact the Joplin independents had defeated the New York Giants in 1887. McCloskey's team was to play the Giants three games in Austin. The independents won two games and the National leaguers refused to finish the third.

"Austin, then about to celebrate the dedication of the new capitol building, was wild with enthusiasm," McCloskey told Ruggles. "Public-spirited men like Sam French, Ed Byrne, Charley Newning and others joined me in getting the new league launched and the Texas League went on to make history."

The McCloskey era of the league ended with the ill-fated 1892 season and the late Ted Sullivan came upon the scene to reorganize the circuit, with George Dermody playing an important part in holding it together through 1899.

With so many births and rebirths, the names of Robert Adair of Houston, Alex Easton of Galveston, Leon Vendig of Dallas, J. Doak Roberts, C. W. Eisenfelder, Claud Rielly, Wade Moore, Morris Block, Joe Gardner, W. H. Ward, Dr. W. R. Robbie and many others, who had a hand in perpetuating the loop, must not be overlooked.

Four cities were represented at the meeting in Austin, December 15, 1887—Dallas, Austin, Houston and New Orleans—when McCloskey launched the organization. New Orleans, however, withdrew, with Fort Worth taking its place, although the Louisiana city joined the league later in the first season, which found six teams operating after one team had been transferred. San Antonio was the sixth original member.

Fans sat right behind the catcher for 25 cents in the first league games. The salary limit per team was $1,000. The umps drew $75 a month, plus railroad fare, and the league secretary was paid $50 a month. The players drank beer, were known as hell-raisers and were not accepted in polite society.

"Those were the days," McCloskey sighed, when he visited Dallas a few years ago and replayed many of those early games in fanning bees.

There were plenty of fights to enliven the history of the Texas League. In fact, there was no pennant awarded for the 1888 season, although old-timers say the Dallas club, managed by Charles Levis, deserved the flag, which generates an argument from survivors of the Austin club. Several games played by New Orleans were ordered thrown out for various and sundry reasons, but the Dallas Hams were on top, on July 7, also on September 2, when the season ended. Fred Turner was the first president and it was up to him to settle such matters. He said there would be no official champion.

No recital of the Texas League history would be complete without a salute to the late Doak Roberts, who spent a quarter of a century in various positions in the league as owner, president and club official. He was president of the league longer than any other man—1904 through 1906 and 1921 through 1929, in which year he died.

Gardner In Charge Since 1930.

Roberts' death brought into action the present league president, J. Alvin Gardner, who was the prexy of the Wichita Falls club for four years, beginning in 1926, and who took his present position in 1930.

A well-to-do man of high ideals, Gardner has done much to keep the league on the high plane it occupies. He fathered the league through the dark days of the depression. He has paid special attention to his umpiring staff and has sold such arbiters as Ziggy Sears, Lee Ballanfant and Steve Basil to the majors. He has watched players by the score go to the majors and make good—stars like Hank Greenberg, Dizzy Dean, Joe Medwick, Al Todd, Lee Grissom, Schoolboy Rowe, Rudy York and others too numerous to list because of space requirements.

One of the league's milestones was the birth of the Dixie Series in 1920, with Fort Worth defeating Little Rock, four games to two. Fort Worth dominated that series until 1926, when Dallas broke through to play New Orleans in the annual classic. During that period, Fort Worth won six Texas League and five Dixie championships under the management of Jake Atz and the late Paul LaGrave, who was business manager.

Each club will have a distinct and separate celebration of the fiftieth anniversary this year. President Gardner says many ideas are being worked out and that the booming of fireworks will continue far into the season.

It isn't every year that a league can celebrate its fiftieth anniversary.

Waco Players Allowed Only One Hit by Doyle in the Game Yesterday at Fort Worth Grounds.

JUNE 14, 1902.

The Paris team came up from Corsicana yesterday morning only partially recovered from a campaign that Mike O'Connor and his men had apparently conducted on the principle employed by Major Waller in the Philippines—to make things resemble a howling wilderness. Those two terrible drubbings of Thursday—16 to 2 and 15 to 0—were highly suggestive of Samar.

The Parisians had not recovered from the shock when they lined up at the Dallas park yesterday afternoon. They outbatted the Dallas men and Adams did the better pitching, but when it came to fielding, the infielders didn't seem to be able to hold the ball when it landed or to throw it accurately when attempting to do so. Those eight errors tell the tale of defeat entirely.

There was one bright exception to this general bad exhibition on the part of the visitors—Thebo in center field. His work was an exhilarating relief in a dreary situation. He made two clean hits, scored twice, had four put-outs and two assists—a remarkable record for an outfielder. He also stole two bases.

The home team played a better game than five errors indicate. While Nickell is credited with three errors in centerfield, none of the misplays caused serious damage. The men batted in a bunch when any batting was done, and in the sixth inning they took a strong spurt and passed their opponents, who seemed to have a safe lead of four runs. The scoring of 7 by Dallas in the sixth, however, put the "howling wilderness" sensation over the visitors again, and from which they could not recover.

In the matter of batting, France and Thomas were strongly in evidence. Each had three singles to his account, and these were productive of four of the six runs made by their side.

It was ladies' day and the attendance was above the 1,000 mark. About 300 ladies were in the grandstand and seemed to enjoy seeing Dallas win, even at the expense of unlucky Paris. The score:

POOR PLAYING BY WACO.

Twenty-Three Runs for Fort Worth and Nothing for Visitors.

SPECIAL TO THE NEWS.

Fort Worth, Tex., June 13.—June 13 was Waco's unlucky day, for without making a run they were defeated by a 23 to 0 score.

Doyle gave a magnificent exhibition of headwork and endurance. He is slight in build, and yet he was as effective in the ninth inning as in any other. Dugan, who did fine fielding for his side, was the one mascot to get a hit.

Rundell was unsteady and much worse than the twelve bases on balls and the two wild pitches indicated. Noyes saved him several wild pitches by good stops of wide or low balls.

There was no feature to the game but the slugging of the ball by most of the Fort Worth batters. They made seventeen hits, with a total of twenty-four.

Plummer, who masqueraded as Ryan for some games, is playing under his real name and put up a fine game today.

The same clubs play tomorrow at the new park. The Sunday game will be called at 4 o'clock instead of 4:30, as during the week.

Monday is a day off and Fort Worth will go to Denton to play with the local club on that day.

CORSICANA STILL WINNING.

Texarkana Visitors Played Good Ball, but Met Defeat.

SPECIAL TO THE NEWS.

Corsicana, Tex., June 13.—The game between Corsicana and Texarkana this afternoon was a hot and exciting one. French pitched first-class ball and batted well and timely. Hits in the ninth by Murphy and Wolfe came near turning the tide. Corsicana's team was considerably changed on account of Catcher Clark being given a holiday, but an excellent game was played. The tail-enders also played well. The score:

MINOR LEAGUE RECORD MAY FALL THIS YEAR BEFORE BAT OF KRAFT

With the four-year-old record of the Texas League in home-runs safely tied in mid-week, Clarence Kraft, the roistering bludgeoner of the Panthers aims at a record that has existed since 1895, standing as a world-mark until 1921, when Ruth hove along, and still holding as a minor league mark—Perry Werden's total of forty-five home-runs made for the Minneapolis club of the old American Association.

With but ten homers required to tie this figure and fifty games in which to reach it, Kraft has an even chance to set a new minor league mark. The world record of Ruth seems safe enough—Kraft would have to average approximately a home-run every other game to equal the Bambino's figure of fifty-nine.

When Kraft hit his thirty-fifth homer Wednesday he was a full month and a half ahead of the schedule of Hack Eibel, the record-holder, who clouted his thirty-fifth on Sept. 11, 1921. And if Kraft keeps up the average Eibel set he will touch fifty before the season is over, as Eibel hit fifteen of his thirty-five after July 23, 1921.

Big Boy Picks His Park.

Big Boy, the Fort Worth hero, has timed his 1924 home-runs with telling effect as pay balls. A homer is worth nothing financially on the road. Kraft has hit twenty-two of the thirty-five in the Fort Worth park, the remainder being distributed as follows: Wichita Falls 4, Galveston 3, Houston 2 and one each in the other four parks. The thirty-five homers have been made in thirty games, twenty-six of which Fort Worth has won and only four of which have been lost. Twenty-one have been hit off right-handed pitching, fourteen off left-handed. The thirty-five drives have scored thirty-eight runners besides Kraft himself.

A close study of Kraft's record indicates a unique relation between the winning pitching record of Joe Pate and the big first sacker's home-runs. Pate has won nineteen games. Kraft has hit home-runs in fourteen games in which Pate has worked and thirteen which he has won.

Tells About Strike-Outs.

Kraft for five years has been the most powerful offensive factor of the Panther club, like Ruth, his major league prototype, and for that matter any real slugger, he is a brilliant example of the hit or miss clan—he usually either hits hard or strikes out. Fans in seven cities derive considerable enjoyment whenever the Big Boy swings at a third one.

Yet Kraft himself regards the strike-out as a help to the club. "If I do not hit safe, I would far rather strike-out than hit a grounder, provided there are runners on base," he says. "The reason is obvious—I am likely to hit into a double play. I am only moderately fast and I hit a hard fast ground ball of the type that an infielder gets quickly. Hence the double play. If I strike out, the team is only hurt by the fact that I have not hit safe."

Kraft's record that ties Eibel has run ahead of Shreveport's 1920 driver throughout the season. Kraft hit his fifth on May 7, nine days ahead of Eibel's schedule, his tenth on May 11, twenty-four days ahead; his twentieth on June 15, twenty-six days ahead; his thirtieth on July 12, forty-four days ahead; his thirty-fifth on July 23, fifty days ahead.

Official Texas League Averages Show Fort Worth's Victory Was No Fluke

The race for the batting supremacy of the Texas league in 1921 was practically a two-man affair, Clarence Kraft of Fort Worth and "Hack" Eibel of Shreveport, both veteran players, the former a right-hand hitter and the latter a southpaw, fighting it out from the start with frequent interchanges of lead. Both are slugging types of hitters and mixed strikeouts plentifully with their blows, but vied with each other for the honor of leading in extra bases and in run driving. For nearly three-quarters of the season the pair kept their averages around .400, but slumped toward the close. In the final month Eibel lost ground in hitting and Kraft led him by 15 points.

Kraft set a new Texas league record by hammering out 212 hits, the best previous mark being 200 by Ed. Brown in 1920. The big Fort Worth first baseman led the circuit in scoring runs with 132, but also topped it in strikeouts, whiffing 89 times. With a total of 376 bases for the season, Kraft set another new Lone Star mark, but Eibel's 182 extra bases marked the Shreveporter the king of extra base swatters. This is also a new record for the league, as is the count of thirty-five home runs made by the left-hander.

The titular leadership of the year goes to George Bischoff, hard hitting substitute catcher for the Wichita Falls club used chiefly as a pinch hitter. Bischoff compiled an average of .368 in eighty games, in twenty-one of which he was an emergency swatter and in less than half of which he played a full game. Terrific batting in the final days of the race gave Bischoff a nine-point lead over his teammate, the veteran Bob Bescher, who dropped out a month before the season closed with a mark of .359 in seventy games. A twisted leg put Bescher out of commission just as his team started on a long road trip practically certain to put him out of the .350 class if he dropped as heavily as his team did.

Danny Clark of Wichita Falls was a close opponent of Kraft and Eibel in the race for offensive supremacy. He scored 126 runs to Kraft's 132, made 199 hits to Kraft's 212, ranked third in total bases with 326 and in extra bases with 167.

George Whiteman, boss of the Houston Buffs, led the league in two-baggers with 53 to Clark's 50. Eibel topped in triples with 18, Joey Connolly of San Antonio having 16. Cecil Coombs of Fort Worth was the leading sacrificer with 51, Roy Storey of Shreveport coming second with 48. That Hack Eibel was a feared batter is evidenced by his 106 bases on balls, a new league record, with the chunky little Nic DeMaggio of Beaumont exhibiting almost as phenomenal a batting eye, drawing 104. Opposing pitchers slammed Joe Munson of Dallas 16 times and Ray Blades and John Baggan of Houston 14 each, none of this trio seeming to mind it. Eibel led the circuit in batting in runs with 145, closely pushed by Kraft, 141, Clark being third at 116.

The lost art of base stealing was revived by Fred Henry, who pilfered 52 cushions, the first time the Texas mark has crossed the half century in several seasons. Eugene Bailey of Houston ran a good second with 46. Henry however was caught stealing only 17 times, while Bailey was stopped 30. The best base running average was made by Connolly of San Antonio, who was turned back only 10 times in 29 attempts.

Kraft led the league in whiffs with 89, Blades of Houston having 88. John Vann, who struck out but 14 times in 331 times at bat, again has the best mark.

TEAM BATTING.

The team batting averages show that on the offense the champion Fort Worth club conclusively outplayed every other team in the league in every department except one, base stealing.

Fort Worth not only had the best team batting average, .286 to Shreveport's .284, but the Panthers scored thirty-four more runs than the closest club, made thirty-six more hits, rapped for 104 more total bases, thirty-three more doubles, 12 more home runs, made 5 more sacrifices, drew 70 more passes, and hit in 70 more runs Shreveport led the league in triples.

San Antonio had a decided edge in baserunning, the club being fast on its feet and in Fred Henry and Frankie Fuller two clever base thieves. The Buffs ran the Bears a close race, however.

Six Hits in Six Times at Bat.

June 15, Lapan (Galveston) off Darrough-Kroh. (Wichita Falls.)

Five Hits in Five Times at Bat.

April 23, Kraft (Fort Worth) off Anderson-Mangum-Ruth-Bowman. (Wichita Falls.)

April 30, E. Knight, (Galveston), off Meine-Humphries (Beaumont.

June 26, Sears (Fort Worth) off Jacobus-Humphries (Beaumont).

July 3, DeMaggio (Beaumont) off Williams, (San Antonio.)

July 27, Distel (Galveston), off Pate (Fort Worth).

July 27, C. McDonald (Wichita Falls), off Periotti (Houston).

Aug. 18, G. J. Miller (Wichita Falls), off Lybrand-Tiner (San Antonio.)

McDonald's Great Record.

Charles (Tex) McDonald set a new Texas league and possibly minor league record by making eleven consecutive hits. In his last two times at bat off Perryman of Galveston, McDonald on July 25 rapped singles. On July 26 off Bolden of Houston, he hit three singles and a double in four times at bat. On July 27, against Pierroti of Houston, he slammed out three singles and two home runs in five times at bat. Barfoot of Houston stopped him cold the next day.

Clarence Kraft established the league record for the season by hitting for fourteen total bases on April 23 when he made two singles and three home runs off Anderson, Mangum, Ruth and Bowman of Wichita Falls. On June 18, Joe Connolly of San Antonio netted 12 total bases on a single and three home runs, Bird, Fletcher, and Gleason of Shreveport being the victims.

James C. Galloway, field leader of the Dallas club, had the best run of the year in hitting safely 21 consecutive games from July 31 through Aug. 26, inclusive.

No notable marks were made in scoring runs in one game, driving in runs, or making doubles and triples. Ten Texas leaguers drove in five runs in one game during the year. Four bases on balls in one game was the best record of this kind.

F. R. Blades of Houston twice during the season stole four bases in one game, turning the feat at the expense of Catcher White of San Antonio on April 30 with Fincher and Davenport working, and on Sept. 5 off Brock, San Antonio, Tiner and Couchman working. On Sept. 9, Distel of Galveston was caught stealing four times by

FIELDING AVERAGES OF TEXAS LEAGUE

Bob Couchman, the veteran slow ball artist is the real fielding leader of the pitchers, with Barfoot of Houston the best double play artist.

Whaling of Beaumont tops the catchers in fielding. Lapan of Galveston has the best record in holding opponents from base stealing, though Frank Kitchens' season work in 13 games is as excellent. He leads in double plays.

Dutch Schliebner is again the leading first baseman while Fred Henry sets a new league mark for figuring in double plays, 107. Fuller of San Antonio is the real leader in fielding at second and leads in double plays. Haley of Fort Worth leads the third sackers, having participated in twice as many games as Tullos, San Antonio, who has a higher average. Haley leads the third basemen in double plays. Rigney of Fort Worth is the real leader at short but double-play honors go to Stansbury, Beaumont.

Baggan leads in left field, Coombs in center, DeMaggio in right. The latter, materially assisted by the short fence in Beaumont, leads all outfielders in assists with thirty-two in right. Storey of Shreveport with ten assists in left and twenty-two in center, is really the best throwing outfielder of the circuit. He leads in double plays, having five in left and seven in center. Durst and DeMaggio lead for one position with nine each.

The following fielding averages include only players participating in ten games at one position, pitchers in five:

Earned Run Average Standing.

With the exception of Phillips, who took part in but a few games, no Texas league pitcher succeeded in holding the opposition to less than a two run earned average, the best mark being that of John Hollingsworth of Wichita Falls, who allowed 2.01.

Pate of Fort Worth participated in the most games, 52; Williams of Dallas and San Antonio in the most innings, 338. Hollingsworth led in strike-outs, 213, while Gleason of Shreveport was the wildest pitcher, issuing 126 bases on balls. Conley of Dallas had the best average control.

While Tipple of Dallas fanned fifteen Galveston batsmen in an eight-inning game, the best record for nine innings was made by Williams, San Antonio, who, on Sept. 4, struck out fourteen Houston players. On July 21, Swartz, Dallas, whiffed thirteen Wichita Falls men. In two consecutive games, June 18 and 23, Hollingsworth struck out twenty-three men, fanning eleven for Houston the first game and twelve for Galveston in the second.

Team Fielding.

The champion Fort Worth club also proved the best field team in the Texas league, having a four-point advantage over Galveston. San Antonio and Wichita Falls tied for the honor of leading in double plays. The San Antonio record in preventing opponents from stealing is the best on the circuit.

Symbols Used.

Following are the symbols used in the fielding averages: G., games; PO., put outs; A., assists; E., errors.

Fielding Features.

Longest runs of games without error by positions:

Catchers—Moore (Fort Worth), twenty-four games, July 29, Aug. 24.

First Basemen—Schliebner (Galveston), twenty-nine games, July 31, Aug. 27.

Second Basemen—Fuller (San Antonio), nineteen games, July 4, July 24.

Third Basemen—Haley (Fort Worth), twenty-four games, April 29, May 23.

Shortstops—Stansbury (Beaumont), nineteen games, Aug. 6-Aug. 26.

Outfielders — Munson (Dallas), forty-six games, May 31, July 10.

Exceptional number of chances in nine-inning game:

C. O. Kraft (Fort Worth), first base, had twenty chances June 12—eighteen putouts, one assist and one error.

John Brock (San Antonio), catcher, on Sept. 4 had fifteen chances, all putouts, putouts.

E. Palmer (Dallas), second baseman, had fifteen chances Aug. 6—nine putouts, five assists and one error.

C. McDonald (Wichita Falls), third baseman), had eleven chances May 2—four putouts, six assists and one error.

K. Segrist (Dallas), third base, had eleven chances Aug. 11—two putouts, eight assists and one error.

J. Stansbury (Beaumont), had fourteen chances at short, June 5—six putouts and eight assists.

J. Connolly (San Antonio), center fielder, had nine chances April 26—all putouts.

R. Storey (Wichita Falls), center fielder, had nine chances Aug. 25—seven putouts and two assists.

On May 24 John Henry, Shreveport catcher substituting in right field had four assists against the Beaumont club. The game was played at Beaumont, where the right field fence is so close that a drive across it is only a two-base hit. Henry threw three men out at first and one at the plate.

Double Play Statistics.

Fuller, Gross, Henry, the second, short, first combination of the San Antonio club proved the fastest double play combination in the league, figuring between themselves only in fifty-seven two-ply retirements, seven better than the fifty of Holahan, Hartford and Eibel of Shreveport. Fort Worth's combination of Hoffman, Rigney and Kraft was not formed until a month after the season opened.

The greatest number of one combination double plays was twenty made from Hartford, shortstop, to Holahan, second, to Eibel, first base, Shreveport. The next best was eighteen from Gross, shortstop to Fuller, second base, to Henry, first base, San Antonio.

Thirty-one unassisted double plays were made during the season as follows: Dallas—Tod Miller, first base, one; M. Smith, shortstop, one; Stow, shortstop, two; Segrist, third base, one. Fort Worth—Kraft, first base, four; Haney, third base, one; Coombs, first base, one. Wichita Falls—McDonald, third base, two; Griggs, first base, one; Works, first base, one; Tanner, shortstop, two. San Antonio—E. Gross, shortstop, two; Henry, first base, three; Nee, shortstop, one Houston—Bailey, second base, one; Bottomley first base, one, Blades, second base, one; Darringer, shortstop, one. Galveston—Distel, second base, one; Lapan, catcher, one.

1921 Triple Plays.

April 22—Dallas (Palmer second, Smith shortstop, Felix, first base) vs. Fort Worth.

June 13—San Antonio (Nee third base Fuller second base, Henry first base) vs Wichita Falls.

July 3—San Antonio (Fuller second base, Gross shortstop, Henry first base) vs. Beaumont.

Aug. 2—Fort Worth (Haley third base, Phelan second base, Kraft first base) vs. Beaumont.

Aug. 24—Beaumont (Stansbury shortstop, Whaling catcher, Doyle second base) vs. Wichita Falls.

For the second successive year Joe Pate, veteran left hander of the Fort Worth champions, supplied the best winning average of the season. This year the southpaw set a new Texas league record for victories in a single season by rolling up thirty, seven more than his teammate, Paul Wachtel, was able to achieve. Pate met but nine defeats during the season and went through the entire year without a loss to the Galveston club.

Barfoot of Houston, who had the best season of his career, had the best record in finishing his starts, as he finished thirty-three of thirty-five games he began and finished three others as relief hurler. His teammate, Clyde Goodwin, was never knocked out of the box in his nine starts. Nine was the greatest number of shutouts registered by any pitcher, Johns of Fort Worth turning the trick. Bowman of Wichita Falls, Whittaker of Fort Worth, Williams of San Antonio and Gleason of Shreveport had five each.

Hollingsworth of Wichita Falls had the season's best run of consecutive victories, ten straight, from May 25 through June 27, during which period he met and defeated every club in the league except Dallas, beating Beaumont three times and San Antonio and Galveston twice each.

The longest run of defeats was sustained by "Mollie" Meis of Shreveport, who joined the Shreveport club on June 23 and stuck out the season without winning a victory and losing twelve games. Another unique record was set by Schaefer of Shreveport, who figured in fourteen games without getting credit for a victory or a defeat.

The following table shows the record of all Texas league pitchers participating in five games as to winning and losing, with their work against each club in the league.

Galveston 19, Shreveport 2.

By The Associated Press.

GALVESTON, Texas, July 26.—Falling on the Gasser hurlers for twenty-three hits for a total of forty bases, the Crabs chalked up a 19-to-2 victory over Shreveport today. The Crabs chased Walters from the mound before he had retired a man in the first inning and continued their attack on Harris.

HOME RUN KINGS OF THE TEXAS LEAGUE 1924-

CATS JAR SPUDDERS FROM FIRST POSITION WITH 6 TO 2 VICTORY

BY BILLY BEE.

CAT players have adopted the slogan, "They shall pass," which, it must hastily be said, has nothing whatever to do with the ancient and hazardous game of African golf. It is more or less a lift of the famous French slogan at Verdun and in this particular instance refers to the Wichita Falls Spudders, who were jarred loose from the top floor in the Texas League domicile Wednesday and passed into oblivion, and if the grand old dope holds out are due for more jarrings. Their upset Wednesday was 6 to 2, due largely to a wicked willow wielded by Clarence Kraft, pitching and hitting by Paul Wachtel, classy backstopping by Homer Haworth, sensational fielding by Coombs, Tavener and Hoffman, and a few other things we can't think of just at the present writing.

Skipper Atz planned Thursday to send Joe Pate, southpaw, against the Spudders in the second game of the crucial series, while Manager Salm figured on Pat Flaherty, big righthander who is the dead image of Babe Ruth.

The defeat of the Spudders, whose sensational winning streak a short while back carried them to the top, reminds us of Humpty Dumpty's fall from the wall or, as the poet so sweetly wrote:

The Spudders won a string of games and so the rooters come,
A goodly crowd with shout and song to see 'em make things hum.
And when the team went up the flue,
As flashes in the pan will do,
They went away and were heard to say, "My gosh, that gang is dumb."

THERE is no doubt the Wichita Falls sluggers' row is still capable of doing damage with the well known war club. They demonstrated that fact Wednesday when they outhit the Cats and had it not been for exceptionally strong support in the pinches, would have made more. But the fact remains that Wachtel was strong in the pinches, that the Cats had their backs up and defended their lair so successfully that it required two sacrifice flies to bring in the pair of Spudder runs counted. The Panthers on the other hand had plenty of punch behind their blows, Kraft and Wachtel particularly doing heavy damage.

JUST when he was most needed, Clarence Kraft "the big boy with the big stick," came through with two timely cracks, one, his twenty-fifth home run, and the other a slashing drive to deep right that rattled against the boards of the grandstand. It accounted for another run and missed being a home run by inches. Wachtel's single also brought in a pair at a time when they were welcome because they apparently sewed up the game.

AS FAR as we could learn, there was no alibi offered by the Spudder management or the players, although they pointed out spots where they declared the breaks were against them. They took their medicine without a whimper, although there was one very perceptible difference in the attitude of the Spudders as compared to the Cats when the tide of battle is at low ebb. The Spudders fought gamely enough through seven rounds and with a 4 to 2 score against them, were chattering like a forest full of monkies. But when the end of the eighth came and the count stood 6 to 2, they seemed to blow like the last rose of Summer. Their vaunted ninth inning strength was that of a Lilliputian against a Samson. Their top hands in the batting list started the ninth and incidentally they finished it—one, two, three—just like that.

Now had the Cats been fighting even such a losing game as were the Spudders, the old machine would have been roaring and Driver Jake Atz's high pitched voice would have been heard in Handley as he urged his noble athletes in words more sulphurous than a doughboy muleteer employs.

MUCH interest centered in Homer Summa, the fleet-footed outfielder, who bids fair to fall heir to the crown worn last year by Clarence Kraft, king of Texas swatters.

Here's what Homer turned in for a day's work:

First inning: Walked. Left stranded on base.

Third inning: Grounded to Kraft, forcing Tanner.

Fifth inning: Flied to Coombs, scoring Bescher.

Eighth inning. Hit sharply over second; robbed of hit by Hoffman's sensational play with bare hand. Hoffman flagged the ball, then picked it up and by a snap throw forced Adams at second. Singles by McDonald and Beck sent Summa to third. He scored on White's long fly to Coombs.

Fielding—Perfect day. Accepted four chances. None sensational but several of them difficult.

SO much for the crown prince and heir apparent to the throne of Swat. Let's now have a look at what the venerable old King Kraft contributed as his share of the day's work:

Batting—First time up, second inning; hit a home run over left field fence. One score, one hit.

Fourth Inning — Walked, stole second; scored from second when White and Miller collided trying to field Hoffman's fly. Run number two.

Sixth Inning—Forced Calvo at second. Stole second.

Eighth Inning—Drove terrific double to deep right center, rattling the boards. Scored Sears from first. Hit would have been homer had it been higher or if there had been no stand there. Scored on Hoffman's hit to right. Run number three, hit number two.

Fielding—Had nine putouts, one assist, one error.

The King is dead! Long Live the King!

MANY people contend comparisons are odious, but there are still lots of folks who like Limberger even tho' there's nothing with which to wash it down. So, it's just a matter of taste. Therefore, there were many who watched with deep interest the work of Earl Adams and Jack "Rabbit" Tavener, the midget shortstops. Adams has been sold to the Chicago Cubs for a price reported at $20,000. Be that as it may, he didn't look that much better by any means than our own ball hawk. Each got a hit, but the Rabbit had the busiest day of the two in the field. He had six putouts, three assists and one error. Some of his putouts were made by riding opposition players into second base and the li'l fella certainly showed gameness going in, albeit he looked in several instances, like a cork bobbing on the crest of a towering wave. That is except when he tied into Adams when Haworth threw the Spudder midget out. The little fellows looked like a couple of bantam roosters ready to light in spurs and bill.

MUCH of course has been said in the public prints and by word of mouth of the batting and fielding feats, although of the latter it should be said that Coombs pulled a couple of dandy catches, Phelan made a sweet stop of a grass cutter with the aid of only his gloved hand, Tavener played like a fiend and Bob Bescher robbed Jack Calvo of a hit in the first inning. The time has come then, to say a word or two of the pitching. Also a mouthful about the catching of Homer Haworth.

The fact the Spudders used three pitchers—Purdue, Mokan and Edmondson, while the Cats were content to go through with one Paul Wachtel, seems to offer prima faciae evidence that the Cats had the best of the pitching which was what they were expected to have. Wachtel was as steady as a rock and for once in his wild and woolly career had no bum chucks charged against him. Every inning except two saw Spudders standing on the sacks, yet Wachtel pitched on calmly and at no stage of the game showed fright.

NOT many times does a catcher work stand out as brilliantly as did that of Haworth's. The leather necked hustler was busier than a cranberry merchant at Christmas time. His aim to second was deadly as the speed boys—Tanner, Adams and Summa—will testify, and on two occasions he had the old noggin working just the same as if it was filled with a college professor's brains. Both times were when Bischoff, a dangerous hitter, came up and on each occasion Bischoff was purposely passed on four wide pitchell balls. There were two out in each instance. The first time the strategy was used, Purdue took his turn at bat, but the next time, Kitchens was sent in as pinch hitter and almost chased Coombs to the fence for his long drive.

Is Fort Worth On The Baseball Map? Well, We Should Smile!

Here's the Peerless Panthers, Their President, Secretary, Business Manager and Field Leader.

WILLIAM WHITTAKER

Familiarly known as "Bill," one of the pitching "Aces." Tyrone, N. M., claims Bill in the Winter.

JOSEPH PATE

Has allowed fewer earned runs per game than any pitcher in the league. He is a product of Fort Worth Central High School.

PAUL WACHTEL

The smiling Maryland farmer, who saws wood, says nothin' and wins a big majority of his games. He lives in Myersville, Md.

JAKE ATZ

Former member of the famous White Sox, now field leader of the Texas League champions. New Orleans is his home.

RICHARD ROBERTSON

Asks that he be labelled "Dick" Robertson. He is 'way up among the winning pitchers. He now calls Fort Worth home.

ZIGGY SEARS

Hits 'em hard and snares fly balls that few other outfielders can reach.

ROY APPLETON

Otherwise "The Arlington Athlete," who came as a "rookie" and is now a regular. He can go home on a street car after the game here.

ART PHELAN

Has had a most undesirable job for a man who likes to play. Phelan has been the utility man all season. He has had big league experience and is regarded as a crafty player. He winters in Florida.

AUGUST JOHNS

A portside heaver who expects to win his spurs next season as a regular with the Panthers. Known as "Lefty."

PAUL A. LA GRAVE

Used to be a ball player some years ago. but now he picks players for the Panthers. He is Secretary and Business Manager—the "business brains" of the club. His ability as a picker is reflected in the success of the team.

CLARENCE KRAFT

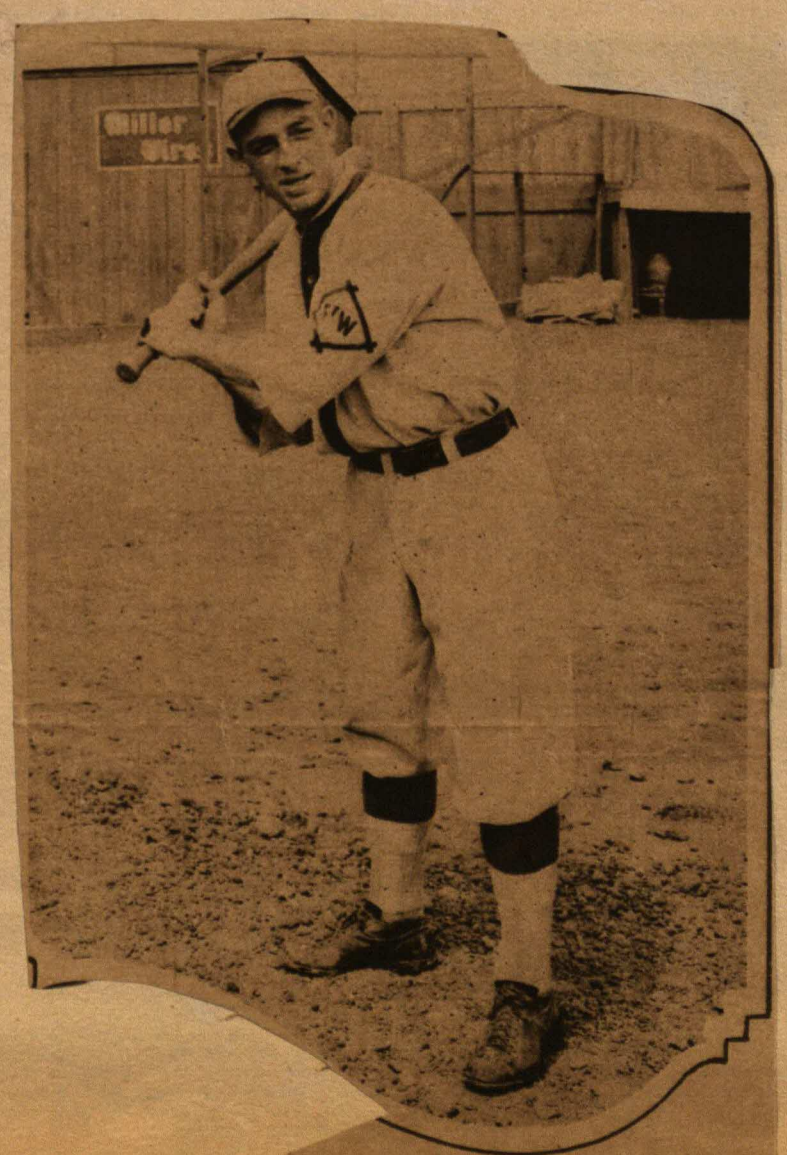
Swings a wicked willow as his home-run record shows and plays a nifty first-base. Kraft winters in California.

W. K. STRIPLING

President of the club whose keenest desire is to see the Panthers on top in every scrap they engage in during the season.

HENRY MOORE

Like Hoffman, has a nickname and hardly anyone else knows the husky catcher by any moniker except "Possum." He has a crackin' good whip and hits the ball a mile. Fort Smith, Ark., claims him.



ROBERT STOW

Is an institution in Fort Worth and so popular everyone calls him "Our Bobby." He's conceded to be the cleverest shortstop in the minors.

HOMER HAWORTH

Fights like wildcat from the time a ball game starts until it ends. Never gives in an inch and is a dangerous hitter. Lives in Portland, Ore.

EDWARD HOFFMAN

No one knows the keystone sacker except as "Dutch" and Texas may not know him hereafter except in the Winter. Detroit Tigers offered good money for him. "Dutch" used to be a cowpuncher. He lives in San Antonio.

RHINALDO WILLIAMS

Plays right field and puts more energy into his playing than almost any man who wears a baseball uniform. His home is Santa Cruz, Cal., and it's rumored "Rhiny" will hit a home run in the Matrimonial League this Fall.

RAY O'BRIEN

Is the most bashful of all the Panthers. He is one of the fastest men on the paths, a fielding wonder and this season has had a good batting average. St. Louis is his home.

FRANK HALEY

Spends his Winters at Tyrone, N. M., where he is a carpenter with a construction outfit and Whittaker keeps time on him. Haley is reckoned the best fielding third baseman in the league. And he's a star pinch hitter.

The score by innings:
GALVESTON. . . . . 000 000 000— 0
FORT WORTH. . . . . 100 000 00x— 1

Summary—Left on bases, Galveston 1, Fort Worth 3; sacrifice hit, Stow; bases on balls, off Whittaker 1, off Smithson 3; struck out, by Whittaker 5, by Smithson 1; double play, Kraft to Stow. Umpires, Miller and Lewis.

Fort Worth frapped Galveston, 1 0, Friday in the fastest game of the season in the Texas league. The visctory was remarkable in more ways than one. In the first place, Fort Worth won the show on ONE BASE HIT, which was manufactured by the clever Mr. Krfaft at the psychological moment.

Smithson, a big southpaw, blew his own ball game in the first round, when he walked Bittle and permitted Stow to lay down a perfect bunt. Bittle advanced on the sacrifice.

Sears also drew a pass and Kraft followed with the hit that sent Bittle home with the only marker of the ball game.

The victory gave Fort Worth three out of four from Galveston and all four were 1 to 0 battles. It was Fort Worth's last stand at home for some time. The Panthers have won ten out of fifteen games during the present session on the home field.

Manager Jake Atz will take his champions to Houston today. They will be on the road twelve days and expect to clinch the old pennant while away.

Three cheers for St. Jacob and his boys. They are playing the fastest ball in the Texas league and deserve the flag.

Galveston got five men to first base, four on hits and one on a pass. Two perished attempting to steal on the steel-armed Larry Woodall; one died in a twin killing and another was checked out attempting to move from first to third on a base hit. This was one of the great plays of the game.

Dowie nicked Whittaker for a hit in the third round and Erwin followed with a rifle-shot drive to right field. Darby O'Brien scooped up the ball on the first bound and heaved straight and true to the far corner for the nimble-footed Dowie. The Galveston man slid into the bag, but found Haley waiting for him with the ball. It was a major league play from start to finish. O'Brien owns the grandest throwing arm in the Texas league.

WOODALL GREAT CATCHER.

Larry Woodall is the greatest pegging backstop in the Texas ring. Coombs, a fast man, went down on him in the first. Woodall had the ball in Hoffman's hands waiting for the speedy Combs, when he arrived at second.

Hugh Bradley, another fast man, was erased attempting to pilfer in the second inning. He got a good start and legged it for a fare-you-well, but Woodall uncorked a peg that would have gotten Ty Cobb, Tris Speaker or George Sisler; Hoffman was there with the ball when Bradley reached second.

The Sand Crabs got two more men to first Dowie perished as mentioned above. Erwin took second while O'Brien and Haley were eliminating Mr. Dowie. Erwin never left second. Whittaker fanned Smithson and Garrity was pegged by the clever Mr. Haley.

Oh, yes, it was quite a ball game, in fact all four of the Galveston battles have been real games and the fans surely got a run for their money in the series that came to a close Friday.

BRILLIANT DOUBLE PLAY.

Kraft and Hoffman turned a double play in the second that took all the fight out of Galveston. Phelan started off with a walk—the only free pass issued by Whittaker during the game. Ace was there with perfect control.

Clark was instructed to bunt Phelan to second. He laid down a beauty bright. But Kraft was on top of the ball like a cat and winged it to second ahead of the fleet-footed Phelan. Hoffman relayed the pill back to first before Clark reached the bag and the slickest double play of the year was finished, strictly according to Hoyle. Whittaker received perfect support; in fact both teams played errorless ball.

SMITHSON'S BAD INNING.

Smithson had one bad inning, the first. After that he pitched world's championship ball. Fort Worth beat a great pitcher Friday, don't forget that.

Bittle deserves great credit for his brilliant dash to the plate on Kraft's hit. Smithson opened the first round by passing Little Bit. Stow was thrown out by Smithson on a bunt, Bittle taking second. Sears worked Smithson for a pass and Kraft hung around the plate until Smithson stuck the ball over. Some explosion when Clarence connected. The ball hopped through the pitcher's box and rolled past second. Bittle hiked for home and Combs came in for a throw. He turned a baby grand heave to the plate. Dowie took the ball on the hop, but Little Bit slid inside of the catcher and was waved safe.

After Bittle scored Smithson tightened up and retired O'Brien and Woodall on infield taps.

GARRITY'S GREAT CATCH.

Hoffman opened the second by gigging Smithson for the third and last piece of free transportation handed out by the Galveston twirler. Haley forced Hoffman at second and Whittaker forced Haley.

Thereafter the Cats went out in regulation order. Garrity, the Galveston left fielder, made a wonderful catch off Hoffman's bat in the fourth, mitting the ball against the fence in deep left.

Garrity looks like one of the most promising young players in the Texas league. This lad started the season at short, but was switched to the outfield on account of his small hands. He is ripe for a tryout in the big ring and will bring ig money on the auction block this fall.

Only eighteen batters faced Whittaker in the final six innings. Ace knocked 'em off in regulation style. He had everything—speed, control and a wonderful change of pace. This boy is some pitcher.

HOFFMAN GOING GOOD.

Bob Tarleton sent Hauser to the plate for Smithson in the ninth. No use. Whittaker had his number and made him roll the apple to Hoffman. And any time they roll 'em to Hoffman, it's sure death at first base. Hoffman is covering a world of ground on his left. He also works nicely on balls over second. Paul La Grave made a tenstrike when he bought this boy from Waco. Hoffman supplies a hitting punch the Panthers needed 1901.

Will McDivitt, one of the outfielders of the New Orleans Club of the Southern Association, was born 24 years ago at Ft. Worth, Tex., stands six feet high and is built on sprinting lines. He made his professional debut with his home team four years ago in an emergency and in his first game gave such evidence of batting ability that he earned a permanent place. In 1898 and 1899 he played in Texas and made a creditable record last season with the Decatur team of the Central League. Seven times in 1900 he made four hits in a game and in 12 games was credited with three safeties. He is a natural ball player and frequently makes sensational catches of difficult chances and cuts off runs at the plate by swift and accurate throws.

TWO EXCITING PLAYS IN THE OPENING GAME OF THE DIXIE WORLD'S SERIOUS 1921

Bottom—McLarry attempts to score on a fielders' choice in the third inning and is out at the plate. He was cut off so far that he turned off, despite the fact that the picture would seem to show him going into a hook slide.

Top—Don Brown scoring the last run of the fatal fourth inning. McLarry has scored and is standing to the right of the plate watching the play. Note the positions of McLarry, Umpire Sentell and Yockey, who is kneeling on his bat. Brown was out, but Haworth, in making the tag, had the tough luck to have the ball knocked out of his hand.

KEENE IN IRON MAN ROLE POISON TO CATS; GASSERS HERE TODAY

BY BILLY BEE.

THE Wichita Falls Spudders have departed from our well known midst but they are not forgotten. Those who saw them make double trouble for the Cats at Panther Park Saturday afternoon when they beat the Champions 8 to 2 and 4 to 0, will have memories, tinctured with quinine for at least several hours to come. Added to that bitter recollection of defeat, is the fact that when the Spudders led their ace, Victor Keene, they led him twice in the same afternoon and both times he stood up. Keene came heralded as a crackin' good pitcher, while Paul Wachtel and Joe Pate, the two strong men of the Cats, were billed to carry the afternoon's burden. Instead of the latter happening, however, Keene turned out to be the iron man of the day, pitching both games so effectively that the Cats counted their hits and runs as scarce as hen teeth, while the Spudders caused the retirement of two highly rated pitchers who had already humiliated them in the present series.

The Cats open a series of four games on the home lot this afternoon with the Shreveport Gassers, playing one today, two Monday and the fourth game Tuesday. Wichita Falls, meanwhile trailing the Cats by less than two games, journeys over to Dallas where the team opens a five game series.

KEENE arrayed himself against five pitchers—Wachtel, Goodbred, Wilcey Moore, Pate and Gray—and the fact that he held the Cats to two lone scores in 16 innings—the first game in nine and the second in 7—shows more or less that the young man must have been partially right. But at that he was only partially right, as there was hardly a time in the first game when he wasn't in a more precarious position than a window cleaner working on the twenty-second floor and without a safety device. In fact, Manager Salm was on the verge several times of yanking Keene, but each time fortune smiled on him and he stuck it out. Keene was so pleased with himself that he ordered another portion of the same, and got away with it—this time in a game pitched principally by Joe Pate, who had just the reverse of all of the good things that came Keene's way.

WACHTEL started the first game, but in the third inning gave way to Goodbred, who managed to do very well until the sixth, when a quartet of runs floated over the pan. This brought the grand total up to eight, and in the next inning Goodbred was taken out and Wilcey Moore allowed to finish the game. Wilcey allowed one hit during his two rounds on the mound and nipped that man off second base. The damage, however, had been done, as the Spudders were carrying eight large runs, while the Cats had but two, and although opportunity laid siege to the door of the Panthers on numerous occasions, she was repulsed on all except one.

IN THE second game Pate, who had but one day's rest since he beat the Spudders, fared better than Wachtel, who in the opener was hit hard, early and often. Pate and "Nellie" Gray warmed up before the game, and on Pate's assurance that he felt strong enough to tackle the job, Skipper Atz sent him in. Hub Perdue was warming up for the Spudders until just a few minutes before the game was called, when Keene stepped out and started throwing.

In view of the fact that he had looked wabbly in spots in the opener, the Cats were confident they would get him in the second game, but instead he seemed to gather strength, confidence and control, and the nearest the Cats came to doing any damage was when Phelan hit a double and was nipped off of second, when Miller dropped Tavener's fly, allowing Rabbit to take second, and in the seventh, when Phelan got on by a pitched ball and reached second on Moore's hit through second. Bratcher and Taylor were thrown in as pinch hitters, Bratcher for Tavener and Taylor for Gray, but as the evening shadows closed in on Panther Park they found the Cats loser in the second game, in which they were as shy of runs as a Mexican dog is of hair.

THE five-game series between the contending teams for the Texas League pennant were absolutely devoid of quality as compared with many other games in which both teams have appeared this season. The one great consolation to the Cat fans was the fact that the Cats won the first three. Their loss of the final two failed to wrench them from their position at the top of the ladder. Interest, therefore, now centers in the local games with Shreveport from now until Tuesday, and in the series at Dallas, where Wichita Falls is scheduled to play five games in four days. It may be possible the pennant race will be decided before the week is out. If not, the championship will be fought to a finish at Wichita Falls during the last days of the season—Sept. 11 to 14.

SKIPPER ATZ was far from being downhearted as a result of the twin loss Saturday. He pointed with pride to the fact that the Cats were still in the lead, whereas a year ago today they were some behind Wichita Falls. Then Dallas knocked Wichita Falls for a row, while the Cats began to hit their winning stride.

"We didn't get our usual jump Saturday," said the skipper cheerfully. "There were some bad breaks against us, and Keene, whom we have beaten before, pitched good ball. You can't take that away from him."

Atz said he figured on starting "Darling Nellie" Gray against Shreveport in the first game. His next problem will be to select a couple of pitchers for Monday's double-header.

"We'll win sure as you're livin'," declared the skipper. "They cant beat us out of this year's pennant any more than they could last year or the year before."

GETTING back to the double loss Saturday, there was just one incident at the start that may have had important bearing on the entire afternoon's work.

The Cats had disposed of the Spudders without a run in the first inning. Coombs opened for the Cats with a slashing double when the hit and run sign was put on, Keene's offering to Sears was wide. Coombs tried to get back to second but stumbled. He was caught in a chase and run down. Again in the fifth he singled and tried to stretch his legs to third when Sears also singled, but was called out on a close play by Umpire Daly. Coombs was so infuriated that he sat down on the bag and looked as if he would cry.

THE Cats got their two runs on singles by Kraft and Hoffman and a terrific double by Phelan. After that they ran into three double plays just when it appeared they had a chance to come from behind.

As it turned out the four Spudder runs made in the third inning through Wachtel's wildness, two singles, a double and a fumble, would have won, but the Spudders poured it on more when two singles, a sacrifice and double netted them four more.

PATE'S loss was a bit tough in that he pitched fine ball for five innings. In the 5th after Miller had led off with a double, he fanned Beck, Bischoff and Keene in succession. Walking Adams in the 4th cost him a run as a sacrifice by White and Homer Summa's only hit of the series scored Adams.

In the sixth more tough luck was in store for him. Four hits were made off Joe, but if Hoffman hadn't had the misfortune to fumble a ground ball that could have been turned into a double play, no runs would have been scored as the pair made were driven in by Miller who was far down on the batting list.

OUT of the muck of the loss, there was one incident that gave the home fans at least one good laugh. It occurred in the second inning of the second game when Umpire Kane called Jake Miller out on strikes. Jake turned around, his eyes staring and his jaw hanging low.

"No, no, no!" he exclaimed. Then he pounded his bat in the dirt after which he jumped up and down on the plate like a small boy who has been deprived of a toy.

JACK CALVO surely had tough luck in the third inning of the second game. He hit a line drive straight at the pitcher's box. Luckily for Keene it was on his glove side. He stuck up his mitt and knocked the ball down, after which he threw Jack out at first.

back home, about the same latitude, the birdies are singing at 6; little children are playing in the yards, laffing merrilee with glee. But over here curfew rings.

I only got one lite spot about that there game, outside of the fact that we fit 'em to a standstill, and that lite spot is that last Wednesday morning I guessed correctly the batteries for today. Mister Fuhr looked better against us Sunday than any other pitcher Niehoff started. He was their logical starter.

How well the Bear skipper guessed was shown when Fuhr staggered through the whole game today by hisself. Was he in trouble? Well, he wasn't in nothing else much. We couldn't get to that elongated southpaw with men ono bases. Did we get 'em on bases? Oh, not more'n twelve or so.

Lissen: In six of the nine innings we had the first man on, in all nine innings we had 'em on, and in all but the first three we had 'em in scoring distance; twice we had the first two on and none out. Once a single was followed by a double into the crowd—third and second occupied, with none out—and we didn't score.

Mobile also hadda lot on, but never looked dangerous. Timely wallops done the business. Speaking of timely wallops, I should liked to have seen the crowds in front of the scoreboards in Fort Worth when Big Boy parked the agate in the eighth and tied it up. Boy, howdy!

Well, having diagnosed the case, I will now elucidate how come:

Josephus was in good shape—had his stuff 'n'everything. He was breezing along nicely—had one out in the fourth frame and was sittin' pretty waitin' for the Cats to come out of it and make him some tallies. Had they been able to do so, we'd been homeward bound Saturday nite.

Then It Happened.

Then it happened. Rhiney crossed up the works with a perfect bunt right down the chalk, the ball staying in, though it looked as if it would roll out every minute. Mullen grounded out to Peewee. Josephus tried to pitch inside to Huhn, but the ball got away and slid down the outside corner. Bam! Line drive over the right field fence, just over the wall by the line. It is a poor alibi that the fence is only a bare 233 feet from the plate, closer than the close Beaumont fence, for it wasn't any closer for Mobile than it was for Fort Worth.

For the first time in the series the Bears were ahead. But, it looked like the old Cats had come back in our fifth inning. Dutch slammed hard a single and Dugan cracked a double into the left field bleachers. With third and second occupied and none out, the Cat delegation was wild as thirty-seven April hares, if they're any wilder than the March kind, which they oughtta be bein' born a month later.

But, alas for human hopes! Peewee fanned, good old Possum popped a foul to Huhn, Still Bill, who batted for Josephus, knocked a fly a mile high and a mile deep into the deepest part of the park, to dead center. Mulvey hadda wait some time for it to come down.

Lefty Augustus breezed through the Bears' fifth after Fuhr had led off with a scratch single. Coombs led off the seventh with a single, but Ziggy's hard liner was straight at Cueto, while Calvo and Kraft forced the runner ahead of 'em.

Lefty made short work of three Bear hitters in the sixth. Again Dutch and Dugan gave us a start with singles in succession, two on and none out, but Peewee forced Dutch at third, Possum again popped up and Haley, who batted for Johns, also popped up.

Ross Minus Stuff.

Ross didn't have his stuff. He was in trouble in the seventh, though he managed to get out without any tallies. He was a bit wild and when he got 'em in there they didn't have much on 'em.

All this time we had been getting men on to go with and not having any luck. So the Cats switched their system. Coombs grounded out and Ziggy fanned, letting out a terrifical roar when Kane called the third strike. Calvo then scratched a single over second, which Niehoff fielded barehanded, but didn't have a chance to throw. Big Boy earned hisself an easy hundred and fifty little iron men with a homer over the right center fence that tied the score and ran the crowd from Fort Worth crazy. Nearly everybody in the bunch gave him five smackers.

With the score tied, the Bears looked more businesslike than I have seen them in the series. Big Boy's blow was a heartbreaker, coming as it did in the eighth frame, but it didn't dismay the Bears. If they hadn't had some championship qualities they would never have won the Southern league pennant.

Niehoff led off the eighth by cracking the first ball pitched for a line single over Tavener's head. Mulvey followed with a sacrifice and Rhiney Williams promptly singled to right. Calvo had the ball in good time and was sure Niehoff would be nailed at the plate. However, the throw was far to the right, bounced over Possum's head and Niehoff not only scored, but Williams took third.

Goodbred relieved Ross and worked out without any more tallies. Mullen grounded to Tiny, who threw Williams out at the plate and Mullen was out stealing.

When the umpires ordered the Bears into the field in the first of the ninth they roared it looked too dark. Well, Peewee, who had been looking rather bad at the bat, made a noble effort to redeem himself. Williams, never rated as a great fielder, certainly broke into the great class on this play.

Possum Crashes One.

Possum came right back with a line smash to right. Denny Williams tried to make a shoestring catch and the ball got through him, Poss taking second. Wachtel batted for Tiny, while Haworth ran for Possum. Paulio grounded out to shortstop. Coombs walked by the three-two route. All this took so much time that darkness was ready to descend like a cloak. Ziggy got two terrible cuts at the ball. In the meantime we had run out of subs and coachers. Big Boy was coaching at third. First Haley, then Ross slipped to first to coach, but Pfirman ran 'em back, as both were outta the game. Peewee went over there and took the job. Huhn slipped up behind Coombs and Fuhr caught the runner off the bag six feet.

We may have tied it up in the frame—even went ahead—but my honest opinion is that our only hope, even if we did was that Paulio, who was warmed up could have breezed 'em through so fast that the Bears could have been retired in about five minutes or less. Otherwise, the game would have been called and the score would have reverted to the eighth frame. Anyhow, when Coombs was caught off the game was over.

In the final analysis, what beat the Cats was being a little over confident in the first three innings and not getting right on Fuhr when they had three chances. Three runners were thrown out at second in the three innings on hit-and-run plays, where batters either missed their swings or took strikes they should have hit at.

And they had their lesson. Watch and see.

CHAMPION TEAMS TO RESUME BATTLE FOR DIXIE TITLE TUESDAY

BY BILLY BEE.

MANAGER BERT NIEHOFF of the Mobile Bears, champions of the Southern Association, grinned cheerfully Monday despite the fact the Bears were still suffering from the unmerciful 9 to 0 beating administered Sunday by the Cats in the opening game of the Dixie and Southwestern championship.

Niehoff figures on sending "Dutch" Henry against the Cats when the two teams come to grips again Tuesday after a one day's rest. Not to make Bert feel bad, he might just as well be told now that Paul Wachtel, who is leading pitcher of the Texas League this season, is the most likely candidate Skipper Jake Atz has for the pitching honor. However, if Paul doesn't feel like stepping out, Jake has Sam Ross and Gus Johns in reserve—two pretty fair left-handers at that, one might truthfully say after perusing the won and lost column in the Texas League this season and seeing Ross and Johns topping the list. And then again, too, it might be said that Joe Pate, who hurled that shutout victory Sunday, would just as soon start back with one day's rest as do anything else in the world. So there you are, Mr. Niehoff—if you can still grin with that prospect in front of you, we'll say you could be cheerful if the quarantine officer came up and tacked three nice signs on your front door—"Smallpox, yellow fever and measles."

Both teams were scheduled to take light workouts Monday in preparation for a resumption of the "little world's series" battle Tuesday.

JOE PATE'S steady pitching, the hitting of Dutch Hoffman in the "clinches," and brilliant fielding by Jack "Rabbit" Tavener and Cecil Coombs and the steady work of Homer Haworth back of the plate stand out today in a resume of Sunday's play like the Statue of Liberty looms to a homesick soldier boy.

To Dutch goes the double palm, although some of the leaves were sear because of a decision that cost him some glory in the annals of the 1922 Dixie series. However, there were 11,947 folks who paid their way into Panther Park Sunday who are yet tingling with that particular sensation which comes to every red-blooded fan who sees a baseball driven far beyond the clutch of opposing players. That's what Dutch did on his first two trips to the plate Sunday and had it not been for a peculiar situation which exists in Panther Park he would have come through with the remarkable record of having driven in seven runs in two trips to the plate.

NO prettier scenery was ever arranged for a hero than Hoffman stepped into on both occasions. But on the second he was foiled—not because he failed, but because he hit a ball so hard on a line into right field that when it disappeared two umpires on the play thought it had gone through the wire mesh instead of clearing it. As a result of their judgment, which was given honestly and showed that neither seems inclined to do any "homing" work, Umpires Harry Kane of the Texas League, who was on second at the time of the play, and Bill Brennan, Southern, who was on first, offered the suggestion that white strips be placed at intervals along the wire in right field stand, so that they may determine the path of any ball driven in that direction.

POSSIBLY there is some poetic justice in the ultimate result of a situation, such as Hoffman faced when he came up the first time Sunday. Sears had reached first on a single to Niehoff's left; Calvo had been robbed of a beautiful line drive to D. Williams. Then came Kraft, mighty home run hitter of the Texas League. "Steamboat" Charley Fulton sensed a dangerous situation, and after trying to make Kraft hit at bad ones, walked the "Big Boy" rather than take a chance of him dry cracking one. It was just like having an old-fashioned bartender smack you in the face with a wet, dirty towel, and Hoffman felt it just as smartly. He draped his huge bulk over the platter and when Fulton shot a fast one down the alley Hoffman plastered it harder than a jellybean does his hair. Bloole! And away she went over the right field stand—a clean homer, good for three tallies and guaranteed to weaken the opposing brothers worse than the dengue fever.

SO MUCH is said here about Dutch's two hits, because not since Frank Baker made his great home run record against the Giants, nor since some strange guy struck Billy Patterson and news went round that the armistice was signed has there been any hotter stuff put out than the Dutchman shoved Sunday. Two on when he struck the first blow—three on when he smashed the second. Two clean clouts, apparently good for seven runs and a lifelong story for the next generation of Hoffmans to come whon old Dutch grows a gray beard and says to his grandchildren: "Snucks! You boys ain't done nothin' in that game today. Once I was with Fort Worth playing against the Southern champions from Mobile. I hit a couple—" Well he did hit a couple, so let it go at that.

LEST you forget, we say it yet, Cecil Coombs had lots to do with that game of ball. His great catch in the first inning—one hand high in the air and his back almost against the human wall skirting the outfield, he pulled down a line drive that Niehoff hit a mile a minute. That catch probably had more effect on the morale of the Bears than any other event in the game, for Denny Williams was on second and a score seemed certain. Coombs' home run was of course a pleasing event as was his general play in the field, but that one catch was a lighthouse on what appeared at the time to Skipper Atz a rock-bound coast on a stormy day.

SKIPPING back to Hoffman's second blow which was held to be a two-base hit, it might be said that Dutch was no more disappointed than every man on the Cat outfit. However, after the first outburst from everyone on the bench, the Cats subsided and turned their attention toward holding the Bears and helping themselves to more runs.

WHILE the Mobile club didn't look like champions of a league with the same rating as Texas they are far from being out of the running, according to the notion of Skipper Atz. The Cats' boss never quit "bearing down" from the moment Fate cut loose with his first pitch—a strike by the way on Denny Williams—until Sears caught Rhino Williams' fly in the ninth.

"Keep alive. Don't let up. Hustle you bebbies," the skipper kept shouting through a miniature megaphone like the coxswain of a racing crew. Jake was unable to realize his fond ambition of being in uniform and coaching on first base, because Dr. Alden Coffey, club surgeon, said it wouldn't do his sore leg any good. But Jake surely did do some talking from where he sat.

ONLY once or twice was Umpire Hunter Hill, who worked behind the plate, called upon to examine a ball handled by either pitcher—Pate, who started for the Cats and finished stronger than he started—or Charley Fulton, "Lefty" Fuhr or Joe Acosta. The reason was, the umpires, Hill, Bill Brennan, Harry Kane and Cy Pfirman, at their early meeting mefore the opening game, adopted a suggestion by Brennan, who has worked in two world's series and several city clashes in the major leagues. It was to take the new balls from their boxes, rub them over with dust so as to take the gloss off and to hand them out to the pitchers with the warning that no foreign substance be put on the ball unless it be from honest sweat of their pitching paws or from the resin bag allowed. The penalty for the first offense of rubbing the ball in the dirt or on the trousers leg is a fine of $10 and for the second offense ejection from the game

Brennan will be behind the plate in Tuesday's game, Kane at first, Pfirman at second and Hill at third. They will rotate during the series, the umpire in chief on Tuesday, for instance, moving to third base in the next game and the first base umpire succeeding him behind the plate in the next.

MANUEL CUETO was the first player to get the grand bounce. Hunter Hill administered the degree and those who have known Hill for years were surprised at his remarkable self-control, inasmuch as Cueto tapped him on the arm with his bat, and according to ear witnesses, flung a line of Spanish and broken English which included something that would indicate the umps was a second Jesse James, who had robbed himself of a horse. The funniest part of the thing was, Cueto was taking up the cudgel for Denny Williams, who had swung at his third strike and after one crabbed word and look at Hill was walking away.

IT'S seldom that umpires get more than passing notice in any sort of a series, unless it is harsh criticism. It's only justice in the present Dixie conflict to call attention to the fact that the choice of both leagues—Hill, Brennan, Kane and Pfirman—are apparently going to keep this series moving in snappy style. In fact, their general attitude toward the series should call forth admiration from fans and players alike because, like "The Three Musketeers," they seem to be "one for all and all for one," and playing no favorites.

"The mother of the game is the umpire," said one fan talking with a group of umpires at the Seibold Hotel.

"Yes, and just another thing," said Jack O'Toole, crippled veteran who has been umpiring 27 years, "don't forget that in the history of the game, they've looked for one, but never have found an umpire in professional baseball who 'threw' a ball game."

Summary: Innings pitched, Fulton 2 1-3 innings, 4 hits 3 runs; Fuhr 4 2-3 innings, 4 hits 4 runs; home runs, Hoffman, Coombs; two-base hits, Hoffman, Calvo, Tavener; sacrifice hit, Phelan, Cueto; stolen bases, Tavener, Haworth; double plays, Cueto to Niehoff to Huhn, Tavener to Kraft, R. Williams to Huhn to Mullen; hit by pitcher, Fuhr (Kraft). Time 2:00. Umpires, Hill, Brennan, Kane and Pfirman.

BEFORE Manuel Cueto got the air in Sunday's game, he pulled off one play that robbed Cecil Coombs of a hit. The little Cuban went over second base to grab a hard hit ball and made a lightning throw to catch Coombs. However that play wasn't anything compared to a grab and quick toss made by Tavener in the eighth. He went plumb over second base to snag Ashley Pope's bounder and threw so fast to Kraft that Pope was out almost 20 feet.

Calvo objected to a kid pushing a wheelbarrow loaded with refreshments and had a policeman chase the youngster out of right field.

Besides scoring a technical knockout over the Kid, Calvo got a real one on Fulton when he slapped a double into the crowd in the third inning. It was almost into the right field stand.

Someone on the Mobile club asked Cy Pfirman to look at a ball Pate was pitching. Said it smelled funny.

'Yep," said Pfirman, "he's got a fresh stick of gum in his face and has been blowing his breath on the ball."

"Atta boy, Joe!" said Lefty Johns. "When you get 'em to lookin' at the ball to see if there's anything there except your natural stuff, you've got 'em goin'!"

"Looks like the other clubs are having an off day," said Dutch. "Yeh, yeh," chirped Skipper Atz. "One o' them Esquimo days—six months."

THERE were many more or less prominent people at Sunday's game. For instance, Walter Salm, president and manager of the Wichita Falls club, was down with Secretary Will Gray of the Spudders and both paid off like little gentlemen to Mayor Steinhagen of Beaumont who is also president of the Beaumont club and who bet his kale on the Fort Worth club. Besides those gentlemen, Presildent Doak Roberts of the Texas League, R. M. Weinacker, president of the Mobile club; Barney Sheridan Jr. of the Mobile Register; H. T. Hartwell, city commissioner at Mobile; Willie Skipper, commander of a Government boat in Mobile Bay; Mike Sexton of Rock Island, Ill., chairman of the national organization of minor leagues, and a bunch of other fans.

NEW DIXIE CHAMPIONS AND WESTERN LEAGUERS OPEN SERIES FRIDAY

BY BILLY BEE.

MANAGER BERT NIEHOFF and his Mobile Bears, newly crowned champions of Dixie and the Southwest, rested Thursday in Fort Worth where they earned their laurels Wednesday in a 2 to 1 victory over the Panthers, twice Dixie champions and thrice champions of the Texas League.

Niehoff plans to lead his Bears "who walk like men" to Tulsa where they begin a series with the Oilers, easy winners in the Western League. Three games are to be played in succession—Friday, Saturday and Sunday—in Tulsa. Then the two teams will go to Mobile where they will doubtless resume play the latter part of next week. The series will be conducted under the same rules governing the Dixie, four wins in seven being necessary.

The Bears won four from the Cats after having lost two. They tied one game, so that seven full games were played, two going into the tenth inning.

AS the last Panther, Possum Moore, swung at his third strike in the ninth inning, Manager Atz swung himself up out of the dugout and without the use of canes, hobbled over to Manager Niehoff of the Bears.

"Great series, Bert," said the Panther skipper. 'You played fine ball and deserved to win." And he smiled gamely as he said it.

'Thanks, Jake," answered Niehoff. "and I want to say that I never played against a finer set of sportsmen than your team. You can tell the world that."

The Mobile victory gives the Southern Association its first victory in the Dixie series since it was inaugurated in 1920, when Fort Worth with many of the same members of the club as she boasts now, won the series. Fort Worth won again from Memphis in 1921 and, although beaten this year by a club able apparently to not only make a game up-hill fight, but also hit in the "clinches," the Cats at least have the honor of having been in every series thus far.

THE game which gave Mobile the well-deserved victory was a pitchers' battle between "Lefty" Fuhr and "Lefty" Pate and by a peculiar coincidence, bases on balls paved the way to each run scored.

The fourth inning was when the Bears cut loose with their first run and coincident with that inning there were large doings in which a near scrap between Umpire Pfirman and Ed "Dutch" Hoffman threatened a near riot.

Cueto had drawn a walk and Niehoff had singled to the right of Tavener, when Mulvey dumped a bunt down the third base line. Pate fielded it and turned toward third, but Phelan, too, had come up to make a try. Pate then threw to first. Pfirman apparently motioned Mulvey out, but later declared he was trying to make it apparent that Mulvey was safe. Players gathered around and on Hoffman's vehement protest, Pfirman threatened to put him out of the game.

"You ain't got guts enough," declared Hoffman.

"Yes I have. You're out," retorted Pfirman. Then players and umpires milled around like cattle in a pen with the cripped Atz hobbling about with them.

"If you say so, Jake," said Hoffman, "I'll take a crack at him."

HOFFMAN was finally led from the field to the bench, where he remained the rest afternoon "cussin' the luck" and his hot-headedness in getting tossed. Had he not been thrown out there might have been a different story to unfold, as Frank Haley, former regular third baseman, who has been out this year on account of injuries, took his place in the batting order, Phelan going to second and Haley to third. Haley has been noted as a nervy batter who hits timely, but long absence from the game has dulled his batting eye and twice Kraft was passed by Fuhr to get at Haley. Both times Frank tried hard, but couldn't deliver.

Jack Calvo, the Cuban outfielder, became a hero in the eyes of Fort Worth when, after Coombs had walked and Sears had sacrificed, he slashed a liner to left which Denny Williams tried hard to spear. The ball went for two bases and Coombs scored.

THE whole series since it was removed from here after the first two games, has been a "ninth inning" affair in that the Bears have won three of their games practically in that frame. Their first win was achieved in the eighth inning in the opener at Mobile. In the second they were apparently beaten in the ninth with two out, staged a rally and got a ten-inning tie. Next day they tied in the ninth and won in the tenth. The final Mobile game was one-sided because of Niehoff's great batting.

The final game was won in the ninth with the fatal base on balls playing its usual nefarious part. Pate walked Niehoff with one down. Bert got a good start and stole second. Then Mulvey singled over second, scoring Niehoff with what proved to be the winning run, as Phelan of the Cats popped to Huhn and Wachtel, pinch hitting for Tavener, fanned while Moore swung also at his third strike.

NIEHOFF and his Bruins bore their new honors modestly as befits champions.

"Now that we've brought the Dixie title to Mobile, we're going to do our level best to take the scalp of Tulsa," said Niehoff.

The Bear manager was deluged with telegrams of congratulation following the big win. Fifty messages came in one batch from a group of Mobile fans.

If the pop-eyed bugs at Mobile act anything like they did when the Cats were beaten down there, they'll probably shove Mobile into the bay in their excitement.

Mobile fans and their red-coated band began arriving about 2:30 o'clock. With them came J. E. Lesser lugging a goat with stripes painted around its barrel and bearing a sign, "Fort Worth's goat, captured at Mobile."

A female fan brought a pasteboard box cut like a coffin in which reposed a bear with his toes turned up to a bunch of daisies. But he wouldn't stay dead.

Pate started the game with his usual brilliancy. The first three offerings to Denny Williams were balls. Then Pate pitched three straight strikes.

FUHR began to look worried when Coombs worked him for a walk in the first, and took second as Sears fanned. Cueto saved the day for him when Calvo hit a slashing grounder to short and hit Cueto on the shoulder. It looked like a sure hit, but Cueto picked the ball off his shoulder and threw Calvo out. That was a bad break against the Cats, as had the ball bounded badly from Cueto's shoulder, Coombs might have scored.

Skipper Atz was like a wounded tiger when Umpire Pfirman threatened to put Calvo out of the game. Jake gripped the roof of the dugout and, Tarzan-like, drew his way clear without the aid of a stick. He was there to "protect his young," and Pfirman didn't chase Calvo.

Rhiny Williams' long fly to Calvo in center would have been a homer over Mobile's short field fence.

Phelan got the first hit and should have scored on Moore's line drive down first base line, but Denny Williams was roaming around eating grass and grabbed what looked like a hit.

Coombs had tough luck when he slashed a shot down third in the third. So did Mullen when it hit him on the shin. He picked it up, however, and threw Coombs out.

Calvo made a great catch in the seventh off Huhn's short line drive.

Sears made two dandy catches, one when he went against the ropes to get Cueto's drive in the ninth and again in the same round when he grabbed Mullen's line drive. In fact, Sears retired the side single handed but that telling drive of Mulvey's was not high enough off the ground to grab.

The Mobile band played "Hot Time in the Old Town Tonight" and "Taps" and "Auld Lang Syne" after the game.

THE following telegram was received by The Star-Telegram Thursday:

"Last week your editor stated that Fort Worth will drill the Bears into Mobile Bay and that all Texas should be proud of this fact. Please repeat the above in the editorial columns. At the same time state that the Southern League plays Class A and the Texas League plays Class B baseball.

JOE WHEELER."

DUTCH HOFFMAN, Cats' second baseman, whose row with Umpire Pfirman almost precipitated a young riot and whose ejection proved costly to the Cats.

Fourth Inning—Cueto walked. Neihoff singled through third and Cueto went to second. Mulvey bunted down the third base line, Phelan threw to first and Pfirman called Mulvey safe. Hoffman protested the decision and Pfirman ordered him out of the game. Fans and players of both teams swarmed on the field and a near riot seemed imminent. Hoffman was forced out of the game, Haley took third and Phelan second. Goodbred started arming up for Fort Worth. Police ordered the crowd back of the ropes and play was resumed. R. Williams struck out. Mullen singled through third, scoring Cueto, and Niehoff and Mulvey moved up. Huhn hit into a double play, Phelan to Tavener to Kraft. One run, three hits, no errors.

Calvo grounded to Fuhr. Kraft grounded to Niehoff. Haley singled to center. Phelan forced Haley at second, Mullen to Niehoff. No runs, one hit, no errors.

Fifth Inning—Baker grounded to Phelan. Fuhr and D. Williams struck out. No runs, no hits, no errors.

Tavener struck out. Moore flied to Mulvey. Pate grounded to Mullen. No runs, no hits, no errors.

Sixth Inning—Cueto bounced one off Pate's glove for a single. Niehoff struck out and Cueto was out trying to steal, Moore to Phelan. Mulvey was out, Kraft to Pate, who covered first. No runs, one hit, no errors.

Coombs walked. Sears sacrificed, Mullen to Niehoff, who covered first. Calvo doubled into the crowd along the left wall, scoring Coombs. Kraft walked. Haley popped to Cueto, back on the grass. Phelan forced Kraft Cueto to Niehoff. One run, one hit, no errors.

Seventh Inning—Calvo made a running catch of R. Williams' line drive to right field. Mullen popped an easy one to Pate, who threw him out at first. Huhn hit an easy fly to Sears. No runs, no hits, no errors.

Tavener and Moore grounded to Niehoff. Pate was out, Mullen to Huhn. No runs, no hits, no errors.

Eighth Inning—Baker struck out. Fuhr was out, Kraft to Pate. D. Williams struck out for the fourth suddenly settled down. Mulvey bounced a high one to Big Boy. Had the score been close, the first baseman undoubtedly would have thrown to the plate. But we had a four-run lead, so when he fielded the ball almost on first, he touched the bag as he threw the ball home. The throw had Williams at the plate all right by a step, but Possum didn't have time to tag the runner. Brennan already had called Mulvey out at first, thus relieving the force.

We still had a three-run lead, with third and second occupied, one out, and Rhiney Williams up. In this situation it was decided to keep the infield back. It was a bad guess, as it happened, for Williams hit a slow roller to short and though he was thrown out, Cueto tallied and the lead was only two.

Calva Drops One.

I guess Calvo was entitled to drop one fly in a season, but he certainly picked a bad spot to do it in. Mullen handed him an easy one, which Hoffman could have caught. Calvo hollered for it and dropped it, thus cutting that fastly disappearing lead to one. Mullen was out stealing and Lefty was still in there.

In the meantime, in the fifth, Pope batted for Fuhr, who showed plainly his inability to come back with only one day's rest. Pope allowed one hit in the inning, in the sixth, seventh, eighth, ninth and tenth, but he allowed no more. To me he was the real hero of the ball game, though he was overlooked by the crowd in its blind worship of the more spectacular players. But, on with the story:

Kraft started the seventh with a single, but thought Hoffman's Texas leaguer back of second was a hit and was doubled off first when Cueto went and got the fly. Tavener started the eighth with a hit and was sacrificed to second, but he was out on a great play by Baker when he tried to make third on a short passed ball. It was a great recovery and throw by Baker and a lightning tag by Mullen. Peewee was out, though the decision was close.

In the eighth with three and two on Coombs. Hill called him out on a strike that brought a yell from the Mobile fans. Sears doubled to deep left center. With one down, Big Boy flied just short of the right field fence and Calvo popped a foul to Mullen.

This inability to take advantage of great chances to score was costly. One more run would have cinched it, for that little bowlegged scoundrel had settled after his sixth inning blow up and mowed the Bears like ripe wheat before a harvesting machine — they never had a chance—until two were down in the ninth.

To me what did it was an argument. Leathers batted for Mulvey and fanned. Rhino Williams grounded to Tavener and was out. No ball game ever looked more won. It was running like clock work. People started out. Harry Kane stopped the game some time trying to make the bleacherites stay off the field in deep center.

Dispute Decision.

With Mullen up and a strike on him, he seemed to swing at a ball, his recovery being late. Hill called it a ball and Phelan, Kraft and Moore all run at the umpire at once. Skipper Jake sent Haley out after a few minutes with instructions to lay off the umps.

Then Pfirman stopped the game a minute to run some fans off the left field line. Lefty was warming up to Tavener while all this was going on. He may or he may not have become unsettled, but anyhow he got in the hole on Mullen, then grooved one and a single to right center resulted. Huhn, that rugged grizzly who has caused us so much trouble up here, got hold of a curve ball and lammed a line drive far over Kraft's head, Mullen taking third.

Then came the real heartbreaker. Jake told Possum to work a short throw in case of a double steal. The double steal came and Dutch ran in on the grass. Possum handed him a fine throw and Dutch caught the ball about the time Mullen started home, but in pulling back his arm to make the throw home, Dutch let the ball get away from him and it flew out over his shoulder. Mullen came home with the tying run when he never had a chance when he left third.

It was tough. Tiny had relieved Lefty after Huhn's hit. He was slamming the apple home like a bullet. Baker may have hit him—he may not—it was a toss up. Anyhow, Baker did not hit him but grounded out to Peewee and the battle went to extra innings.

We had the same chance in the tenth that Mobile had in the ninth almost. With two down, Tavener singled to center. Possum drew a walk, shoving Peewee within scoring distance. Stellbauer then batted for Goodbred. Bill swung so hard at the first ball that he hurt his back. Sounds like a good alibi, but he's down to-night and had the doctor working on him. Pope handed Bill a beauty to hit, high and outside, just like he wanted it, but he passed it up, then swung on one low and inside and beat it into the ground for an easy out.

Ross Unlucky One.

They ain't much to tell about the terrible finish. Sam Ross seemed to have everything when he struck out Pope. Denny Williams is a left-hand hitter and don't like lefthand pitching. It looked like another tie game. But as I've seen all year in Beaumont and Galveston, a game is never over with the fences crowding the ball field too close.

Tonight Mobile is wild and Denny Williams' name is on most people's lips. I wish I could say he crashed the ball over the fence for the winning run; I hate to take off any of his glory, even over there, 750 miles away. But facts is facts. Williams' home run was a high fly that barely dropped over—but it won that ball game just as certainly as if it had been hit over the courthouse.

We will be one happy bunch when we get them Cats and these here Bears back where it takes a he wallop to be a home run.

Thousands Watch Record Board as Bears Beat Cats

Approximately 6,000 frenzied fans jammed Throckmorton street between Fourth and Fifth Sunday afternoon to watch the reproduction of the Fort Worth-Mobile game on The Record's Marvel Scoreboard.

It was one of the greatest crowds that ever assembled on the streets of Fort Worth and shouted as thought the players were performing before their eyes. A regular rat-ta-tat chorus, calling for a rally, was started in the seventh inning.

When Kraft hit his home run in the first frame a great shout went up from the crowd and for three minutes the noise was deafening.

The Record's scoreboard will show Monday's contest at 3 o'clock this afternoon. Everyone is cordially invited.

CATS FIELDED BETTER, MADE FEWER ERRORS AND STRIKEOUTS THAN MOBILE IN DIXIE SERIES

If there is any consolation in this for the fans of Fort Worth who are lamenting the loss of a Dixie series which last week was apparently won, drink heartily of these facts:

In the seven games played the Cats outhit the Bears, making 64 to Mobile's 50. The general averages were: Cats, .266; Bears, .225.

The Cats made more runs than the Bears—27 to 26.

The Cats fielded better, making two errors less than the Bears and getting an average of .975 to .966.

Fewer Fort Worth players struck out; more drew bases on balls. The only department in which the Bears excelled was in base-running. They stole six against the two Cat thefts. In that latter thing, there may be much significance.

For those who care to read as they run, here are the figures on the entire series showing times at bat, runs, hits, put outs, assists, errors, bases on balls received by individuals, the number of times they struck out and the bases they stole. It shows Jacinto del Calvo led the Cats in hitting, getting the most blows and having the best average, while Emil Huhn, whose home runs in Mobile counted heavily, is shown as the "bear of Bears" in hitting.

Following is the table:

SIDELIGHTS THROUGH POP BOONE'S OPTICS

MONROE PARK, MOBILE, Sept. 23.—Early arrivals forecasted another crowd under 5,000 people. Hopes had been entertained that the Friday win would bring out a larger crowd, but it seems most of the fans are laying off until Sunday. They still insisted however, that 10,000 people will be out tomorrow.

Quiet reigned supreme among the Fort Worth delegation last night. While a certain amount of disappointment was apparent, the bunch had some comeback over the way the Cats fought and the closeness of the game.

Many rode through thep retty residence sections, went across the bay, or took pleasure rides on the bay. Mobile is a real southern city, center of first families and not a few of the Texas visitors were entertained.

This morning about a dozen of the golfers went to the Mobile Country club to play golf.

They found a very sporty course, densely populated with trees along the fairways and with many deep and sandy traps.

Bill Stripling took advantage of Herman Gartner and Bert Honea, when he showed up to golf. Bill had a beagle hound. His opponents were much at loss over what use Bill expected to make of the pup until he cliced a ball among the trees. Pretty soon they heard the dog baying and knew it had treed the ball.

I played with Hubb Diggs, T. B. George, Esslick of Mineral Wells, Cameron and Wheeler of Mobile. Mr. Wheeler is Ford dealer here and he came after us in a little Lincoln about as big as a street car. He furnished a 19-hole that was made by Johnny Walker, one of the best nineteenth hole architects of the world.

Hubb and the rest of them was at sea in all them trees and I shot the lowest medal in my six some. It was a tough pill for them birds to swallow.

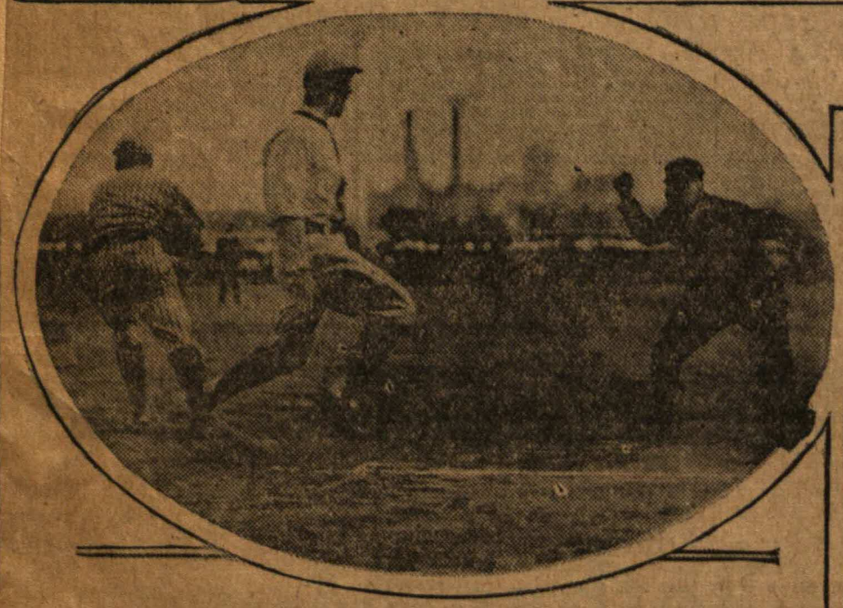
Josephus worked to the Cats in batting practice and was putting plenty of stuff on the ball. All the other Cat pitchers except Wachtel, shagged flies. Just before the game, it was announced that Skipper Jake had granted a request of the Mobile club to make Pitcher Sigman eligible to work in the series. It was solely up to the Skipper and he said: "Oh, all right."

At 2:30 the crowd was about all in the bleachers and looked the same size as the day before. Maybe a few more.

Fort Worth's delegation started arriving about 2:30, when the Police band got on the job. Things livened up right now.

Tiny stirred up the bleachers as usual and earned a shower of goobers, which he picked up and carried back to the bench and consumed.

I am gonna guess now at 2:40, without seeing the turnstiles. And base my prediction on yesterday's crowd. Let's say 4,950. This is being sent as I write it, compare it with tonight's figures.



There was "a hot time in the Panther ball yard" Wednesday afternoon as well as in Mobile the same night. Staff Photographer Frank G. Evans caught some of the big doings.

Picture No. 1 shows the excitement pervading when Dutch Hoffman had his run-in with Umpire Cy Pfirman and was run out. There's some comedy in the picture, too, despite the seriousness of the situation. Note how the players are drawn off in pairs. Sam Ross and Clarence Kraft are on the extreme left of the ring. Two Mobile players are trying to persuade Hoffman to "lay-off" of Pfirman, whose face is shown just over Phelan's shoulder. Phelan has his back to the camera. Catcher Baker and Umpire Kane are also discussing the situation heatedly. On the extreme right, Jack Calvo's back is shown with Homer Haworth's face peeking over his shoulder. Haworth is trying to calm the excitable Cuban.

No. 2—Fuhr throws too late too pick Phelan off first. Note the ball almost in Huhn's outstretched hands.

No. 3—Cecil Coombs scoring the only Panther run, has the expression of a sprinter. He can be seen between Umpire Kane and Catcher Baker.

No. 4—Umpire Pfirman calls Calvo out at first. Look at Jack's hands—spread to denote safety and look at the open-mouthed amazement with which he regards Pfirman.

No. 5—Here's the blow that killed father. It shows Bert Niehoff scoring the second run for the Bears—the tally that brought home the bacon to Mobile. You can almost see the look of chagrin through Possum's mask.

No. 6—Shows Umpire Hunter stepping into the breach to prevent, if possible, Dutch Hoffman from striking Umpire Pfirman, whose back looms squarely against the camera.

Houston Goes Back Half Game in Race to Overtake Champs

BY FLEM R. HALL.

RALPH HEAD or Joe Pate will pitch for Fort Worth at Panther Park this afternoon in the game with Shreveport. Both are ready and it's just a question of which one warms up better as to who'll go, according to Manager Atz. Pate pitched two innings against Dallas Sunday, when the Cats defeated the Steers 5 to 4, but that won't bother him any today. "Didn't hardly get good and warm," Pate said after the game.

Joe's great hurling in those two last innings stopped a threatening Steer rally and gave the Cats their eighth consecutive victory, five of which were from Dallas. While Fort Worth was winnng a single game Houston was splitting a double-header with San Antonio and thereby losing one-half a game in their pursuit of the Cats. Sunday night the Fort Worth team had a lead of six and one-half games over the second place Buffs.

Harris Probable Choice.

Manager Ira Thomas and his crew of Gassers arrived in Fort Worth early Monday morning. The skipper is not certain who he will start today, but it may be Harris.

Tuesday the Panthers take the road for 10 days, visiting Galveston, Houston, San Antonio and Beaumont in the order named. Only two days will be spent with the Buffs and Exporters, while three-game series will be played with Galveston and San Antonio. It is probable the Cats will run into one or two double-headers on the trip. The pitching staff is in tip-top condition and will be able to stand the gaff.

The Sunday game was sweet.

Between 8,000 and 9,000 fans jammed the stands of the Steer stadium and sprinkled along the fences of right and left field. Contrary to expectations there was a great mob of Fort Worth supporters there and, except for the eighth inning they had full charge of the grandstand—sounded like the game was being played in Fort Worth rather than Dallas.

Love Is Slaughtered.

"Slim" Love, elongated ace of the Herd's hurling staff, started on the mound but was soon slaughtered by the boys from Cowtown, who make a specialty of killing Steers.

A. "Lefty" Johns, who was married Monday morning, started for Fort Worth and for seven innings pitched beautiful ball. In the eighth Dallas started a rally—scored a run and had two on base before any was out. Just to be safe Atz sent the "Old Master," Joe Pate in. It is probable that Johns would have won by himself, if left alone, but Jake was taking no chances. Besides, Johns had something else to worry about. He had worked hard for seven innings, holding the Steers while the Cats accumulated a four-run lead, maybe he was tired. Anyway, when Pate went in he paid no attention to the men on bases—they could score and not hurt—and turned his attention to the batters. Well, the two Johns put on did score, but that was all. Joe Morris got a short single off Pate after Vache rolled to Tavener, Segrist went out swinging, and Stow fouled to Phelan. In the last inning Joe set them down fast. The first eight balls he pitched were strikes. Lingle fanned. Conley popped an easy fly to Edington and Adams, pinch hitting for Barnes, rolled to Phelan.

Palmer Scores Two.

The Cats got four of theirs in the first two innings off Love, the ace. After two had walked in the first, Palmer drove a liner to the left field fence to score them. In the second Bischoff led off with a double, went to third on Johns' sacrifice. There was no advance when Calvo flied to Donohue, but Bischoff scored on Phelan's single. Sears walked, putting Phelan on second, from where he scored on Kraft's single.

Dallas made one in the first on a double by Barnes and a single by Vache.

What proved to be the winning run was scored by Fort Worth in the seventh. With one out Kraft singled. He was forced to second by Palmer. Edington singled to center sending Palmer to second from where he scurried home when Tavener lined one to center for a single.

Joe Morris, who had been placed in left field after Griffin had been chased from the park for arguing over a called strike, prevented a Fort Worth run in the ninth when he made a circus catch of Edington's drive when Kraft was on third. Running at top speed Morris leaped, waved his hand over his head as the ball whizzed over it and stuffed it in his glove.

"Where was you going on that ball?" Morris was asked after the game.

"Don't know—I was just tearin' out," he answered.

Edington Makes Great Catch.

"Stump" Edington also made a great catch in the second when he dived to spear Conley's shoe string drive.

As he swung his bat before going to the plate in the seventh Edington remarked to the press box: "I'm gonna get a hit this time. This is the thirteenth time I've been up without hitting safely. I gotta get one this time." And he did; singled to center and put Palmer on second from where he scored the winning run.

Jack Calvo says he is going to quit hitting the ball hard. "I het it hard evry time and no get a hit—poope it and gee she a het," he declared Sunday after getting a fuzzling one back of second for a hit. On other trips at bat he had hit the ball hard but always at some one.

Galveston Takes Two.

GALVESTON, June 23.—Galveston took a double header from Beaumont Sunday on the superb hurling of Roy Crumpler and Hal Devinney. Crumpler had the edge on Foreman and Matteson in the first, allowing but three bingles, while his team mates collected six off the Exporters' hurlers. Score:

POP'S PALAVER

I don't know what Bill Stellbauer does in the winter time, but I'll recommend him for a job of picking apples.

Talked with Skipper Jake last night and he said: "Boy, I been to Californy and I seen the sun set in the Golden Gate from the be-flowered heights of Berkeley; I been in the mountings of Washington and seen the sun set behind the sky-rimmed peaks when the snow caps turned to rose leafs; I been on the desert of Arizona where the purple shadows mingled with the gray drabness of the cactus-strewn sands, where it takes the facile pen of Zane Gray to give a guy any idea of the beauties of the desert sunset; I seen sunsets from one end of the old U. S. A. to the other, but, boy, I ain't never seen no sunset yet so sweet, so beautiful, so splendiferous or so cosmoaic as that sunset what I seen on my way to the old Cat clubhouse last night."

Spencer Abbott said he didn't see such a wonderful lot of stuff about that there sunset.

And the wise fans who didn't go out to that ball game probably thought last night's sunset wasn't such a much.

Me? Hell, I didn't even know there was no sunset.

Six guys will hafta draw for that suit of clothes Washer Brothers give to the Cat who made the most hits yesterday.

Listen, while I think of it, I never had nothin' to do with them straw hats that was put on the other day with my name on 'em. In fact, I was on my way from Memphis and didn't even know they was out until later when my assistant turned $7.50 over to me that some bird had brought up. This seven fifty was in quarters and nickels and dimes, with the largest piece of money in it a four-bit piece. I turned in the money to the fund. More than that I know not.

Also I turned in to the fund a $10 bill handed to me by a bird in the Worth cigar store, who said to just credit it to a fan.

Nothing come up last night about the Wichita series except that they would play the semi-pro games already contracted for. No decision has been reached by the Fort Worth club as to whether it would try to keep the club together until Oct. 8, to engage in a series with the champions of the Western league.

It is likely that a meeting of players will be held today to decide how the money will be split. Nothing has been done in this matter as yet, according to players, though it was discussed in a meeting at Memphis.

Should it be decided not to stick together until the 8th, it is likely that many of the Cats will scatter to their homes at once. Many of them will winter here.

Skipper Jake got many a telegram from every part of the country last night, congratulating him on his victory.

Buddy, I'm tired out and all relaxed and happy and everything. I got all winter in which to write Palaver. So I'm gonna call it a night.

PINCH HITTER SPEAKER'S INFIELD OUT HELPS GET WINNING SCORE.

By The Associated Press.

Boston, Mass., Sept. 22.—Cleveland won from Boston, 9 to 8, in twelve innings today, thus keeping pace with New York in the battle for first place. The Indians won on O'Neill's long double to right center, Pinch Hitter Speaker's infield out and Jamieson's fast bounder, which Scott could not field in time. Speaker nearly collapsed in running out his roller to Pratt.

CHICKS BEAT RAMPAGERS IN OPENING GAME

Whittaker Is Driven to Showers in Four Innings; Johns Finishes.

GREAT CATCHES MADE

Old Man Pate's Boy, Josephus, Faces Paul Zahniser Today.

BY POP BOONE.

Well, I guess that darn clairvoyant lady down to the Majestic musta been right when she prognosticated that Fort Worth would win the world's serious, but that Memphis would take the first game. Anyhow, Memphis sure as hell done taken the first game. And it wasn't such a much of a battle neither as might be opined by the score which was 8 to 2.

We lose that there game because the Skipper didn't start Lefty Johns to go with, or didn't take Bill outta the box more quicker than what he did. Anybody'd knowed the first, because it's a darn poor dopester that can't pick the winner of a horse race after the race has done been run. As to the second charge, they forget that all the trouble in the fatal fourth inning happened after two was down and Lefty not even warmed up. If Jake had just had enough sense to know that McMillan, McLarry and Brown was gonna hit the apple in rapid succession, he could have had Lefty warmed up and ready, then could have saved the game.

Now that I've told what lost the game, I guess maybe I better do some real writin.'

Whittaker Slaughtered.

Buzzer Bill Whittaker, selected by Manager Atz as his pitcher in that first game, wasn't right. No use to argue that point. It didn't take a great deal of baseball smartness to see that. But many a pitcher who gets away bad, settles down after a few innings and comes back. If both Atz and Abbott had figured like we can figure now, neither Tuero nor Whittaker would have been left in there as long as four innings. Tuero was no better in the opening innings than Whittaker, but Tuero pitched better ball the further he went, while a cataclysm hit Whittaker in the fourth inning after two men had gone out—a holocaust—yes, I mean fire—that swept him to the clubhouse with his head down and the ballgame hopelessly lost.

Working from this analysis, I'm inclined to give Mister Howard Camp a lot of praise in helping Memphis to win that ball game. Without two circus catches that Mister Camp made in pinches, Tuero might have been overcome with the same fate that met Whittaker. Both of Camp's wonderful plays were made off Big Boy, the carryer on of rallies, upon whom Fort Worth has learned to rely for most of its victories.

Can you remember just what happened in that fourth inning? Let me refresh your memory with a description of it. This fourth decided the ball game in decisive fashion, so we can put a bit of space and time in on it, both you and me.

Well, to begin with, Yockey opened with a single down the first base line. Remember what the Buzzer done then? He slammed that apple down there as good as he ever done in his life and you and me and Skipper Jake and all the wise second guessers in the world all thought he was gone at last. He fanned the tough Bud Hungling and Pitcher Tuero before they fairly got settled in the box. Yockey was still on first.

Bill Loses Control.

With two strikes on High, Bill went wrong and pitched four straight balls o the batter. Steadying then, he got IcMillan in the hotel. Do you remember what McMillan hit when he doubled past Coombs into the centerfield crowd? Well, I remember. It was a ball even with his cap, a foot outside. Bill threw him a bad one hopin' he'd hit it—and he sure did hit it, no mistake about that.

One run was in, but remember two was out. Bill, in trying to pitch low to Williams, got two balls on the batter, then decided to put him on base purposely, which he did. This filled the bases. Polly McLarry singled to center, scoring two more. Then Skipper Jake knew what everybody knew, that Bill was done. So Lefty Johns was sent to the bull pen with instructions to hurry. Skipper Jake saved what time he could by holding a short conference with Whittaker and Haworth. When he let Bill go back, he was given a vote of confidence by many of the same fans who last night were sure he left Bill in there too long.

Don Brown pickled one for a line drive over Stellbauer's head into the crowd—a blow that sent in another run and left third and second occuhim because he had to have thirty-one runs to win the two games. They called him lucky and some of the Memphis players had been a little sharp in their comments. But I never lost sight of the fact that he held them babies to five and seven hits in the first two games, even when he had a lead that a bat boy could have held out there. No matter how far he got ahead, Old Man Pate's boy just kept on bearing down right out to the finish.

Josephus Skunks 'Em?

Knowing all this, and believing in him with all my heart, it did me a world of good to see him go out there yesterday and with the help of his fellows hold them hard-going Southern league champions to six hits and a shutout where only the run scored in the first inning was all that was needed. Old Man Pate's boy Josephus, I'm proud of you, the ball club's proud of you, the town is proud of you and Texas is proud of you. And I guess about 6,000 folks up in that stand envied the Skipper when, drunk with victory and relief, he ran out half way to the box, threw his arms around you and gave you a real New Orleans hug.

And, to crown his season's record of thirty wins in the regular schedule and his three victories in the world's series, Josephus walked out in the first half of the ninth and flung the apple for his best inning.

One would naturally think that a game with so few hits would have been shy on tense moments, but such was not the case, Ida. Oh, no, indeed. That there game dealt largely in tense moments. In fact, tense moments was most too frequent. They had the crowd hysterical.

And right here, before I forget it, I wantta give this efficient little bird Tuero a lotta credit for the game he turned in. Cool, calculating, he showed little of the excitability of his race. In fact, it was in the pinches that he rose to his greatest pitching. That he should fail before the mighty bat of Big Boy and to the deadly hitting of Stellbauer in two spots was not to his discredit.

Cuban Sure Pitches.

He and his board of strategy might have found it to their interest to pass Big Boy in the spot where he clinched the scrimmage, but he undoubtedly felt that in Hoffman he faced as hard a proposition, so he took a chance, lost and with rare gameness turned around and fanned Dutch. Yes, sir; Tuero pitched a great game and with the same support accorded his rival might have battled him into a scoreless extra-inning game.

In the Chick defense, however, Old Man Wind was the greatest cog. At least four long wallops, three of which were gathered by Rhiney Williams with his back against the ropes, would have been undisputed on a still day. Big Boy got two of these, Stellbauer one and Hoffman one. But the stiff breeze blowing off the flagpole blew them back to Williams' upstretched hands.

In the brilliant defense of the Cats, Still Bill Stellbauer probably led the forces, though every other man was in on the deal close up. Gentlemen, I saw a miracle out there in right field yesterday. Bill was on his toes from the first crack of the gun. He ranged from the foul line to almost center field, moving in just the right spot all the time.

Fans are not analytical. They seldom see an outfielder shift for the batters; they do not realize that much depends on that instinct of a gardener that starts him after a ball even before it is hit. But that's what was happening out in right field.

Bill Plucks a Apple.

Of course, the same thing was happening in center and in left—Still Bill just had the most chances, that was all.

One of Bill's catches was out almost to the club house corner, two more were in dead right center—line drives, too—and another was a catch that stood the fans on their heads and kept them there for several minutes. McLarry ran up on a high pitch by Josephus and poled it for what looked like a two-bagger into the right field crowd. But Bill ran to the ropes, jumped high in the air and flagged the apple in his bare right hand. Talk about pepper! From now on out whenever anybody ever tells me that Bill Stellbauer won't hustle for anybody, I'm gonna laff right in his face. I gotta laff comin'.

Topper, Haley Boy, Dutch, Ziggy, Coombs—everybody handled at least one hard chance and cut off what looked like base hits. And always, when the apple was dug up by some infielder and turned loose in the direction of first base, there was that long, eager body of Big Boy stretched out at least ten feet to meet the throw.

Just how determined was the temper of the Chicks was demonstrated in the first inning. High opened with a sharp crack between Rigney and Haley, which Topper came up with, and his perfect peg across the diamond completed a wonder play. Still Bill followed with a catch of a line drive by McMillan that was ticketed for two sacks. These two plays showed conclusively that the Cats were full of hustle and from then on the Chicks could not pass.

Cecil Starts 'Em.

Cecil Coombs led off for the third time in the series with a hit, his blow being a double into the bleachers in left center. Hungling tried for a snap throw to second to catch Coombs off, but the ball sailed wide, and though McMillan knocked it down, Coombs reached third while the shortstop was running it down. Sears grounded out, but Stellbauer slammed a terrific liner into left center, Coombs scoring after Brown had made the catch.

Behind his great defense, Pate was unthreatened until the fifth. In this frame, with two down, Hungling sliced a hot wallop through between Haley and Rigney, though the defense was thrown around until he didn't have much more than ten feet hitting space down there. Tuero came through with a lovely wallop to right center, which Stellbauer failed to handle. But he boosted the ball over to Coombs.

Hungling, guessing right that Cecil would make his play at second, continued on around third and started for the plate. Rigney informed Dutch of what was going on, and the old boy didn't even let the ball slow up, but pivoted it home like a bullet. Hungling being nipped as he slid in. This was a greater play than it looked, for Bud had made a great try that had been frustrated by as great a defense.

Tuero's greatest pitching had been in the fourth, when he was put in a heart-breaking hole. He was attacked by the Cat wrecking crew in this frame with a viciousness that proved to me that he has guts. Stellbauer led off with a single to left. Big Boy's home run was blown back and caught by Williams. Dutch, however, put a little more steam back of his blow, and it went into the bleachers, though Williams went under the rope in a desperate try for a catch. Haley walked, and the bases were full with one out. Then Tuero pitched. He fanned Topper and Battling Haworth grounded out on a pretty play by McMillan, who took his high bounder in front of second and completed the toss.

Big Boy Comes Through.

Big Boy iced up that game in the fifth. With one down, Coombs drew a walk. On a hit and run, Ziggy poked a waste ball toward Yockey, who had started to cover. The second baseman tried to stop and make a play, and actually reached for the ball with his gloved hand, but the pill hugged the ground, went for a hit and Coombs took third. Here Tuero went to the spit for the first time, though the agreement permitted him to use it. He may have salivaed on the ball, but I hadn't seen him. Anyhow, he struck Bill out with a spit ball.

When Big Boy came up, the board of strategy of the Chicks had a conference. They were not discussing the advisability of walking Big Boy, as third and first only were occupied and there was no hole open in which to put him. But they did decide that a double steal was coming off and that Hungling should return to Tuero instead of trying for Sears at second. They guessed right, all right, for on the first pitch Ziggy went over, Bud flung the apple to Oscar—but the rest of the program went wrong, for Phelan had solved the play in advance and kept Coombs nice and snug and comfy on third.

Here was the place for some more strategy, but Tuero decided to pitch to Big Boy. He had bad luck, for Big Boy certainly did whom one for him. Though the blow was only a few feet to the right of the shortstop he had no more chance to get on it than Uncle Jake had to get on the Cat Special to Memphis the other night at the Dallas terminal. Sears was away with the crack of the bat and scored easily before Williams could come in from his lounging place out against the ropes, grab up the ball and throw it home.

Challenge in Eighth.

After that, Tuero used more spit and really had no more trouble, though Big Boy cracked one in the eighth that would have gone over the courthouse had the wind been in the other direction. As it was, Rhiney backed against the ropes in left center and caught it.

With a brilliant defense, the Cats broke up hard hitting by the Chicks in the sixth and seventh, but in the eighth the crowd had a thrill. Hungling opened with a single. Tuero did his best to make a hit, his effort being a line drive straight at Coombs. High lined to right center, where Still Bill was laying for it. McMillan, however, got his drive straight—a pretty blow to the same spot, on which Stellbauer used good judgment by refusing to take a chance on making a hard stop, as he had done earlier in the game. By letting it go, it could be only a two-bagger and Hungling would be stopped at third automatically. Bill had no chance to catch the ball. With Rhiney up there, it looked bad. But he hit one on the handle, which was an easy chance for the hustling Dutchman.

This was the Chicks' last fling. They had battled against overpowering odds for eight innings, but when the last started Pate rose to the peak of all left-hand pitching for all time. He struck McLarry out, and the big fellow got all three of his swings. Don Brown also took three healthy cuts, and, like Poll, didn't even get a foul outta it. Howard Camp did better; he poked at a curve and raised a puny foul that Haley gathered over among the pop bottles by the rope in front of the bleachers.

Old Man Pate's boy Josephus had brought home the bacon in a burst of pitching that was truly miraculous.

Atzmen's Hard Hitting Is Feature; Stellbauer and Kraft Get Homers

BY WILLIAM B. RUGGLES,
Staff Correspondent The News.

Fort Worth, Texas, Sept. 22.—The Texas League champions turned today on the Memphis Chicks and evened the count in the Dixie series. Frankie and Johnny, those ever lovin' lovers, had nothing on the Panthers this torrid day, for, oh, lordy, how they could hit! When the smoke of battle lifted above Panther Park late in the afternoon, three of Spencer Abbott's pitchers had quailed before a colorful attack in which the Panthers gave all the paragraphers an opportunity wtih the old Democratic free silver ratio of 16 to 1.

The gloom that shrouded Main and Houston Wednesday is dissipated tonight and in the slogan of "On to Memphis!" the revivified fans are foreseeing another triumph over the title holders of Lawyer John Martin's purlieus. For out of today's melee, won by rugged hitting, the fact stands out that these Panthers are going to be hard on Memphis pitching. There are only five of Spencer Abbott's heavers and three of them today took a terrible drubbing, all in the space of one inning. Oscar Tuero, who worked the Tuesday game, was none too good. Marks is yet to be heard from. But young Paul Zahniser, Boyd and Zeke Lohman, the old, old-timer, bent like reeds before a gale today as the Panthers swung their flails. Lordy, how they could hit!

Displaying a complete reversal of form, the Chicks, who in the opener outplayed, outthought, outfought and outgamed the Panthers, wilted today. Their batting was a puerile affair in the face of Joe Pate and his aged left wing. Their fielding blew up with a bang, Memphis misplays in the field counting heavily in the disaster that overtook three jailing pitchers. As for thinking, there was little ot think about except the monumental appearance of an eleven-run lead piled up in the first four innings. Lordy, how they could hit!

Atz' Gamble Pays.

Jake Atz gambled today that young Gus Johns' pitching in the last five frames of the opening game was a safe criterion of the weakness of Abbott's club against left-handers. Joe Pate more than sustained the accuracy of his guess. Traveling along under wraps, the wise old south arm turned the Chicks back. Pate held the Southerners to five hits, although three of them were hammered out by the left-handers of the Chicks' batting order. The Memphis gents edged over one run while a double play was being reeled off by the Panthers, who, with a nifty lead at the moment, were willing to be magnanimous in the matter of a mere score.

More than Joe Pate won the ball game. It was salted away by the terrific batting in which three Memphis pitchers wilted. With every man on the batting order hitting safely at least once, the Panthers ran up a total of fifteen hits for twenty-eight bases. The home run club that has man-handled Texas League pitchers all year held a called session and contributed three of its customary knocks—no mean feat when ground rules restrict the length of the afternoon smashes. Lordy, how they could hit!

Bill Stellbauer, who drew pay the greater part of the season in Southern spangles, lifted the first home run of the series over the left field parapet in the fourth inning with waiting runners on every base and thereby acquired a hat chocked full of greenbacks. It was the home run that started the home run business. It was followed immediately by Kraft's ram into the right-center stands and along in the seventh by another by Ziggy Sears to almost the same spot.

Kraft Comes Through.

Kraft, the superswatter of the Roberts loop this year, held to a scratch single in the Wednesday game, headed the drive today, crashing out a pair of doubles before delivering his home run in the fourth. His initial rap scored the first pair of runs of the game. Stellbauer added a pair of singles to his clean-up swat, neither, it might be mentioned, drawing any momentary reward from a populace thoroughly satiated with base hits by the time the last was delivered. Lordy, how they could hit!

The Panthers gave Pate flawless support and contributed two double plays that served materially to help hold the Chicks subdued before the left-hander's slanting art. Fielding was rapid, but not sensational. The only spectacular stop of the day was contributed by a Memphis player when Polly McLarry ran back in right to snare Kraft's short fly in his upraised glove, robbing the King Mauler of a fourth safety.

The Wednesday disaster cut a couple of thousand off the attendance. Where Panther Park was filled to capacity for the opener, today bare bleachers stretched across the sunny left-field and, while the stands were filled and a fringe of rooters edged out on the left field foul line, the day's turnstiles could not have recorded over 7,500 on hand.

It was an enthusiastic crowd, however. Where Wednesday, after the fatal fourth, despondent rooters had begun to stream away and by the seventh there was a general exodus, today the huge crowd stuck out to the bitter end what had closed to be a ball game, and found its comfort in jeering the luckless Chicks.

Details of Play.

The game in detail:

Rigney raced over to left for High's grounder in the first and threw the batter out. McMillan tried a bunt and was thrown out by Pate at first. Rinaldo Williams sharply hit bounder was deflected by the pitcher, rolling behind him and to the left. It looked like a sure infield hit, but Frank Haley, charging at full tilt, made a lightning pick-up and throw, retiring Williams. It was a beautiful play.

Coombs began Fort Worth's half with a sharp single to center. Ziggy Sears' perfect bunt was handled by Dowie, whose throw to McLarry barely beat the runner. Coombs took second on the play. Dowie threw to the bag to catch the runner off and Coombs slid back safely, but was apparently hurt. He resumed play and was given a roar of applause. The inevitable break of the game came for the Panthers when Stellbauer's easy grounder took a reverse spin under McLarry's outstretched legs and bounded perversely out to right. Camp threw to the plate and Coombs, who had rounded third, went back to the bag. Clarence Kraft kept Zahniser busy, working the count up to three and two, and then smoked a terrific smash through Midget McMillan. Brown was playing far to right and had difficulty covering, fumbling the ball when he reached it. Coombs and Stellbauer scored easily and Kraft took third. Hoffman sent a soft single to right, bringing Kraft in. On a hit-and-run play, Haley popped a short fly to second which Yockey trapped, retiring the batter. Rigney was out on a fly to Camp.

McLarry led off the second inning with a fly to Sears. Brown lofted easily to Hoffman, and Dutch also captured Camp's fly back of second with Coombs and Rigney waiting for the same ball.

Zahniser got but one strike over on Haworth in the Panther half and the catcher walked. Pate sent an easy fly to High in trying to bunt. Coombs went out on a long fly to Camp and Sears was thrown out by Yockey on a slow grounder.

Yockey led off the third with a double to right center, a difficult fly which Coombs tried to field in air. He dropped the ball and Yockey made second before it was retrieved. Dowie singled to right center. Yockey, who hesitated to see if the fly hit would be caught, only moved to third. Yockey scored when Zahniser hit into a double play, Rigney taking his grounder, throwing to Hoffman to force Dowie and the relayed throw getting Zahniser at first. High sent a high fly to center.

Stellbauer Draws Pass.

Zahniser passed Stellbauer, first up for the Texas Leaguers. The hard-hitting Kraft doubled to center, the ball coming toward right and bounding into the stands. Stellbauer went to third. Boyd appeared in the bullpen and throughout the rest of the inning warmed up. Stellbauer scored after Rinaldo Williams made a great catch of Hoffman's long sacrifice fly to left. Kraft had started off second before the catch and was driven back by Williams' throw. Haley lined out to McLarry, an attempt to double Kraft off second failing. Rigney went out, High to McLarry, on a fast play by the third baseman.

McMillan grounded to Haley in the fourth and was out at first. Williams popped a high foul back of first that fell into Kraft's big glove, and Kraft also took care of McLarry's grounder over the first bag.

The lightning McMillan ate up Haworth's grounder in the Panther's half. McLarry fumbled Pate's slap to his left, the pitcher being safe at first. Boyd began to warm up again over back of the crowd fringing the ropes in left. Coombs walked on four straight balls. Zahniser served two balls to Ziggs Sears, and after a conference in middiamond was relieved by Boyd, who finished passing Sears, filling the bases. Lohman replaced Boyd in the bullpen. Bill Stellbauer knocked the the introductory home run of the series, driving the ball over the left field fence. It was a high fly, almost on a line from the plate, the pellet dropping barely fair. The crowd in the stands went wild at the clean-up blow. Kraft followed immediately with a long drive to right center, clearing the wire in front of the new stands, and under the ground rules a home run. Lohman relieved Boyd. The veteran heaver evidently had had no time to warm up, and was greeted by a rain of blows. Hoffman beat out a high grounder to short. Haley hit safely to center, Hoffman going to third. Rigney singled, scoring Hoffman and putting Haley on second. Haworth grounded to second. With little chance to make it, Yorkey tried for a double play, but the throw struck the runner and rolled out to deep short. Yorkey himself retrieved the ball while Haley and Rigney were scoring. Yorkey threw out Pate and Highed tossed out Coombs.

Stellbauer took care of Brown's fly to start the fifth. Camp's rap traveled past Kraft on out to right for a single. Pate fanned Yorkey, the first strike-out of the game. Dowie cracked a long fly out by the bare bleachers in left, which Sears handled.

McLarry's rGeat Catch.

For Fort Worth Sears rolled to McLarry. Stellbauer lofted to Williams. Kraft's string of extra-base crashes was broken into when McLarry raced out in right and made a gloved hand catch high over his head, robbing Kraft of a Texas Leaguer.

Lohman led off the sixth and was thrown out by Pate. High went out, Hoffman to Kraft. McMillan lined out to Rigney.

In Fort Worth's half, Hoffman filed to Brown. Haley was safe when Lohman's throw pulled McLacy off first. Rigney foulde out to High. Haley was caught on an attempted steal, Dowie to McMillan.

Williams Teaxs Leaguered to right in the seventh and McLarry singled to center. Brown shot a grounder to second, resulting in a double play, Hoffman to Rigney to Kraft. Rigney's long cross-diamond throw retired Camp.

In Fort Worth's half, Haworth went out, McMillan to McLarry. Pate scratched a lucky double when his Texas Leaguer back of third bounded into the ropes in left. Coombs fouled out to High. Sears drove the third home run of the game into the right field stands, scoring Pate ahead of him. Stellbauer hit safe to center, the ball getting through Don Brown for an extra base. Lohman threw out Kraft at first.

Nearing the End.

In the eighth, Yockey rolled out, Pate to Kraft. Rigney took care of Dowie's swife grounder and Pate tossed out Lohman.

Hoffman sent a fly to Brown. Yockey fumbled Haley's grounder and threw wild to first, the ball going into the dugout, Haley taking second. Rigney doubled into the crowd, scoring Haley, Haworth beat out an infield hit to second, Rigney going to third. On a low serve, Dowie passed the try and Rigney scored, Haworth taking second. Pate ended the inning with a fly for which Brown set himself and waited patiently until it descended.

Memphis' final inning was weak. High popped a short foul to Hale, and McMillan lifted an easly fly to the same player. Rinaldo Williams drew the only base on balls Pate allowed in the game and McLarry finally fanned.

Much Interest in Athletics.

Special to The News.

Lampasas, Texas, Sept. 22.—Unusual interest is being manifested in athletics at the Lampasas High School this season and they have recently had a tryout for members of the football squad, with twenty-eight boys out. Dudley S. Moore has charge of the athletics and is being assisted by James L. Abney. New suits and shoes have been received for the team, and the main feature to be emphasized this year will be fair play in all sports.

confident of getting to Tuero as I am we're going to take this series. It was just a question of "how soon," that's all.

Homer Battling Haworth happened to be the bird to start the fireworks in the third frame. When I told you in the first paragraph that the Cats wrote a new leaf in that inning I was giving you straight dope. Six base hits that were regular cannon shots was the first item on the new leaf. But the most funniest thing was that every ball hit in the inning counted. Listen to this: The Battler opened up with a line drive over second for a single, and Lefty sacrificed, so his effort counted. Cecil Coombs score the first tally with a sizzler over High's head that you could hear singin' them blues way up in the grandstand. Boy, that was a well-hit ball. Ziggerino then busted a line drive past McLarry like a bullet, the ball getting past Camp and going into the crowd for two bases. Still Bill sent Williams to the races with a mile high fly into left center, Coombs scoring easily after the ball was caught. Big Boy smashed the first ball pitched for a line drive past McLarry's head, scoring Sears. Hoffman scored Kraft with the first of three two-baggers. Haley slapped one past Yockey, but the second baseman reached the ball enough to deflect it to McLarry to throw Hoffman out at the plate. Did they get on Mister Teuro? Ask Mister Tuero, if you ever get a chance. He'll tell you they got on him.

Lefty worked out of several bad holes, but his first real danger came in the fifth. High singled and McMillan doubled. Williams fanned, but McLarry walked, filling the bases, with Don Brown up. Haley, however, saved the boys bacon with a brilliantly executed double play when he grabbed Brown's grounder, stepped on third and shot the ball across the diamond like a bullet in time to hook Brown at first. To my notion, this was the fastest play in the series.

Curtains for Lefty.

In the meantime, George Mohart had taken up the job of pitching for the Chicks. We had never looked George over before so he got by the fourth without getting murdered. But in the fifth, with two down, Ziggerino singled to second. McMillan booted Kraft's grounder. Dutch then hit one over Rhiney's head that rolled a few feet short of the crowd in deep right center and that Kraft person gave an exhibition of speed from first home that would have made Man o' War return to the racing game. This extra two tallies made us feel better, but with even 6 to 0 is not a cinch score, we knew by now that Lefty was doomed. Wachtel had been in the bull pen for two innings and was good and warm, but Jake and everybody on the club wanted the bowlegged little whelp to finish his game. A blind man could have seen when he went out there in the sixth that it was curtains for him. He had the stuff, but was too tired to control it.

Camp opened with a single to right. Yockey hit one over second like a bullet but Topper by an unbelievable play knocked the ball down and backhanded it to Hoffman in time to force Camp. It was a great play. However, Bud Hungling doubled to deep center. This finished Lefty and he pitched eight straight balls, walking Mohart and High and forcing in a tally.

This made the score 6 to 1, but the bases were still full, the Chick wrecking crew coming up and only one out. So Skipper Jake came up outta the dugout and lifted the kid in favor of Wachtel. We all had a momentary thrill when Paul's first two offerings were high over McMillan's head. It's no secret that the Old Folks sure can hit high pitching and we were nervous. Then the old spitt master stepped in and zipped one down the hearth just above the batter's knees for a perfect strike and we knew we was gone. And he sure was off. McMillan had to hit at one and he slapped it back at Paul for a snappy double. Wachtel to Haworth to Kraft that retired the side.

But the Chicks paid dear for the run, four old wreckers came again in the seventh and whommed Morehart some more, dear heart. Coombs cracked a sharp liner straight at High, which the third baseman grabbed. Sears singled past second. Stellbauer doubled over the right field temporary bleachers for two sacks. Big Boy hit one almost to the score board in center for another double and Dutch scored Big Boy with a single to left. Three runs on four of the cleanest drives you ever seen. This same bunch got in action in the eighth, also. Wachtel went out, but Coombs drew a walk, Ziggy almost hit one over the deep right field fence, a triple anywhere, but ground rules held it to two bases. Bill busted another one on the nose, but it was a line drive straight at Williams, who was so far in left he looked like a small boy, and Coombs scored easily after the ball was caught.

Happy Cat Crew to Workout Today

BY LORIN M'MULLEN.

The Fort Worth Cats were back home today—and so happy about it they called an afternoon workout at La Grave Field.

"The boys want to get used to the sunlight," Manager Homer Peel said.

"The boys" were joyful over last night's 3-0 victory at Little Rock, which enabled them to square the Dixie Series at one game each, but more important to them was the prospect of playing a Sunday game before their own fans—and in what they now consider the ball players' paradise at La Grave Field.

They had enough of the Little Rock park, and the Peelmen have a double reason for wanting to wind up the series in three straight games, Sunday afternoon and Monday and Tuesday nights here.

Game at 3.

Sunday at 3 o'clock they will send Ed Greer to the mound against the Travelers' Kola Sharpe, who is rated at present second only to Byron Humphries.

Peculiarities of Travelers' field were a contributing factor to the Cats' 10-0 defeat in the first game and it cost Ed Selway again last night.

That Mountain.

"Lookout Mountain," the hill in left field, kept Selway's game from being known as one in which he allowed nothing but scratch hits.

In the fourth inning Fred Tauby, the former Cat, drove out a long fly that would have been an easy out for the Travelers' mountain-climbing Graham, or for Peel in an ordinary park. But the ball carried on over Homer's head and was scored as a two-base hit.

The Travelers collected just four other safeties off Selway, and all of these were hits simply because the lightning fast Arkansans outran the throw.

The Cats played a beautiful game behind Selway's shutout pitching. They swung away at the starter, Righthander Bob Porter, and finally scored a run in the sixth and another in the seventh. In the ninth the Texans counted an unearned run off "Jinx" Poindexter, who followed Porter.

The Cats came through with three double plays, one of which was a "do or die" affair with a runner on third base and one down.

Had Good Control.

This type of heroics was not required very often, although Little Rock had runners on third three times.

Selway had good control throughout, but appeared on the verge of soaring in the fourth inning. He had not been able to get his curves to break, and had relied solely upon his fast ball until then. When his curves began to click, the Travelers were dumbfounded.

Selway continued to curve them until the eighth inning, then he, or Catcher Bill Jackson, crossed them up by switching back to fast balls. In the last two innings, six men went down in order.

Clyde McDowell was the Cats' batting hero, with four singles in five trips to the plate, although Jim McLeod and Lee Stebbins drove in the two earned runs.

More Than 100,000 Pass His Bier to Pay Final Respects to Famed Home Run King

By LEO M. SWAIM, JR., of the New York Post

NEW YORK, N. Y.

PORTION of the long lines passing Ruth's bier in Yankee Stadium.

The Babe—as though he had to—proved himself again.

Stilled in death, the Big Fellow drew into Yankee Stadium a bigger crowd of mourners than many championship teams had drawn spectators in a World's Series.

This was the measure of the man.

There is no simple, austere way of describing Babe Ruth's wake. It was as everything the man did—it was carnival, it was cathedral, it was rowdy, it was reserved, it was the people mourning a man they called their own, as indeed he was.

There were infants in arms in the line that filed by the bier. There were sobbing sentimentalists, there were dry-eyed stoics. There were the genuine heart-touched, there were the morbidly curious.

There were more than 100,000 who passed the Babe's bier.

They moved solemnly, slowly, past the Colossus of Sport, who died of cancer at 53. They passed by the Babe at the rate of 100 persons a minute, a mourner pausing now and again to drop a spiritual bouquet alongside the casket.

The Babe's friends walked in measured tread toward his bier until now and then an impatient policeman would hurry them along.

"Step right along there," he would say. "There are thousands behind you."

And they would hurry momentarily and then they'd resume their measured tread until they came to the mahogany casket that held the Babe.

'I Loved That Man'

Now some of them would stop, and do something that would disturb the police.

One of these was Anthony Cammarano, a fat, brown and wrinkled barber who had come down from his home in the Bronx.

He reached his hand through the banked flowers on the casket and placed his palm in affection on the Babe's clasped hands, pausing.

The two policemen flanking the casket converged on the barber and hustled him past the bier.

"I loved that man," he explained in apology. "I loved that man. When you get such a feeling for a man . . . I feel very sorry."

And still others would do something that would stimulate interest.

One of these was Norman Upson, 51, also of the Bronx.

This man, a fireman at St. Barnabas Hospital, dropped a wet and sodden little package in a basket of flowers as he walked by.

The police, careful about such things, reached into the basket, retrieved the package and opened it. It held a single, red rosebud.

Now, this was an unusual thing for a man to do and worthy of questions.

"I just brought a red rose for a dear, old friend," Upson said. "I knew the Babe when he had his farm near Worcester, Mass., and pitched for the Red Sox. He came up from nothing and made fame. Lots of people don't get the breaks. He didn't get them, either. He made them."

And others had to have the assistance of police.

One of these was Miss Rose Gillespie, 78, who leaned heavily on her cane. She had come from Cambria, Ia., to visit her sister in Brooklyn, and together they had come by subway to see the Babe.

The sight of this aged and halt woman, leaning timidly on the arm of a young and obliging policeman, prompted a question.

"I don't know why I came," she said with the elusiveness the aged sometimes have. "I just wanted to see him."

Had you not been there to see for yourself, you would have learned from your friends that Babe Ruth was laid in state under the floor of the lower stands in the great rotunda that opens into Gate 4, facing 157th street.

Coming through Gate 4 you would have seen a great photographic mural spread on the concrete wall behind the Babe's casket. And the Babe was there, too, striking out magnificently in one panel, poling one out into Ruthville in another.

Lived Again for Allan Cohen

That was about the scene, as the Babe's mourners, the laughing and the crying, passed by, and one of these, Allan Cohen, cast his eyes up to the murals in quickening interest as he neared the casket.

He lived again, it was evident to one watching him, the delights of the Babe's lusty wallop at the ball, and then his eyes fell down silent and soft on the figure of the Babe.

It was only a figure of the Babe that Allan Cohen saw, not the Babe who was robust and tanned on the greensward. This was a waxen man, face thinned out, lips drawn in just a hint of the broad, bawdy grin that once spread over his face.

And Allan Cohen saw no gray uniform striped in fine blue line. He saw, instead, the Babe dressed in double-breasted, blue gabardine suit, white shirt, and blue, gold figured tie.

What, Cohen was asked, did he think as he looked at the Babe in the murals and the Babe in the casket?

"I could only think he was my idol," the velvet-voiced man said. "I followed his career for a long time. He has aged quite a bit, but he still has that pleasant look, as if he was pleased with the task he had done."

Now, there were priests and clerics of all denominations in the line. And these men, some of them of the Babe's mother church, paused and gave their benediction.

There were soldiers and sailors in uniform and three yeomen attached to the Bayonne Naval Base took their liberty to pay homage to the Bambino.

Some of these people had marched in measured, mourner's tread for two hours before they filed by the Babe.

And among these was a handsome, smartly attired young matron. And when she came to the Babe, after those hours, she turned her head aside.

"I just couldn't," she broke, "I just couldn't look."

A jaunty fellow came along now and he was Bill Robinson, friend of the Babe. He paused and stared a moment at the Bam and fell out of line and went over to where the reporters were sitting. He swung himself up on the bench and sat alongside Jackie Farrell, a Yankee press attache.

Bojangles, who calls the Yankees "us" by right of 30 years' loyalty, turned to Farrell and murmured:

"Did you ever think we'd sit here and look at our boy like this?"

Humble Tribute Paid Ruth in Simple, Eloquent Rites

Cardinal Spellman Mixes Game Terms in Prayer for Departed Babe

By JACK LAIT
Editor of the New York Mirror

NEW YORK, N. Y.

Down the broad aisle of lofty, vaulted St. Patrick's Cathedral they bore the clay of Babe Ruth on the morning of August 19, to rest in its rich mahogany casket during the last solemn and sacred rites of his faith, the ancient Requiem Mass.

Cardinal Spellman presided. And, after the supplications in Latin, the eminent priest intoned in English a prayer, reverent and eloquent, in which were mingled baseball terms and in which he called him "Babe" as he recommended the departed soul to its Maker, saying:

"May the divine spirit that inspired Babe Ruth to overcome hardship and win the crucial game of life animate many generations of American youth to learn from his struggles and successes loyally to play their positions on all American teams. And may his generous-hearted soul, through the mercy of God, the final scoring of his own good deeds and the prayers of his faithful friends, through the mercy of God, rest in everlasting peace."

To the 5,600 who sat and stood in the nave, hushed in humility and awed by the holy ceremonies, it seemed fitting that this man who had become a symbol of his nation, who had received communion in the humble chapel of St. Mary's in Baltimore, should go to his repose from the majestic cathedral on Fifth Avenue.

A Child of the Lowly

For here was a child of the lowly who had won the heart of the world, had been so kind and compassionate while he was so great, had gone so far though he had stopped so often—to smile and share and give of his own high courage and vast spirit.

As the cortege came slowly through the door and the magnificent choir chanted the "Miserere," tears spurted and low sobs broke forth. A melodious bell tolled. The officers of the Mass entered the sanctuary, followed by the celebrant, the Right Rev. Msgr. Flannelly, who stood at the foot of the altar. He and the deacons and acolytes knelt and made the sign of the cross.

"In nomine Patris, et Filli, et Spiritus Sancti. Amen."

The widow and her two daughters, in full mourning attire, sat near the casket, across the aisle from the pall-bearers, led to their seats by Gov. Thomas E. Dewey and Mayor William O'Dwyer. Behind them sat Hank Greenberg, who had come nearest to equaling the Babe's season-high home-run record. Nearby was Johnny Mize. In the seat before me sat Mel Ott and Leo Durocher, his successor at the helm of the Giants. They had entered arm in arm.

But sprinkled through the crowd were boys in sweaters, men who might have been truck drivers or laborers, in shirtsleeves, and a number of the disabled veterans, in convention here, wearing their badges and regalia.

The Mass began exactly at 11 o'clock and the soft bell sounded noon as the Cardinal's invocation ended.

The casket was borne through the main door, around which, for blocks, 70,000 persons, some of whom had gathered there at daylight, were clustered behind barriers on the walks. Traffic had been detoured. The buses were running one block west.

A fine, gentle rain had turned hard and heavy, but the crowd did not disperse until the funeral procession, of 30 coaches, got under way. Four cars, leading, were filled with flowers, though the family had asked that none be sent.

The procession filed between jammed sidewalks as far uptown as Fordham Road.

The Gate of Heaven Cemetery, in Mt. Pleasant, N. Y., had begun to fill up at about 10:30 o'clock. When the mourners arrived, at 1:40, about 5,000 awaited them. The rain had just then ceased.

The Rt. Rev. John J. O'Donnell, chaplain of the Port of N. Y., read the commitment prayers at the tomb. The Rev. Thomas Kaufman, who had administered extreme unction to Ruth, comforted the widow, who was almost overcome.

The casket was placed in a vault, as final burial arrangements had not yet been made.

Notables in Abundance

No political leader, no victorious general, no wealthy benefactor could have had a more impressive farewell than was poured out for this unique athlete and simple humanitarian.

Burial in the cathedral, of course, signified his status. Cardinal Spellman officiating in person at funeral service is an extraordinary event. The presence of notables in such abundance was a high tribute.

But Babe Ruth's worshipers among the masses signified along the streets his enormous appeal to Americans.

Workmen laid down their tools and bared their heads; windows were filled, thousands streamed from buildings. Nurses and physicians ran out of hospitals as the black autos swung by. It was not a large funeral parade as such things go. There was nothing to see, nothing spectacular.

But they all knew that in the hearse was the body of Babe Ruth. They stared and watched it until it was out of sight. They exchanged anecdotes—they had seen him drive one over the wall, they had heard him on the air, they had seen him on the screen, they knew someone who knew someone who had shaken his hand.

Never had anything like it been known for a figure from the sports sphere. It was a wholly American phenomenon, answering to none of the elements understandable to people elsewhere.

He has gone into our history and will become a legend. Generations to come may find that hard to believe, and he may become a semi-myth. For one had to see it to be sure of it.

Requiescat in pace!

PACIFIC COAST LEAGUE

Stars to Slice Flag Melon of 12 Grand

By JOHN B. OLD

HOLLYWOOD, Calif.

Bobby Bragan

All the celebrating isn't over for the Hollywood Stars, winners of three pennants in five years, and Manager Bobby Bragan.

The Stars expect to collect about $12,000 as their share of the league bonus to the winning team and Bragan appears certain to be rewarded with a new and fatter contract for bringing the team home in front during his first season.

"A new contract for Bobby Bragan will be taken up at the next meeting of the board of directors," said President Bob Cobb of the Stars.

Meanwhile, Bragan is packing for a quick getaway to Cuba, where he again will manage in the winter league.

Looking back over the season, Bragan points to three series as the keys of the Coast league race.

"What really got us started was beating Los Angeles seven out of nine at Wrigley Field in the last week of May," he recalled. "All of the fellows thought we could win after that.

"At least they did until the first week of June, which saw us hit our lowest ebb when Seattle grabbed a Sunday doubleheader and headed home with a six-game lead."

Seattle came back in July, and one of the high points of the season was reached the twelfth day of that month, a Sunday.

"We licked Seattle twice by scores of 8 to 7 and 4 to 1," Bragan remembered, "and I thought Bill Sweeney (Seattle pilot) would blow his top."

After July 12, the Stars never relinquished their hold on first place, but Bragan feels the series that really broke Seattle's back occurred the following week-end.

"We went into Seattle for a four-game series and they took the first two, cutting our lead to two games. But we clipped them twice on Sunday to stretch our lead back to four games and that broke their hearts.

"Do you know what made this team?" asked Bragan, and he quickly answered his own question:

"There always was someone around to take up the slack.

"Jack Phillips started out as if he were going to knock the cover off the ball. He had a hot streak for a couple of months. Lee Walls had a good run; Frank Kelleher would go crazy for a spell, or Ted Beard.

"Along with the fellows that played in streaks, we had the consistent players like Dale Long, Tom Saffell and Monty Basgall who were the every-day backbone of the club."

Dillinger Sews Up PCL Bat Title With 22-for-33 Spree

PORTLAND, Ore.—Bob Dillinger, former major league infielder who was converted into a flychaser with Sacramento this year, clinched the Pacific Coast League batting title with a spectacular hitting outburst against Portland here, September 1-6.

The bespectacled outfielder, who will be 35 years old on September 17, hammered Portland pitching for 18 hits in 34 times at bat, including a six-for-six performance in the 11-inning second game, September 3.

Over an eight-game stretch from August 30 through September 4, Dillinger made 22 hits in 33 plate appearances.

Champ Stars' Late Letdown Brings Rebuke by Bragan

HOLLYWOOD, Calif.—The Hollywood Stars clinched their second successive Pacific Coast League pennant and third in the last five years, September 7, but the manner in which the club sewed up the flag left much to be desired with Manager Bobby Bragan.

After hiking their lead over runner-up Seattle to ten games late in August, the Stars were expected to erase the Rainiers' last mathematical chance to overtake them during the first three or four days of this month. However, the Twinks experienced a letdown during their September 1-6 series with San Francisco, dropping five of seven games to lose their first series since early in July. And even while clinching the bunting on Labor Day, the Stars could do no better than split with Oakland.

The fiery Bragan didn't take the Stars' late-season slump kindly, barring newspapermen and photographers after the September 6 twin-bill while giving his performers a stinging tongue-lashing. Bragan finally relented to the extent of posing for pictures.

This year's Hollywood pennant party, set for the Palladium on September 16, will be open to the public. Tickets cost $10, with all receipts going to the Exceptional Children's Foundation.

Stars That Shot to Title for Hollywood

BOB COBB'S Hollywood Stars clinched their third Pacific Coast League pennant in five years and second in a row, September 7, when they split a double-header with Oakland.

Miami Gets a Bigger Place in O. B. Sun

Million-Dollar Stadium Ranks as Showplace

Project Covers 16 Acres; No Posts in Grandstand to Obstruct View

By JIMMY BURNS

MIAMI, Fla.

"If I had to go back to the minors, Miami Stadium is the kind of ball park in which I'd like to play." Spurgeon Chandler, former New York Yankee pitcher, declared.

Chandler was expressing his admiration for the million dollar park of the Miami Florida International League Sun Sox, which was dedicated on August 31 before a crowd of 13,007.

It definitely put Miami in the top flight, so far as baseball accommodations are concerned. H. B. Taber, Sr., and his associates, who have made a ten-year dream come true, are well prepared to handle the 13 major league exhibition games which have been scheduled here next spring by the Yankees, Dodgers, Red Sox and other clubs.

No detail pertaining to the comfort of the fans, nor the safety of the players, was overlooked. The huge stands, which seat 9,500, are covered by a cantilever roof, without a single post. There are spacious rest rooms and a cocktail lounge for the box-seat holders.

Stainless Steel Fixtures

There are 14 concession stands, all with tile walls and floors fitted with stainless steel fixtures. There are 16 turnstiles to make it easy for the fans to reach their grandstand and box seats without delay. There are separate entrances for the bleachers, and the stadium includes grandstand and bleachers for Negroes.

Fans demonstrated their acceptance of these innovations by turning out 31,655 strong for the first five games in the new stadium—an average of 4,662 for the four nights after the opening.

The stadium and parking areas cover 16 acres, and the site is within two miles of downtown Miami at N. W. 10th avenue and 23rd street.

One of the more pleasing features—it brought praise from Commissioner A. B. Chandler—is the absence of advertising signs from the green fence, which in left and right extends 330 feet from home plate. It is 400 feet to the center field wall, which towers 40 feet into the air. The 85-foot neon scoreboard is in right field, with a huge electric clock above it. The scores by innings are in black against a white background. The outs, errors, balls and strikes are recorded under red numerals.

Another unusual feature is the use of red neon tubes for foul line markers. They extend up the walls to make it easier for the umpires to render their decisions. A safety measure is the use of marl instead of grass turf for the last ten feet to the walls. Even Pete Reiser would realize he was dangerously close to a barrier that could inflict injury.

The finest Bermuda turf was used for the outfield and infield. The turf was taken from the green of a golf course where the holes were being rebuilt. The grass is greener than an Irishman's tie on St. Patrick's Day.

Comfort of the players off the field was not overlooked, a point which Spurgeon Chandler had in mind when he voiced his compliments. The players' dressing rooms are on the ground level, with lounging rooms for both the home and visiting teams. Tunnels lead to the dugouts, which like the grandstand have cantilever roofs. The managers and players can see what's happening without post interference.

The lighting is the best available, with no shadows anywhere. The illuminating system consists of 612 reflectors on eight steel towers, 140 feet high.

The press box, slung from the cantilever roof, offers comfort for the sports writers. There are 13 booths for the writers, radio broadcasters and television operators. Back of the press boxes are a lounge, kitchen and bar. Private boxes for the club officials and their guests are located at each end. The press box, which is suspended 83 feet above the field, is reached by an elevator. If and when it is out of commission, only the able-bodied writers will reach their quarters via steep flights of steps.

The majority stockholder in Miami Stadium, Inc., is a teen-age Cuban, Jose B. Aleman. Aleman will learn the business of operating this gigantic sports palace under the tutelage of the senior Taber, and when Aleman comes of age he will take over. Taber and John B. Hamill are the other stockholders.

Taber's son, H. B. Jr., is president of the Sun Sox. Other directors are W. Keith Phillips, mayor of Coral Gables; Van C. Kussrow, prominent business man and a member of the Orange Bowl Committee. Eddie Gilliland, former big league executive, is general manager of the club.

Led by Dr. Ferguson

Since major league clubs dropped Miami as a spring training camp site, civic-minded persons decided that the situation could be changed by acquisition of a modern ball park. Leader in this campaign was Dr. Ralph B. Ferguson, chairman of the Miami Chamber of Commerce sports committee.

It was largely through his efforts that the present stadium site was obtained from the county commission. The area had been earmarked for industrial development. The commission said that if the Chamber of Commerce okayed it for a ball park, then the county would sell to the stadium builders. Ferguson, who developed his love for baseball at Terre Haute, Ind., got that okay.

Ferguson also was responsible for the city of Miami setting up a fund of $5,000 to be used to induce a major league club to come here for spring training. The idea has not been abandoned, although the schedule of 13 exhibition games will have to serve as a substitute. But within the next few years the Brooklyn Dodgers may shift their camp here from Vero Beach, and if and when they do, the Dodgers will have a park which for modern comfort and spring training purposes is better than Ebbets Field.

Al Vincent Pilots Tulsa Oilers to Texas Pennant

Veteran Manager Wins Third Title in 11 Years by Trimming Fort Worth in Post-Season Series

By JOHN CRONLEY

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla.

Al Vincent

Al Vincent, grey-haired manager of the Tulsa Oilers, marches on. For the third time in 11 years, Vincent won the Texas League title when the Oilers polished off the Fort Worth Cats, 4 to 1, in the final game, September 27, to capture the Shaughnessy playoffs. Vincent won the championship with Beaumont in 1938 and the pennant and Dixie championship with Dallas in 1946.

The veteran pilot led Dallas into the playoffs again in 1947, but Dallas fans didn't like the way he handled his pitchers in the post-season series and he was released. Al moved to Tulsa and took the Oilers into the playoffs last year, but they were beaten in the preliminaries. Again leading the Oilers to second place this year, after pulling them up from the depths, Vincent won the flag and the right to meet Nashville in the Dixie Series by trimming Fort Worth, which had won the regular race going away.

In the first round of the playoffs this year, Vincent piloted the Oilers to a four-to-two margin over the Oklahoma City Indians. The Indians copped the first two games of the set and the Oilers had their backs to the wall. Vincent juggled his pitching staff so masterfully in the last four games that the Indians didn't have a look in.

It was the same story in the finals with the Cats. The Oilers were beaten in the first two games, 11 to 6 and 13 to 5. It looked like the Cats in a breeze.

Turn and Turn About

Big Walker Cress gave Tulsa a 6 to 2 win in the third game. Then the Oilers came back and skinned the Cats, 5 to 1, to even the series. Frank Smith, a brilliant young moundsman, stopped the Cats on nine hits for a 5 to 2 win to put the Oilers in front in the fifth game.

In the sixth game, Eddie Chandler, veteran Cat hurler, blanked the Tulsans, 1 to 0. Wally Fiala, Cat second baseman, scored Jack Lindsey with the game's only run on a single.

Then came the showdown and the gangling and huge Cress was Vincent's mound choice. The game was a sizzler through ten innings. In the eleventh, Joe Adcock, young Tulsa first sacker, homered with two mates aboard and the Oilers marched into the Dixie Series.

Russ Burns, Tulsa outfielder, was the hitting star of the series. He collected nine safeties in 27 times at bat.

GAME OF WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 21

AT FORT WORTH — Preston Ward clouted two homers, double and single, driving in four runs, to pace Fort Worth to 11 to 6 win over Tulsa in first game. Each club used four hurlers. Oilers shelled Joe Landrum, Fort Worth ace, with none out in fifth and Billy Loes, who was kayoed in eighth, received credit for win. John Bebber lasted less than four rounds for Oilers, after which Dave Jolly, Ken Polivka and Walker Cress saw service.

GAME OF THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 22

AT FORT WORTH—Cats went two up on Tulsa by scoring 13 to 5 victory as Eddie Chandler scattered 11 hits and Preston Ward continued heavy hitting with triple, double and single. Fort Worth exploded for five runs in second frame, highlighted by triples off bats of Ward and Chico Carrasquel, and double by Bob Bundy. Felines then produced what proved to be deciding marker in fourth, Cal Abrams driving home Jack Lindsey with single. Frank Smith, who started for Oilers, retired in favor of Rube Fischer in third and former major league righthander went rest of way, yielding eight hits.

GAME OF FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 23

AT TULSA—Oilers annexed first win in three starts by defeating Fort Worth, 6 to 2, behind eight-hit hurling of Walker Cress. Tulsa hopped on Bob Milliken, who stopped Shreveport twice in semi-finals, for three runs in first frame, featuring Johnny Lane's leadoff triple. After Ken Staples doubled home two runs for Fort Worth in fifth, Oilmen came back with two in home half on Russ Burns' homer with Eddie Knoblauch aboard to seal decision.

Rutner of Oilers Will Get Second Dixie Split in Row

TULSA, Okla.—Mickey Rutner, the Oilers' 29-year-old third sacker, will draw a slice of the Dixie Series melon for the second consecutive year, although with a different team and in a different league from last season.

In 1948, Mickey was with Birmingham, which beat Fort Worth in five games. Rutner did not participate in the series, however, as the result of a fractured collarbone suffered in a collision at second base during the fourth game of the final series with Nashville.

At the close of the season, he was promoted to Louisville and then joined the Oilers in June.

in eighth when Walt Sessi doubled, Bobby Bragan singled and Ken Staples grounded out. Oilers regained four-run margin in home half, however, on Eddie Knoblauch's single and three walks.

GAME OF SUNDAY, SEPTEMBER 25

AT TULSA—Paced by Frank Smith, who scattered nine hits in addition to scoring one run and driving in two, Tulsa defeated Fort Worth, 5 to 2, to take lead of three games to two. Oilers produced what proved to be deciding tally in seventh, after Cats had knotted count at 2 to 2 in top half of frame. After Smith opened round with single, Johnny Lane sacrificed, Fletcher Robbe grounded out and Eddie Knoblauch singled to plate third Tulsa run. Smith then doubled home two markers in eighth to conclude scoring.

GAME OF MONDAY, SEPTEMBER 26

AT FORT WORTH—Although held to four hits by Dave Jolly, Fort Worth combined one of its safeties with sacrifice and walk in fourth round to produce one run and defeat Tulsa, 1 to 0, squaring series at three wins apiece. Jack Lindsey walked to launch fourth frame and, after Eddie Chandler sacrificed, Wally Fiala singled to plate only run of game. Oilers collected six bingles off Chandler. They collected two singles in each of first and seventh innings, but lacked necessary punch to produce marker.

Rhubarb Follows Clincher by Cats

By JOHN CRONLEY

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla.

Bob Bragan

The annual Shaughnessy playoffs were scheduled to be launched on September 13, with Champion Fort Worth and Tulsa the host clubs.

The 1-2 finish by those two teams, which duplicated the windup of last season's campaign, was assured in Tulsa on Labor Day, when the arch rivals divided a twin-bill, the nightcap precipitating another controversy.

After the Cats took the opener to clinch the flag, Manager Bob Bragan planted himself beneath the press box and orally lashed Tulsa Tribune Writer Jack Charvat for some alleged derogatory remarks the latter had written about Bragan as a pilot. The Felines then frolicked through a losing 17 to 4 nightcap which Oiler President Grayle Howlett hotly branded as a "farce."

Many of the 7,000 fans walked out of the park, vowing never again to see a Fort Worth team perform.

Howlett wired formal charges to Loop President J. Alvin Gardner, who said it was not league headquarters' business, but a matter between the two teams. President John Reeves of Fort Worth described the incident as a natural reaction by a team celebrating a clincher, hopelessly behind in a game that did not figure in the outcome of the race.

What made Howlett and the fans howling mad was the manner in which the Cats had their base-runners trotting into putouts, and the way Bragan and his aides applauded and doffed their caps to the angry crowd whenever a Fort Worth out was made.

Other recent features of the race included a triple play by Oklahoma City while dropping a 7 to 3 decision to Fort Worth, and a near-perfect game by 18-game winner Joe Landrum.

In Oklahoma City on September 2, the Cats had runners at second and first in the opening inning. When the batter lined to right field, the runners were on their way, and Grant Dunlap begged to the infield, with Third Baseman Randy Jackson accounting for the second out and Shortstop Frank Zak the third.

On September 6 in Fort Worth, Landrum would have had a no-hitter but for a pinch single by Dallas Pitcher Roy Sanner in the ninth. There were two out at the time.

Kraft, at 62, Content With Home Run Crown

Texas Swatsmith, in Ill Health, Inactive for Year

Guinea Pig in Players' Frat Clash With Organized Ball in '14; He Set Loop Record for Circuit Clouts in '24

By ZEKE HANDLER

FORT WORTH, Tex.

Clarence O. (Big Boy) Kraft, now convalescing from a long illness, watched with deep interest the effort of Jerry Witte, Dallas slugger, to break his Texas League home run record during the 1949 season.

Kraft, who served three terms as county judge of Tarrant County (Fort Worth) and retired undefeated late in 1948 because of failing health, walloped 55 home runs in 1924 to establish a mark that wasn't even seriously threatened until Witte came along during the recent campaign to clout 50 round-trippers.

Kraft hung up a total of 25 individual batting records and two fielding marks during his six years (1919-1924, inclusive) with the Fort Worth team.

Now, as the ailing Big Boy looks back upon his diamond career, he has no regrets that he never attained major league stardom.

Kraft was one of the all-star great hitters of the minor leagues, and his followers in these parts always have been puzzled over his failure to shine under the Big Top.

The retired judge modestly tells you that he simply didn't measure up to major league standards.

For a number of years, he felt he didn't get his chance in the majors because he was the principal figure in a controversy in 1914 between the short-lived Baseball Players' Fraternity and the American and National leagues.

Now, at 62, Kraft says he realizes he didn't develop into an outstanding slugger until late in his baseball life. He was 34 years old when he first climbed onto the throne as the Texas League's home run monarch in 1921.

Inactive Because of Frat Fight

Getting back to the 1914 fuss between the Players' Fraternity and the majors over Kraft, it is recalled that the Boston Braves had claimed him on waivers from Brooklyn in the early weeks of the campaign. Manager George Stallings of the Braves kept him on the bench until June 26, when he was reclaimed by Brooklyn, then farmed to Newark in the International League.

This led to a protest by the Nashville club of the Southern Association, which had claimed him on waivers from New Orleans at the end of the 1913 season. Brooklyn then took Kraft in the draft.

It seems the Southern Association had an agreement with the majors providing that any player taken in the draft from the Dixie loop would be returned to that circuit if he failed to make good in the big show.

However, the Players' Fraternity, the first attempt at introducing "organized labor" into the national pastime, had another agreement with the majors by which players who didn't make the grade in the American or National leagues were to be sent first to the circuit of next lowest classification.

The Players' Fraternity used Kraft as the "guinea pig" in a test case, won its argument and Clarence was sent to Newark in the International.

'Not Good Enough for Big Time'

A strike was threatened by the Fraternity before the major leagues acceded. The rumpus received considerable publicity. For a long time, Clarence believed the American and National leagues had clamped a boycott on him as a result of the controversy.

It is also said that at one time Kraft had affiliations with one of the Federal League clubs and that this acted against him in gaining a break in the majors. He admits that he signed a contract with a team in the outlaw circuit, but, when discussing the signing, pointed out that "I didn't play an inning."

Kraft isn't a bit backward in explaining, "I know the only reason I never became a major league standout was that I wasn't good enough to make the grade when I was young and had the opportunity."

Kraft remained at Newark until the spring of 1916. His all-round performance as the first baseman of the Newark club in 1915 caused many sports writers in the International League to stamp him as the "most improved" player of the year.

Expecting to be returned to the majors by Brooklyn in 1916, he was bitterly disappointed when the National League club permitted him to remain at Newark. His playing slumped badly as a result, and Newark traded him to Louisville of the American Association. Before the 1916 season ended, he was swapped to Milwaukee for the hard-hitting Jay Kirke.

Oddy enough, Kirke was to replace Kraft as the Fort Worth first baseman after Clarence's retirement from the game at the close of the 1924 season.

Stories have been circulated that Kraft was bothered by ailing legs and that this handicap prevented him from becoming a regular in the big leagues. He denies this, explaining his undoing didn't give him trouble until he injured a leg while stepping on a base during the 1921 season.

"My leg was bad the rest of the year," he says. "Then varicose veins developed in 1922 and gave me trouble until the start of the 1924 season. My legs were fine again, of course, in '24 when I hit the 55 home runs."

First Tagged as Pitcher

Kraft was born in Spencer County, Ind., June 9, 1887. After the usual boyhood of a farm lad and education in the rural schools, he began his diamond career as a pitcher in 1908 with Marion, in the Kentucky State League. He transferred from Marion to the McLeansboro club of the Southern Illinois League in 1910, and hurled his new team to 20 victories in 21 starts. Besides taking his regular turn on the mound, he played in the outfield and had a batting average of "about .298" for 1910.

"We had only 11 players on our roster and I had to play in the outfield a lot," he recalls.

Cleveland took Kraft in the draft, and he went to spring training camp with the Tribe in 1911. He was tagged as a pitcher by the Indians, but was unable to make the grade, and was farmed to Flint, Mich., in the Southern Michigan League, hurling and playing in the outfield there through the 1912 season.

Clarence joined New Orleans as an outfielder in 1913, but soon was farmed to Clarksdale, Miss., in the old Cotton States circuit. Six weeks later, he was recalled by New Orleans and then broke in as a first baseman. He batted .361 for the Pelicans in 1913, and his hitting caused Brooklyn to select him in the draft.

His itinerary between the time he joined Brooklyn in the spring of 1914 and the deal in which Louisville swapped him to Milwaukee in 1916 already has been related.

"It was a tough break," he reminisces, "that I didn't get to stay with the Braves after being claimed by them on waivers in '14, for, you'll remember, that was the year George Stallings led the Boston Nationals from last place in July to the pennant, then beat the Athletics four straight games in the World's Series."

Kraft became Fort Worth's shining star during that city's most prosperous baseball era—1920-1925, inclusive—when Skipper Jake Atz led his Panthers to six consecutive Texas League flags and five Dixie Series championships. Yet, strangely, Clarence's contract didn't cost the Forth Worth club a thin dime.

"In 1917," Kraft says, "I played with Wilkes-Barre, then in the New York State League. During the winter of 1917-18, Paul LaGrave, business manager at Fort Worth, 'bought' me from Wilkes-Barre with the understanding that he was to pay for me if I didn't enter military service.

"Well, I did join the Army in 1918. Then Wilkes-Barre failed to field a team in 1919, so I became a free agent. Thus, when I joined Fort Worth in the spring of 1919, I agreed to salary terms with LaGrave, and my contract actually didn't cost Fort Worth a penny."

Kraft had only a fair season in 1919, when Fort Worth lost the pennant in a split-season playoff with Shreveport, and again in 1920 when the Cats launched their sensational flag-winning streak.

It was in 1921 that Kraft started to become a nightmare for Texas League hurlers. He hit 31 homers, and on April 23, 1921, against Wichita Falls, he socked the ball out of the park three times in a single game. In 1921, he also established two Texas League fielding records that still stand—1,874 chances accepted and 1,781 putouts at first base.

In 1922, Clarence collected 32 homers, equalled that total in 1923, and then astonished the baseball world in 1924 with his 55 round-trip blows.

It was "all-or-nothing-at-all" for Kraft in his four big seasons with Fort Worth, for he was the Texas League's strikeout king as well as its home run champion in 1921, when he whiffed 89 times; in 1923 when he fanned 109 times, and in 1924 when he was turned back at the home station 107 times.

At the end of the 1924 season, he told sports writers he planned to retire from the diamond and enter business.

Few took him seriously, least of all Business Manager LaGrave, who was responsible for the success of the Fort Worth team of that era because of his shrewdness in collecting talent.

When in January, 1925, the newspapers announced Kraft had purchased a Ford automobile agency in Fort Worth and would not rejoin the club, LaGrave hastily summoned Clarence to his office and offered him a contract calling for $20,000 for two seasons, 1925 and 1926.

The offer was refused, although LaGrave, on the verge of tears, pointed out to Kraft that "you just can't do this—players just don't become successful business men." But Kraft argued that LaGrave himself was an ex-ball player who had achieved success in the business end of the game.

Kraft went through with his agency, devoting his entire time to it until he sold out in April, 1944, after taking office in January, 1943, as the Tarrant County judge.

Kraft married the former Dorothy Goessling of Kansas City, Mo., in the autumn of 1919. They have a son and two daughters.

Barfoot a Cousin to Kraft in Year He Hit 55 Homers

Clyde Barfoot, Houston's usually reliable pitching veteran of the early 1920s, was Clarence Kraft's "first cousin" during the 1924 Texas League season when the big Fort Worth first baseman established his record of 55 home runs.

Kraft slammed the horsehide over the palings five times off the deliveries of Barfoot, a righthander. The circuit clout king batted from the right side of the plate.

Clarence opened his sensational string with a round-tripper off Slim Love, Dallas southpaw, April 16. He went without a home run until May 2, but they came steadily thereafter until his fifty-fifth, off Oran O'Neal, Beaumont righthander, September 14.

He combed the offerings of righthanders for 34 homers, and collected 21 off forksiders. He made the most, 13, against Houston. Thirty-six pitchers allowed the 55 home runs. Thirty-three were hit in the home Fort Worth park.

Boone Following Old Tribe Custom

By JOHN CRONLEY

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla.

Ike Boone

Fort Worth is proceeding with celebration plans in recognition of the Cats' probable return to the Texas League throne, an honor the city last won in 1946 under the guidance of Ray Hayworth.

Although there remained little doubt about Bobby Bragan's Texans breezing through the stretch, there was still every evidence that the Panthers' Shaughnessy playoff opponents would not be known for certain until the closing days of the campaign. Tulsa and Houston are qualifying as the runner-up and third-place clubs, but the battle for the fourth notch, involving San Antonio and Shreveport, is far from completed.

A brief road crackup dimmed the title hopes of Al Vincent's Oilers, Tulsa losing four in a row after once again surging up to a serious contender's role, only two or three games behind the Cats' flying heels.

A long-shot entry in the individual hitting race, Ike Boone, continued to set a sizzling pace in his belated bid for the batting crown. Since catching fire early in August, the Cleveland shortstop optionee, now performing with Oklahoma City, has slugged better than .400.

If Ike makes the grade, he will become the third straight Texas offensive champ produced at Oklahoma City. In 1946, it was Dale Mitchell, and last season Al Rosen walked off with the prize.

41 Records Set, 15 Tied in 62-Year-Old Circuit

Fiala Handled 16 Chances at Second; Lown Hurled Loop's 72nd No-Hitter; Batters Helped by Livelier Ball

By LORIN McMULLEN
Of the Fort Worth Star-Telegram

FORT WORTH, Tex.

Bobby Bragan

Forty-one records were set and 15 were tied in last season's Texas League play, according to the official tabulation compiled by Statistician W. B. Ruggles.

The wholesale shattering of marks in the 62-year-old circuit was due, in part, to a livelier ball, but some of the exceptional feats pertained to pitching and fielding, too, supporting the contention that play was generally improved, especially in the postwar period.

Among the noteworthy recordings was a single-game, most-chances-handled at second base record by Fort Worth's Walter Fiala, who had seven put-outs and nine assists against Beaumont, August 25. Six players shared the old mark of 15.

The Fort Worth catcher-manager, Bobby Bragan, went through the year playing 117 games without a passed ball, a mark tied by Dan Baich of San Antonio, but the Mission performed in only 92 tilts.

Omar (Turk) Lown's no-hit game against Tulsa, August 31, was the seventy-second full-length Texas League no-hit game and brought Fort Worth within one of Dallas' all-time record of 13 zero-zero games.

Most important general league record was the season total of 1,677 errors, lowering the 1947 mark of 1,702. The total of six triple plays tied the best previous figure set in 1927.

Among other general club records:

Fort Worth and Dallas extended their joint record for league membership to 53 seasons.

Beaumont made its record total of finishing last 12 years.

Fort Worth set at five the record for most times finishing the regular season first, but losing in the playoffs.

Fort Worth ran its old mark for most all-time games won in the Texas League to 3,884. (Counting South Texas League play, Houston has 3,912.)

Fort Worth broke its own record (1920 and 1924) of winning road games —53.

Fort Worth increased from six to seven its most years winning 100 or more games.

Fort Worth upped to 63-40 its record for winning most playoff games.

In the individual field the Cats' Fiala, who has been promoted to Montreal, tied at two years the record for most seasons and most consecutive seasons leading in sacrifices. He advanced mates 47 times.

Carl Erskine, who left the Cats in mid-season for Brooklyn, tied a bases-on-balls mark when he issued 14 to Shreveport on June 11. Strangely enough, he beat the Sports, 19 to 0.

141 Free Tickets for Serena

Other individual feats follow:

By drawing 141 bases on balls in 151 games, Bill Serena of Dallas, now with the Cubs, broke Frank Edington's old mark set in 1925. Cal Abrams of Fort Worth and Blas Monaco of Dallas, however, were believed to have posted the best BOB average in games played. Their figures were 1.13 and 1.03, respectively.

Jerry Witte of Dallas struck out 132 times, beating the 121 whiffs posted by Roy Hartsfield in 1948.

Bill Sarni of Shreveport allowed only 19 stolen bases in 92 games, erasing from the books Ray Hayworth's 20 in 88 at Shreveport in 1928.

Serena had 600 chances at third base, believed to be an all-time high as there has been a question of the recorded 648 credited to Al Odell of San Antonio in 1915.

Bobby Wilkins, Shreveport shortstop, handled 159 consecutive chances without error, besting Tony York's 150. It ran from June 9 to July 6.

Serena and Ransom Jackson of Oklahoma City both exceeded the previous season number of double plays for third basemen. The Eagle star had 55, Jackson 49.

There were some notable "near misses," including the achievement of Oklahoma City's Herb Conyers and Fort Worth's Bob Bundy, two of the few to make 200 hits their first year in the league.

Following are some batting marks, as compared to other years:

Batting—Herbert Conyers (OC), .355, best since Lou Novikoff's .368 in 1939.

Run Scoring—Milt Nielsen (OC) 134, best since Zeke Bonura's 141 in 1933.

Safe Hits—Conyers (OC) 214, best since Chester Morgan's 216 in 1934.

Total Bases—Jerome Witte (Ds) 332, best since Beau Bell's 348 in 1934.

Two-Base Hits—Conyers 52, best since Homer Peel's 52 in 1932.

Three-Base Hits—John Lane (Tl), Ransom Jackson (OC), Tom Upton (Bt), 13, best since Harold Epps' and David Pluss' 15 in 1947.

Home Runs—Witte 50, best since Clarence Kraft's 55 in 1924.

Extra Bases—Witte 177, best since Kraft's 211 in 1924.

Stolen Bases—Preston Ward (FW) 29, an unusually low mark.

Runs-Batted-In—Russell Burns (Tl), 153, best since Ed Konetchy's 166 in 1925.

Bundy's .350 Was 50 Points Better Than Previous High

DALLAS, Tex.—Bob Bundy, Fort Worth infielder-outfielder who sat out the last few days of the regular season to nurse an ailing foot and was unable to battle Herb Conyers for the league batting title, nevertheless posted a season's average which was 50 points better than any previous mark he registered in O. B.

Bundy, spending his fourth year in professional ranks, trailed Conyers by five points, .355 to .350. Previously his best mark was .300, fashioned with Pueblo (Western) in 1947. Bob broke into O. B. with Santa Barbara (California) in 1946, hitting .269. After a season with Pueblo, he went on the disabled list for most of the 1948 campaign, participating in only 40 games for Idaho Falls (Pioneer) and hitting .281.

RUTH UNSURPASSED AS IDOL OF CROWDS

BY LAWTON CARVER.
International News Service Sports Writer.

NEW YORK, Aug. 16.—No man in baseball history before or since the heyday of Babe Ruth came close to attaining the degree of idolatry among fans, old and young, which was accorded this greatest of all home run hitters.

Ruth died at 7:01 p. m. Monday in a New York hospital after a two-year illness.

The records he set are the ones by which comparisons are made but beyond this peculiar talent for slugging he was more colorful in his performance than nearly any other player and a contradiction to the accepted standard.

BABE RUTH.

The Babe—as he was known to the millions—was born at Baltimore Feb. 6, 1895. His early days are shrouded in oblivion, perhaps mercifully, but he started his career as an inmate of and pitcher for an industrial school managed by the Xaverian brothers at Baltimore.

From that somber beginning he came on to the highest salary ever paid a player. His signing of contracts and even one of his stomach-aches were front page news while he rode the crest.

As a companion piece to his talent, he had an abiding gameness under fire that enabled him to be known among the great clutch hitters, a man who could call his shots as he did against the Chicago Cubs in one World Series.

He built up thrills for the fans through the years, first as a pitcher for the Boston Red Sox, then as the Yankee fence-buster and his glamour dominated the baseball scene.

Yet, he was scarcely the athlete of classic mold. He was fat-faced, thick through the middle, and his ponderous body was supported by tiny ankles and feet.

He walked with a pigeon-toed, mincing gait. In action he demonstrated the fine co-ordination of his mind and ungainly body, with performances that caused even other baseball players to watch in awe.

NEVER THREW TO THE WRONG BASE.

It was a thrilling spectacle even to see him strike out. He wielded baseball's biggest bat, gripped at the very end of the handle, and nearly always aimed at another home run.

Ruth swung in a great manacing arc that meant a lost ball if he connected properly. If he missed, his frustration was almost equally dramatic.

However, he could run, field and throw with surprising agility. Part of his legend centered around the fact or fiction that he never threw to the wrong base in his entire career, which started with the Baltimore Orioles in 1914.

He went to the Red Sox as a pitcher that same year, with slight raise in his salary of $600. He came to the Yankees in 1920 for a reported sales price of $120,000—an astounding figure at that time—and Yankee Stadium came to be known as "the house that Ruth built."

The fans flocked to see this ex-pitcher hit home runs and in 1927 when he broke his own record to set the one that still stands, front pages the nation over heralded the news that he had hit his 60th home run.

In 1930 and 1931, the one-time orphan was paid $80,000 a season by the late Col. Jake Ruppert, Yankee owner, and that salary mark still is in the baseball archives for others to shoot at.

He previously had been paid $70,000 for three years, and for five seasons prior to that stretch had received $52,000 a year.

Yet, his frolicking might have left him destitute at the finish of his reign as the unchallenged monarch of home runs, but for the intercession of friends.

SALARY WAS CLOSE TO MILLION DOLLARS.

He began to slip in 1932, and his salary was shaved to $75,000—then to $52,000 and finally, in 1934, to $35,000, when he left the Yankees. He went to the Boston Braves for $40,000 in 1935, but left without finishing out the season.

He was through as an active player and took only one more brief fling at the game, when he signed as a coach and gate attraction with the Brooklyn Dodgers in 1938.

He left behind an unapproached record of 714 home runs during his 22 years in the majors, plus a record total of 15 in the World Series. He set innumerable records.

The Babe was paid close to a million dollars in salary and made another half million or more from other sources because of his fame.

He savaged enough to live quietly and in good circumstances with his family, surrounded by his trophies, in a Riverside Drive apartment, but he still was unhappy.

He devoted himself to golf and to bowling, made many personal appearances and had scores of cronies, but remained unhappy over his failure at a chance as manager of a major league baseball club.

His glamour, popularity and baseball playing talents earned for him nearly everything that he might have desired otherwise except a place in the game when he no longer could hit home runs.

The baseball people questioned his temperament. They recalled his escapades as a player. He was fined $5,000 by the late Miller Huggins, then Yankee manager, and Owner Ruppert made the fine stick.

The Babe reportedly dropped $90,000 playing the races one season and was forced to borrow on his salary for the following year.

He was ill on several occasions, mainly with stomach disorders brought on by excesses.

Then when he was through as the great and glamorous player, he missed his big chance to become the eventual manager of the Yankees themselves. Col. Ruppert offered him management of the New York Farm Club at Newark, in the International League, as a test.

Ruth bellowed "no." It would be the Yankees or nothing, despite the successes of Joe McCarthy—and it was nothing, except

Yanks Hold 10th World Title After Beating Cardinals, 4-1

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 12 (AP).—The scattered pieces of the busted St. Louis Cardinal bubble were being swept up for shipment to the nearest museum Tuesday as Frankie Crosetti was handed the bouquets and half a dozen Redbirds tried on sets of goat horns from the late lamented World Series.

One and all agreed no blockbuster ever went off any louder than the explosion of the Cardinal myth in this year's Fall classic. When the New York Yankees wound it up on Bill Dickey's homer to win four games to one for the tenth world championship in their history, the Cards were as well beaten as the parlor rug in Spring housecleaning.

Miss Moore, Slaughter.

If ever a club beat itself, this year's Cardinals fit the picture. Mostly, they missed Terry Moore and Enos Slaughter in the outfield. After the second game, last Wednesday, which Mort Cooper won with a magnificent competitive performance, they folded up like a straw hat that's been sat on. As running specialists they were practically stationary. They appeared to be only going through the motions in the fourth game on Sunday. And in Monday's convincer they had Spud Chandler on the ropes in six of nine innings, yet failed to throw a big punch and were put on ice for keeps by a 2-0 score on ancient Dickey's two-run sixth inning homer, which gave him a record of having been on eight series winning clubs since 1928.

And while the Cards were collapsing all over the place like the pins in a bowling alley, the Yankees reminded the folks that when you're talking about teams that don't beat themselves, the Bombers are better than green hands. They may have been overconfident last year, but they went at it like business men in this set. The result was while the Cards were making errors that cost them two games, and almost ruined a third, the Yanks got to the paying teller's window for the seventh time in eight series tries since 1932.

Dickey was right up there in the voting for the series hero's spot, because in addition to catching five tough games, he got four of his five hits with men on bases and three of the four brought ducks home off the pond. So was Joe Gordon up there, for his first game homer and his all-around second-base magic; and Rookie Bill Johnson, whose bat was the loudest of them all, and Spud Chandler who chalked up two pitching victories.

Crosetti a Hero.

But the majority of the boys and girls, while well divided on which Card was the No. 1 goat, pointed to the old guy at short, Frank Crosetti of the San Francisco Crosettis as the top hero. He's 33 and before the series one fellow said he was so banged up they had to tie him together with strips of tape and little pieces of wire. In fact, he wasn't supposed to be a Yankee regular at all this year, but Joe McCarthy finally had to send out the alarm for him to take over.

So he did. And going into the series, the smart boys said shortstop was the weak link. Well, chums, it was weak like Joe Louis. Frankie's base running was the big factor in the first game win. He scored the only run in the losing second game. He was one of the key men in the big five-run eighth inning that won the third game—the batter the Cards had to walk with one away and runners on first and third so they'd have a play at any base.

His stop back of second on Walker Cooper's hit in the eighth inning of the fourth game, and the way he held Stan Musial at second on the play, was the big break of the tilt—the spot Manager McCarthy said was the turning point of the game. And Monday he came up with three chances he had absolutely no right to get to haul Chandler out of the stew. He hit in four of the five games, scored in three, and was a defensive brick wall.

He told a couple of pals before the series that he expected this was going to be his last Fall classic. Well, he bowed out with the bells ringing.

Four Teammates Tagged by Cupid ∴ at Home Plate in Fort Worth

FOUR MEMBERS of the Fort Worth Texas League ats were tagged by Dan Cupid at home plate, ugust 21, in what is believed to be the first mul- ple wedding ever conducted in a baseball park. he ceremonies were held in Fort Worth's La rave Field before a crowd of 9,817. Wed at an aborately decorated home plate altar were tcher John Rutherford and Miss Martha Jo Day of Dayton, Tenn.; Second Baseman Joe Torpey and Miss Marilee Cook of Pueblo, Colo.; Shortstop Russ Rose and Miss Patricia Ann Thayer of Van Nuys, Calif., and Third Baseman Don Hoak and Miss Phyllis Warner of Coudersport, Pa. Following the ceremonies, the players bussed their brides and hustled into uniform for the game, won by the Cats, 6 to 4, over Oklahoma City. Photo at left shows Rutherford and his bride walking throu an arch of bats to the altar; (center) general vi of the ceremonies as Rose and Miss Thayer take vows, with the Hoak group at left and Rutherf and Torpey parties at right, and (right) Tor and Miss Cook being wed by Judge Thomas Ren with Manager Bobby Bragan the best man Miss Lorraine Elliott the bridesmaid.

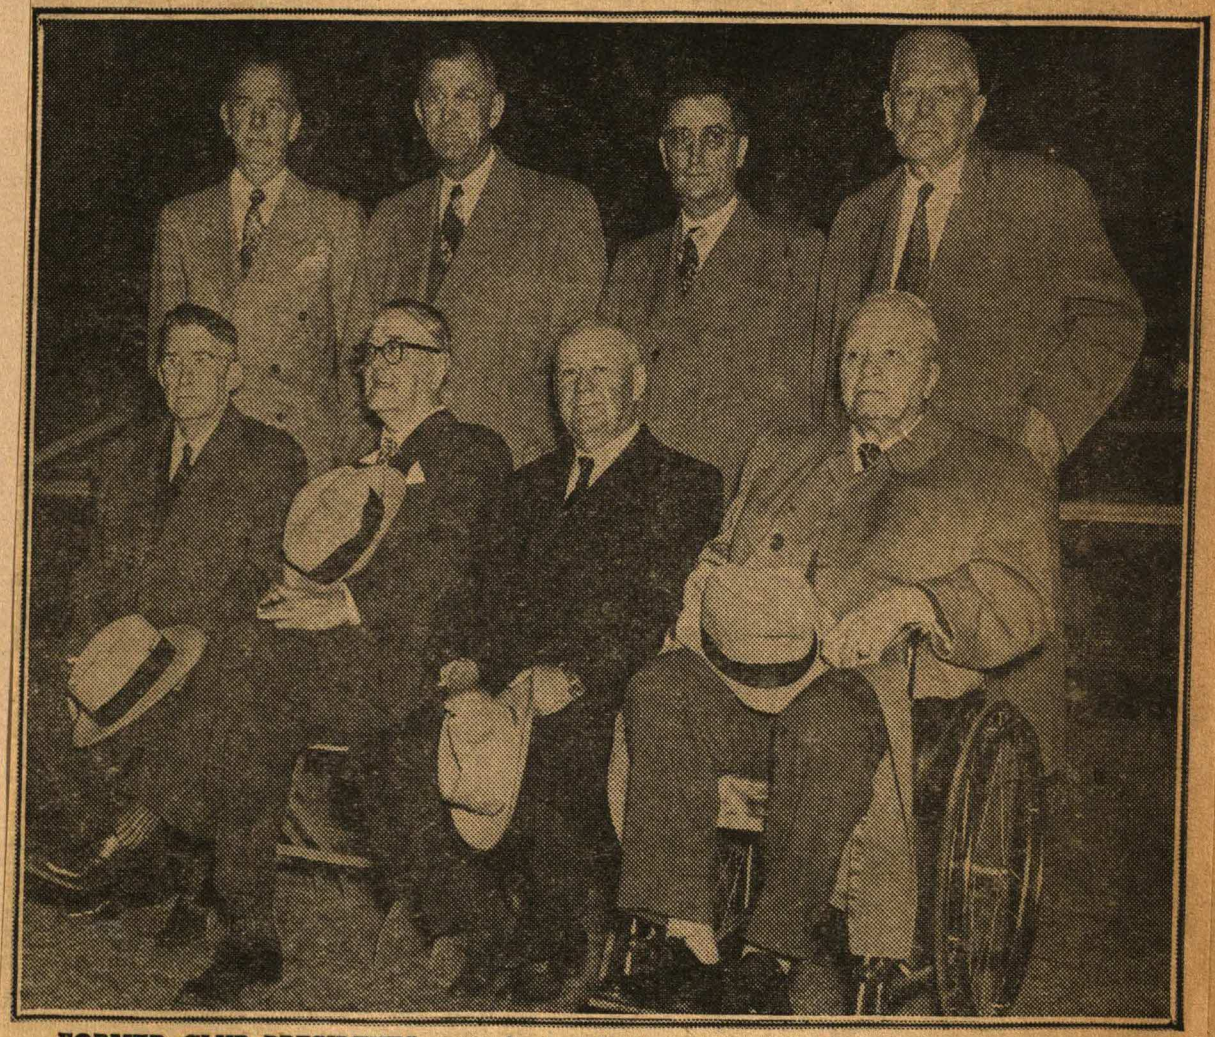
Cat Prexies Honored at Ft. Worth



FORMER CLUB PRESIDENTS were honored at opening-night ceremonies at Fort Worth, April 12, including 90-year-old Newton H. Lassiter, who organized the Cats when the Texas League was started in 1888. Though bed-ridden for six months by a fall, Lassiter insisted on coming to the show. He served as club president from 1892 to 1895 and as league president in 1903. Left to right, front row—Ted Robinson, J. Walter Morris, Stanley A. Thompson and Lassiter. Back row—Roy A. Westbrook, Clarence Kraft, John A. Reeves (incumbent) and Dr. Webb Walker. The ninth living president, Will K. Stripling, was unable to attend because of illness.

Operation of a Ball Club

No. 6--The Grass-Cutters

By MILT WOODARD

The groundskeeper is an important asset to a ball club, and the profession requires special skills. This is the sixth of a series prepared by Milt Woodard, former baseball writer who for the past two years was general manager of clubs at Grand Rapids, Mich., and Hot Springs, Ark., and now is with the Chicago White Sox.

Milt Woodard

As in most phases of club operation, it takes work, work and more of it to become a successful groundskeeper. True, there are hundreds of short cuts and tricks to the trade, but none is a substitute for real, honest labor.

In the major leagues, where a perfect field is a necessity, the Bossard family of Cleveland and the Chicago White Sox received its acclaim chiefly on hard work. In the minor leagues, where hours and assistance are limited, the groundskeeper has just as tremendous a task, even if his product isn't of the billiard-table smoothness of the majors.

With budgets allowing only between $30 and $50 weekly for groundskeepers' salaries, there are few top journeymen in the low minors. As a result, the owner or business manager often must become a supervising groundskeeper, directing the efforts of one or two common laborers.

As far as a baseball groundskeeper is concerned, a diamond is divided into four areas: (1) The infield; (2) the skinned portion outlined by the base lines; (3) the outfield, and (4) the pitcher's mound and batter's box. Of the four, the skinned portion creates the biggest problem and is the most important for a well-kept field.

The skinned portion should be sandy enough to absorb heavy downpours before game-time, yet must contain enough black dirt to hold firm after a prolonged dry spell. Often a river-bottom dirt can be obtained from truckers, usually at a cost of about $2 a yard, and must be applied frequently to those low spots created by wash-outs from rain.

Nail-Drag—Groundskeeper's Friend

Once the right texture is obtained, it must be "worked" daily to remain loose and uncaked. A rake will suffice, but most groundskeepers have discovered the secret of the "nail-drag." It's simply a couple of long two-by-six boards, from which ten-penny nails protrude. It's dragged across the infield with ropes, the nails biting into the ground and loosening the earth. Emil Bossard, the groundskeeping genius of the Indians, claims the nail-drag is the finest tool in the profession.

A "float," usually a large rubber, steel or hair mat, follows in the wake of the nail drag. Coupled with the retrieving of small rocks which work to the surface during a hard rain, the screening of the dirt at mid-season, the nail-drag and float can keep an infield in excellent shape if used often and strenuously enough.

The infield terrain should be rolled frequently during the spring, and should be cleared of all weeds and crab-grass. The outfield expanse needs only several goings-over with a large roller, preferably a day or two after a heavy spring rain when the ground is firm but not hard.

The sprinkling of a field, of course, is of vital importance, especially during July and August. Scientists claim there is no truth to the belief that grass can be "burned" when watered during a noon-day sun, but most baseball people prefer early-morning or late-afternoon sprinkling. If the team is out of town for several days, the field can be mildly flooded with an all-night sprinkling, especially during the dry season.

New Mound Should Be Built Each Spring

The pitcher's mound should be built almost entirely of a "gumbo" clay, and should be covered in case of a rain during or before a ball game. The clay should be packed hard and firm, and should be "alive." For that reason, a new clay mound should be built each spring.

The batter's box should also be treated with clay, but should contain enough dirt and sand to permit a slide at home plate. It, too, should be covered in case of rain, since clay becomes sticky and slow-drying when moist.

Most minor league clubs, at least those under Class AA, cannot afford an infield canvas. They get along with two squares of tarpaulin, one to cover the pitcher's mound and the other the batter's box. One of the most recent innovations in the groundskeeping profession is a glass tarpaulin introduced at Municipal Stadium in Cleveland last season. The tarpaulin can be laid in three minutes and removed in six. It is composed of glass filament yarns, each one-seventh the thickness of a human hair. It is covered with a plastic coating, is waterproof, fireproof and does not adhere to dirt. Unlike a canvas tarpaulin which may triple its weight in wet weather, the glass covering is of a constant weight and can be handled by the same number of workmen at all times.

A groundskeeper can greatly aid the home team with those sly tricks known to his profession. If the visiting club is fast, he can slope the foul lines toward the dugout; thus their bunts will consistently roll foul. If they specialize in stolen bases, he can loosen the dirt off first base to a point where they get nothing but poor starts toward second.

The groundskeeper's chief concern should be to have his field ready, no matter how sudden or torrential the downpour before game-time. He may have to dry up puddles off the skinned portion with burning gasoline. At Clarksdale, Miss., last year, an airplane was used for the same purpose, the "wash" from the propeller drying off the field in short order.

But for all the tricks, all the short cuts and all the mechanical devices available, there's really only one paramount factor in good groundskeeping. That's hard work.

NEXT WEEK—LEARN OF WORKING AGREEMENTS

Bossard Tenth Man Against Yankees

Emil Bossard

There never will be anything about it in the record books, but many a Cleveland victory over the murderous Yankees of the Ruth-Gehrig era could be credited to Emil Bossard, the famed groundskeeper of the Indians.

Four or five days before the Yankees visited Cleveland, the infields at both League Park and Municipal Stadium would undergo a complete drought. When the Yankees arrived, the Cleveland infields were as hard as icebergs and twice as treacherous. Ground balls would streak over the hard surfaces like scared jack rabbits.

The advantage was all Cleveland's. The Yankees, devoted as they were to distance, seldom bounced to the infield in their lust for the extra-base hit. But the Indians, possessed only of average power, fired through many an infield single which, except for Bossard, would have been easy outs.

Operation of a Ball Club

No. 8--Box Seats

By MILT WOODARD

The varied and intricate approaches to selling tickets in advance, in the majors or minors, in order to get money in the till early are outlined by Milt Woodard, former baseball writer who has been business manager at Grand Rapids, Mich., and Hot Springs, Ark., the last two years. This is the eighth of a series of articles on front office operations.

Milt Woodard

Box seats have become the "gravy seats" of club operation. They not only command the highest prices, but usually the league and visiting club's percentages of the gate receipts are based on general admission prices alone. Thus, a club which may realize less than 60 per cent profit on a general admission can get more than 70 per cent profit on a box seat.

Further, the advance sale of season box seats is the best, and often sole, means of flushing a club's treasury during those lean months of spring training. As a result, almost every club—from the smallest "D" to the Yankees and Indians—offers a season box-seat "special" to their fans.

Although the majors have various "package" deals made possible by large office staffs, the minors have to be content with a simplified season-seat sale. While there are other variations, they usually fall into two kinds:

(1) The flat-price system, whereby the fan pays a set amount—say $50—for use of the box seat throughout the season.

(2) The lease system, whereby a fan pays a nominal sum—say $15—for the use of the seat, but must pay the general admission price in order to get into the ball park and thence to his seat.

Shortcomings in Box Seat Plans

There are shortcomings to either plan. On the flat-price system, the ball club pays full taxes on the number of dates on its schedule; not on just the sale price of the season box. That means it has to pay close to 30 per cent amusement tax instead of the established 20.

On the lease arrangement, a patron could occupy his seat just twice and thus pay only $17 for the privilege of holding a seat which, over the season, should have brought the club $60 or more.

A popular and sensible variation of the "lease" system is to include the purchase of 40 or 50 general admission tickets as a part of the sale of each box seat. These general admission tickets can be purveyed in book form—a small booklet containing from ten to 20 tickets and rainchecks. Thus, the club is assured the box seat will be occupied, or paid for, at least 40 or 50 times during the season.

Simplicity should be the keynote in the numerical and alphabetical arrangements of box seats. A well-lettered and numbered arrangement could eliminate one or more ushers if simple enough to the fans.

Most parks in the lower minors get along with one or two ushers, or do away with them entirely. Generally they are used only in the box seat section, and are distinguished by a badge, cap or full uniform.

Ushers usually can be recruited from the town high school or college, and every effort should be made to obtain as neat-appearing and as conscientious young men as possible. Their pay ranges from $1 to $3 a night in the minors, and averages close to $4 a game in the majors.

Usherettes Sometimes Preferred to Men

The usherettes, if the right ones come along, are sometimes preferred to the usher. The "chiselers," who buy general admissions tickets and attempt to sit in boxes, usually will vacate the usurped seats more quickly when confronted by an usherette than by an usher. The best places to obtain either young ladies or young men as ushers is through the high school or college advisers of Hi-Y's, girls' clubs and school employment committees.

The advance sale of box seats for a single game is often neglected in the minors. It guarantees the fan the best seat available, and there are many patrons who won't attend a game without such assurance. Also, it assures the club of a seat sale, no matter how threatening the weather at game-time.

It is usually a simple matter to have a downtown drug store, restaurant, cigar store or sporting goods firm handle the advance sale free of charge. The business men figure their trouble is worth the flow of people coming into their stores for the purchase of tickets. They believe the fan, soon or later, also will make the store his headquarters for the purchase of cigars, a meal or maybe a football for the youngsters at Christmas.

On advance sales, each set of box seats should be enclosed in a small "ticket envelope." Baseball clubs can obtain such envelopes free of charge by writing THE SPORTING NEWS, and the resulting package—tickets enclosed within a small, neat envelope—definitely gives a big league touch to a minor league ticket operation.

Frain Ended Ushers' Box Seat Racket

Twenty-five years ago, the box seat was one of the most abused institutions in baseball. For a ten-cent tip, almost any usher in a major league park would move a grandstand customer into the best box seat in the house. Arguments were frequent between the legitimate seat-holder and the fan who was assigned the seat for a dime bribe.

Finally, one of the ushers confronted the late William Wrigley, then owner of the Chicago Cubs.

"Mr. Wrigley," he said, "let me take charge of your ushers. As it is now, they're cutting in on your racket. They seat dollar customers in box seats for a ten-cent drag. It's hurting you and it's hurting baseball."

Wrigley was convinced. He gave the young man the job. That young man was Andy Frain, now head of the biggest ushering system in the world. Frain's men handle the crowds at Wrigley Field, Comiskey Park, the Stadium and other Chicago sports arenas, and he has established his system in Los Angeles, Brooklyn, Cleveland, Louisville and other major sports centers.

No. 11--Transportation

By MILT WOODARD

Editor's Note: How players get around—from city to city in their leagues, that is—and how the athletes feel about different kinds of transportation, is outlined in this, the eleventh, installment of the series by Milt Woodard, former Chicago baseball writer who put in the last two years as general manager at Grand Rapids, Mich., and Hot Springs, Ark.

Milt Woodard

You've seen your ball players at home. Now, how do they live, sleep and travel on the road?

Most minor circuits under Class AA are "bus leagues." Their bus jumps range from a few miles to the 500-odd which separate Muskegon, Mich., and Charleston, W. Va., in the Central League. Some travel in streamlined, air-conditioned coaches; others bounce over the country in dilapidated, hard-seated jobs that should have been retired to auto graveyards years ago.

Generally, teams travel as often by night as by day. Most managers hold religiously to the old baseball rule of "get to the scene of the next game immediately." They feel a player will be better able to play in the evening after riding all night and sleeping all day than to reverse the traveling procedure.

Approximately half the clubs in Organized Ball own their own buses, the others charter them from local bus companies. Usually, the club pays from 25 to 40 cents a mile, as well as the traveling expenses of the driver. A chartered bus will annually cost between $2,000 and $3,500, depending upon the mileage rate and size of the league's territory.

Those clubs owning their own buses are confronted with such problems and expenses as insurance, repairs, gas, oil and drivers. In lower classifications, often a manager or player is assigned the bus-driving job. Any amount over $100 monthly paid a player for driving a bus shall, by National Association rules, count against the club's salary limit. This eliminates the abuse of paying the player an excessive amount as a bus driver in lieu of his salary as a player, and not having it count in the club's salary limit.

No matter how many dents in fenders and knocks in the motor, the players' main interest in a bus starts and ends with its seats. Because of night travel, the bus with reclining seats is most desired by the player. There are still too many of the straight-backed seats in baseball buses, players contend.

First Class Travel in Majors

In the high minors and majors, teams travel chiefly by train and sometimes by plane. It's first-class travel. The squad is assigned one or two Pullman cars, and all players as often as not sleep in lowers. The manager and No. 1 coach usually take the drawing room.

In the majors and high minors, the problems of travel are handled by the traveling secretary, facetiously known as the "dean of men." He arranges transportation, assigns berths, and hotel rooms, passes out meal money, entertains newspapermen, checks turnstiles, double-checks the equipment trunks and arranges spring training details.

Throughout baseball, players usually sleep two to a room and a concerted effort is made to obtain individual beds for the men. Rates are obtained at hotels, ranging from about $3.50 in the majors to $2 per man in the low minors. The manager is usually assigned a hotel suite in the majors and single rooms in the minors.

All expenses are paid by the club during spring training, including first-class transportation from the player's home to the training camp. The majors allow each player $25 a week for such incidentals as laundry and tips. In the minors, the incidentals are handled on a much smaller scale, usually $5 or less a week.

At the close of the season, each player is responsible for his transportation home, unless otherwise stipulated in his contract. If a rookie is released during spring training, many clubs pay his transportation home, inasmuch as he did not collect a salary check during the conditioning period.

NEXT WEEK — STANDING ROOM ONLY

Costs Club $800 a Day on Road

Major league clubs average between $65,000 and $70,000 annually for traveling expenses—hotels, meal money, railroad fare and incidentals. Broken down further, that would be more than $800 a day and an average of close to $30 a player.

On the other extreme, a Class C club can travel for as little as $7,000 for the entire season. That's about $100 a day or around $6 per man. Thus, the upkeep of a major leaguer on the road is about five times as great as that of a youngster breaking into baseball.

In the low minors, the cost per player is distributed almost equally among hotels, meal money and bus transportation. In the majors, more than half the traveling expenses is invested in railroad or plane fares.

No. 3--Spring Training

By MILT WOODARD

In another month, thoughts of all baseball will turn to spring training. How do the clubs prepare for the annual exodus to the Southland? How much does the conditioning cost? Here are some of the answers, given by Milt Woodard, former baseball writer who the past two years has been general manager of baseball clubs at Grand Rapids, Mich., and Hot Springs, Ark. This is the third of a series.

Milt Woodard

Each March, some 9,000 hopeful athletes migrate into the deep and not-so-deep South for the Big Conditioner of Baseball, known as spring training. More than a million dollars is spent in this annual process of preparing youth and men for the national game.

To the majors and high minors, spring training is usually a six-week junket involving myriad barnstorming tours up and down and over the Southland. In the lower minors, it's cut to an average of about 20 days. In all instances, players average from three to six hours of conditioning daily.

Spring training, by and large, is not profitable beyond the fact that it is necessary to the conditioning of the athlete and that it does afford an invaluable medium of publicity. Otherwise, all but a few clubs fail to break even on their exhibition tour and the players, en tote, fail to draw a pay check until the season starts.

But no one, from club owners to the most frugal player, ever complains about spring training.

The majors and AAA and AA clubs concentrate their training in Florida and California. The rest string along the Southland, some of them training singly in small towns and others sharing facilities with one or two other clubs, usually co-members of their farm system.

The biggest and most pretentious, of course, is the Dodger training center at Vero Beach, Fla. There the majority of the clubs in the Dodger system are trained, the cost of which is pro-rated among the clubs represented.

Expenses to Base Met by Club

According to the uniform player contract approved by the majors as well as by the National Association, the club must pay the Pullman transportation and expenses of a player from his home town to the training base. Meal money en route usually is established at one dollar a day over that paid by the club during the regular season.

During spring training, players generally are housed at a hotel which gives special rates ranging from $1.50 to $3.50 a day for each man. They usually sleep two to a room, but an effort is made to provide an individual bed for every player.

A very few clubs issue meal money during spring training, thus allowing the player to eat as little and wherever he likes. This is generally frowned upon, however, and with good reason. Too often, under a meal money arrangement, the player will spend too little on food in order to have money for other items.

Usually the players eat in the hotel dining room or a restaurant nearby. They either sign checks or order from a special menu, for which the club pays approximately $3.50 a day for each man. Tips usually are paid by the club.

For geographic and publicity reasons, most teams in Organized Ball train away from home. Even if the home city is in the South, most baseball operators feel it is advantageous to train away from home and bring in the club, new and unseen, on opening day. Apparently a baseball prospect looks more promising away from home.

Cost of spring training ranges from approximately $2,000 to $5,000 for clubs below Double-A, and can easily reach five figures in AAA and the majors if the club fails to draw in exhibition games.

Exhibition Games Pay Bill—Sometimes

After a week or more of preliminary work, the club is ready for an exhibition schedule, average about 38 games in the majors to a half dozen in the low minors. Many of the northern teams make their homeward journey in company with another club in approximately the same classification, playing nightly in small towns en route.

If the club plays in bus leagues, as do the majority in the minors, the management usually sends its own bus to spring training to handle transportation en route home. The club attempts to arrive at its home city a day or two before the season starts in order to work out on the home diamond.

If there are any profits from exhibition games, the contending teams usually split 50-50 after expenses. When a club visits a training base of another for an exhibition game, it sometimes contracts for 60 per cent of the net. There are other formulae for the divvy of exhibition gates, but usually it works out 50-50.

Most club officials attempt to have one or more members of the home-town press present for spring training. If prosperous, the club will offer to pay all of the newspaperman's expenses. Otherwise, it usually will pick up the hotel and meal bills.

NEXT WEEK — MEAL MONEY, OR WHAT PRICE SIRLOIN?

Anson Started It, McGraw Developed It

Adrian (Pop) Anson introduced spring training to baseball when he took a dozen of his Chicago Nationals, including Billy Sunday, to Hot Springs, Ark., for pre-season workouts. Ten years later the Baltimore Orioles set up camp at Macon, Ga., and the New York Giants tried the new-fangled venture at Jacksonville, Fla. Now it's as much a part of baseball as the hotdog.

Major league owners estimate spring training costs them $500 a man. The St. Louis Cardinals in 1946 figured the costs of training the Redbirds and their farm clubs would run close to $250,000.

John McGraw and his Giants were one of the first teams in the majors to invade California for spring training, conditioning at Los Angeles in 1907.

No. 4--Meal Money

By MILT WOODARD

Many fans entertain the idea they could run a ball club. Perhaps they could, but what would they do about feeding the baseball player—no small item in itself? Here's how Organized Baseball handles the meal problem, presented by Milt Woodard, former Chicago baseball writer who the past two years has been general manager of clubs at Grand Rapids, Mich., and Hot Springs, Ark. This is the fourth of a series.

Milt Woodard

The old phrase, "Eating himself out of the league," was coined more from truth than from poetry. Many a player, low on will power when it came to pushing away from the festive board, has cut his playing time in the majors by several years because of overweight and resulting slowness afoot.

Spring training is probably the most dangerous period for the hungrier athlete. He's back on the steak circuit after a winter of plain, ordinary home cooking. Some players, during spring training, have been known to eat $10 and $12 worth of food at one sitting. It's rough on the ball club's treasury and it's rougher on the player's waistline.

Once the season starts, the club is obligated only to the player's expenses while on the road. Meals are handled in two ways. In some towns, the player signs checks for all meals at the hotel dining room where the club is quartered. In others, where the food or service is inadequate or the prices too high, each player is given a set amount of meal money each day, ranging from $2 in Class D to $6.50 in the majors.

Several years ago, the White Sox made Boston a "meal money" town because of the high prices and poor food at a hotel they since have vacated. Most of the players ate breakfast at a small beanery across the street.

One morning a burly outfielder, noted for his thrift, sat down in the Boston beanery before a repast of cereal and coffee; nothing else.

"Eating light today?" one of his teammates asked.

"Never have more than this at breakfast," the thrifty outfielder replied. "This is my small meal."

Two days later the White Sox were in New York, where the players signed meal checks at the hotel. The same breakfast-hating outfielder was seated before his morning repast. In front of him were orange juice, cereal, three eggs, a rasher of bacon, cottage fried potatoes, stewed figs, toast, sweet rolls, a side order of French toast and a pot of coffee.

It was his "small meal" . . . when he picked up the check.

But generally the ball player of today eats up to, and beyond, his meal money allotment. They, as well as their employers, realize the value of sufficient nourishment, and more often than not it's a problem of overeating rather than undereating.

Meal Handouts Range From $2 to $6.50

Meal money usually is established by the league, and varies with each classification. Baseball people believe it is important that all teams in a given league have the same meal-money allotment, thus eliminating the opportunity of a club to evade the salary limit by doubling or trebling the standard meal moneys to its players.

Generally, the daily meal allotment for clubs in Organized Ball ranges as follows:

Class D—$2.00, Class C—$2.50, Class B—$3.00, Class A—$3.50, Class AA—$4.00 to $4.50, Class AAA—$4.50 to $5.50, and Majors—$5.00 to $6.50.

In minor leagues where the daily meal money is below $3.00, the manager usually is given double the amount of the players.

With night baseball predominating in the minors, and becoming more and more evident in the majors, the player's big meal comes around midnight. In many minor league towns, certain restaurants allow a discount—usually ten per cent—for those visiting teams which regularly patronize their establishments.

NEXT WEEK—HOW THEY LOOK, UNIFORMS

Hockey Player Champion Squeezer

"When it comes to saving a buck on a meal, the hockey player is the champion of all," claims Bill Tobin, president of the Chicago Black Hawks of the National Hockey League. "A ball player can't touch him.

"Like in baseball, we give meal money to our players while on the road," Tobin continued. "Some years ago we had a defenseman named Levinsky, who came from Toronto and really hated to part with that meal money, especially if he had to pay those dining-car prices. It broke his heart.

"So whenever we'd go to Montreal from Chicago, his wife would pack him a half dozen sandwiches to eat on the train. We'd arrive at Toronto enroute, and who'd be at the station but Levinsky's father with another package of sandwiches. He had an aunt in Montreal who'd see him off with another bundle of lunch, and his dad would again be on hand at Toronto with enough groceries to get Levinsky back to Chicago.

"From Chicago to Montreal and back without stepping into the dining car! Can baseball tie that?"

Operation of a Ball Club

No. 12--Standing Room Only

By MILT WOODARD

Editor's Note: When more people want to attend a game than the park can accommodate with seats, the management has to resort to ways and means of turning away customers who might not return, if disappointed. How the "Standing Room Only" device is used in providing for more cash customers is explained in this twelfth article in the series by Milt Woodard, former Chicago sports writer who put in two years as business manager at Grand Rapids, Mich., and Hot Springs, Ark.

Milt Woodard

The problem of handling an overflow crowd is the most hectic, but nevertheless happiest in baseball. True, it comes too seldom, but, when it does, the entire operation should be ready for it.

It's traditional in baseball never to turn a customer away if a seat or standing room can be found for him. In the minors, "standing room" is a loose term which can apply to the length of both foul lines and even extend along the fences of the outfield.

If necessary, the hose used in the park's sprinkling system can be lined three or four feet off the fences to mark off an area for a couple thousand standees. Ground rules, of course, must prevail and the region must be policed religiously to discourage any citizen from making a souvenir out of a baseball in play.

When all seats in a ball park are occupied, it should be the obligation of the management to hang out the "Standing Room Only" sign immediately—even before the last seat is taken. The fan who purchases a ticket, knowing no seat is available, will seldom, if ever, complain. However, the same fan, if uninitiated to the S. R. O. condition, will likely lament long and loud over the lack of seats.

Park Streamlined for Fans

Whether taxed to capacity or not, parks should be streamlined for the fans. Each fan should enter the gate nearest his seat, and should never have to cross a flow from another entrance. The exit gates should be wide and numerous.

The handling of a crowd starts at the box office, or even before that. Usually it is best to have an unreserved window—for the quick turnover—for every window selling both reserved and unreserved seats. Kinds and prices of tickets should be plainly marked above each window.

Often the box office window is too close to the entrance. Thus, a huge traffic jam is created by those people waiting for their tickets to be purchased by those in the ticket line, since almost every purchaser is usually accompanied by one or more guests. A distance of ten or more yards from the window to the entrance is necessary to allow ample space for those fans in waiting.

Turnstiles, used chiefly by clubs in the classification above B, tend to slow down ticket-taking, but a good gateman can usually handle the output of two ticket sellers. A busy turnstile handles a flow of between 1,000 and 1,500 a game.

Played as it is on warm summer nights and days, baseball actually has the easiest time of all sports in handling its crowds. Starting with the opening of gates about an hour and a quarter before game time, the baseball crowd flows more or less steadily for the next two hours. Naturally, the biggest jam-up is just before game time, but even then it's of the mild variety.

Adequate Parking Facilities Suggested

Football, on the other hand, is a seller-gateman-usher nightmare. Because of the chill of autumn, the football fan descends upon the stadium as close to game time as possible. It creates a major traffic jam, one which baseball thankfully experiences but seldom. (Or would any ball club gladly trade such headaches for the 96,000 which Michigan's Stadium draws on a cold Saturday afternoon?)

Baseball's traffic problem should not be confined to the ball park alone. Every effort should be made to obtain adequate, nearby parking facilities for automobiles, preferably at no charge. The officers hired to patrol the ball park during the game can be used to direct auto parking and traffic before the first and after the ninth innings.

Every effort should be made to bring public transportation as close and as frequently to the ball park as possible. Usually a well-placed season pass, here and there, will assure extra busses or street cars immediately before and after the game.

As Confucius must have said: "There's liable to be no traffic problem inside a baseball park unless the one on the outside is met first."

Why Most Clubs Ban Pass-Out Checks

Modern baseball is giving a new twist to an old saying—"They shall not pass . . . out"

A ticklish problem confronting a baseball operation is the "pass-out check," whereby a customer may leave the park and return later by showing his rain-check. This problem becomes especially acute if the park does not sell beer on the premises and a handy tavern happens to be located across the street.

Since most clubs reap substantial profits from their concessions, it's to their advantage to keep the fan inside the ball park. Hence, most clubs discourage or ban the "pass-out check."

ing fast because it's always seemed silly to waste a lot of time on the mound. You pitch and get it over with.'

"But all was not gloom with Ferrick.

"'You know, the enforcement of this one-second rule might be a good thing for a lot of pitchers; like me, for instance,' he said, brightening. 'The batters who knew how fast I pitched could always tell when I was going to turn the ball loose. Now I can hold up two, three or even four seconds. Might help me, at that.'"

Ted Turns to Lemonade

Harold Kaese, Boston Globe: "It used to be milk shakes by the pint. Now Ted Williams drinks lemonade by the quart after a hot practice session.

"'This stuff is good for you,' said Williams.

"Having got this far on milk shakes, you would hardly expect Williams to shift to lemonade, but he is not one who lives by rites. Last spring he did no push-ups and then hit 43 home runs, but this spring he is doing 15 push-ups a day.

"'Gives me a little extra strength, I think,' he said. 'I did a lot of squeezing exercises to strengthen my hands last year, instead of push-ups.'

"A reporter said, 'Eddie Miller watched you hitting the other day, and said your hitting was in your hands. He said, "Look at his hands. They do the work, and he lets his body take care of itself."' 'He's right,' exclaimed Williams.

"Williams spread his dukes, which are big.

"'See that blister?' he remarked, wiggling a finger. 'I got that hitting golf balls just before I came here. Golf is no good for ball players. The swing is different.

"'You know the best exercise for a hitter? Swing a bat.'"

He'd Prefer Old-Fashioned Walk

TED WILLIAMS scarcely ever wears a necktie, but he put on a stiff collar for the Boston writers' dinner and look—he scared Eddie Collins into believing he was about to choke when he only was loosening his unaccustomed neckwear.

Good Old Days, Poor Pay Days

By GRANTLAND RICE
Of the North American Newspaper Alliance, Inc.

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif.

LARRY LAJOIE

Our attention was called, as you might say, to a number of salaries paid ball players recently. Joe DiMaggio and Ted Williams were the only two above $75,000, but there were several that ranged from $35,000 to $60,000, including Bob Feller, Stan Musial, Tommy Henrich, Jackie Robinson and others.

We are not inclined to shed tears over anything that happens in this upside-down world, but it seemed at the moment that tears were due for the old guard—Christy Mathewson, Grover Alexander, Cy Young, Nap Lajoie, Ed Walsh, Ed Delahanty, Joe Jackson—on through a long list of players certainly the match of any we have today. I recall the feud that developed between Lajoie and Ed Delahanty of the long-ago Phillies.

"We were each getting $2,500 a year," Nap told me once. It might be remembered at the time both were hitting around .400. Delahanty had just knocked out four homers in one game. They agreed to stick it out together for $3,000 a year—two ball players who today would be good for at least $75,000 a year. It seems that only Delahanty signed for $3,000, leaving Lajoie out in the cold. So Larry jumped and signed with Cleveland of the new American League for $8,000.

Mathewson and Wagner Got $10,000

Then I recalled Big Ed Walsh, who pitched 66 games in 1908, of which he won 40 and saved a dozen others. The great Walsh threw his arm away that season for the princely sum of $4,500, paid him by a wild spender known as Charles Comiskey. Comiskey also paid Shoeless Joe Jackson around $4,000 or $4,500. All that Jackson could do was chase Ty Cobb with a batting average of .410. That was a total of, say, $9,000 for Walsh and Jackson, who today would be cheap at $70,000 each annually.

Mathewson's top salary was $10,000. So was Honus Wagner's. Matty was easily a $60,000 pitcher and Wagner an $80,000 or $100,000 ball player. How many are now around who have led a big league at batting for eight years in addition to being tabbed the greatest shortstop of all time?

Cy Young was winning 20, 25 and even 30 games a year for a royal stipend ranging from $3,000 to $8,000 a season. Maybe it was only $5,000 yearly. He won only 510 games and wound up practically broke after 22 years.

Pop Anson Hung on for 26 Years

The old system of lower pay at least had one extra advantage for the club owner. The ball player had to hang around longer.

For example, there are few ten-year men left in the major leagues. But at the golden distribution which took place from 30 to 40 years ago—or only 20 years back—look what happened: Pop Anson hung on for 26 years. So did Jack Quinn. Cobb spent 24 years in big league harness and Wagner was on deck 23 years.

Lajoie and Tris Speaker adorned the infield and outfield for more than 22 seasons. Cy Young was a 22-year man. Remember—these were all stars, the top of the flock. There are any number who worked on the Big Time for 15 or 18 years. But today, Joe DiMaggio, who has been playing only 14 seasons, is one of the long-time vets left.

Managers will tell you the game has grown so much faster than it used to be that only a few exceptional players can outlast the ten or 12-year grind.

Well, Cobb hit around .330 in his twenty-fourth campaign. Wagner was still a star at 43—in his twenty-third season. I'd rather have Honus at 38—even 40—than any shortstop in the game today.

Someone asked Jack Quinn one day how it was that he was still pitching after 24 seasons. "That's easy," Quinn said. "A wife and six children."

Today, at least, a ball player can make his game a real profession. I haven't seen broad-lawned estates owned by old-timers who usually finished their careers with worn-out gloves—and maybe a prayer.

Hank Looks at Player Problems From O

Move Into Office

Recalls Own Pay Debates With Tigers

Finds Some Players Fight Windmills by Yelping Before They Get Terms

By HAL LEBOVITZ

CLEVELAND, O.

Three years ago, Hank Greenberg was playing first base for the Pittsburgh Pirates. Before that for many years he was a great slugger for the Detroit Tigers. A conscientious, intelligent athlete, he knew the problems of a major leaguer.

Today, Hank has crossed the line he admits exists between the playing field and the front office. Now he's on the other side of the desk as general manager of the Cleveland Indians, a conscientious, intelligent baseball executive.

Has he carried his baseball glove into the front office? In his years on the playing field, he was subjected to innumerable experiences which resulted in definite attitudes and opinions. Now that he is among the "brass," have these attitudes and opinions been tempered or changed? To find out, THE SPORTING NEWS invited his comments on several issues on a "then and now" basis.

Front Office Interference?

"As a player I felt there was a line—call it coldness—between the playing field and the front office. I want to eliminate that line if I possibly can. There really shouldn't be any dividing line. It's all one organization, and there should be cordial, warm relations between the players and the executives.

"Since coming to the front office my eyes have been opened. There really isn't any coldness. The executives are just as strong hero-worshippers as the paying fans. They're rooting for the players to make good. The players' success is also the front office success.

"We want the players to come to us with their problems. Maybe we can help them in their personal affairs. We'd certainly like to try.

"I'm going to try to encourage the players to drop into the front office, say hello and consider us their friends.

"In the minors, especially, players have a visible resentment toward the front office. They feel somebody in the front office has it in for them and is keeping them out of the majors. I tell our minor leaguers how silly this attitude is. I tell them, 'We're spending hundreds of thousands of dollars on our farm system to bring you up, why should we try to keep you down?'"

Manager and Front Office?

"As a player I felt the general manager and the team manager should see eye to eye. They should discuss problems and be in accord. If not, the team gets a new manager . . . or a new general manager. I still feel that way."

Front Office Publicity?

"As a ball player I often felt the front office executives used poor judgment in knocking their own players publicly. To me they did this for only one reason—as a bludgeon when it came to bargaining. It rather frightened the players from asking for a raise. I think this is a horrible way to try to save a little on salaries. I thought so as a player and I still think so.

"Players are our stock in trade. By knocking our players we tear down our own property. Actually we should

'There Shoul

compared it with my performance of the season just past and then determined my worth to the club for the coming season. If that sounds complicated it's because baseball is an unnatural business. For example, you get paid in 1950 for what you did in 1949, not on what you're going to do.

"The trouble with so many players nowadays, I find, is that they're operating on the theory, 'This may be my last good year. A bird in the hand is worth two in the bush. Get the most.' That wasn't my idea. I was always shooting for a better season.

"When we decide what to offer a player, Mr. (Ellis) Ryan, the club president, Rudie Schaffer, the business manager, and myself have a discussion. We talk about the player's personality, his years of service and his potential for the coming season. We try to give him what we think will satisfy him. There's an old baseball theory, 'Never cut a ball player, trade him instead.' I don't agree.

"Neither do I agree with the old St. Louis Cardinals' theory, 'Keep the players hungry.' I want our players satisfied. But I don't want them overs satisfied. Too much money too soon hurts many players.

"Of course, it's important not to make a player disgruntled over his salary. If I had any disgruntled players I'd want to get rid of them.

Cubs Sign Fournier as Coast Scout

Jack Fournier

LOS ANGELES, Calif.—The Cubs made the most important addition to their scouting staff since Jack Doyle, the old Oriole, was hired somewhere back in the Stone Age, when they signed Jack Fournier last week. Jack has been assigned the Pacific Coast, as well as the territory in the Northwest.

Fournier had been head scout for the Browns and quit, President Bill DeWitt freely admitted, over salary differences. He was with the Browns 13 years.

"Fournier did a splendid job for us," said DeWitt. "I'm sorry to lose him. But frankly, the bickering about salary got so far out of hand that we couldn't retain him. We offered him more money. And I believe he already was getting more than any other scout in the business."

It is reported that Fournier was drawing $12,500. DeWitt acknowledged that as the figure indirectly.

"I believe he was worth it," resumed DeWitt. "He's the best scout in the game today. Some of the fellows he dug up for us were Bob Dillinger, Al Zarilla, Paul Lehner and Fred Sanford. His judgment also has been invaluable in the deals we've made.

"He'll help the Cubs. He's the kind of a scout who can dig them up in the raw. I would take his evaluation of a player over that of any other man in the game."

Revolt in Florida Int on Home-Game Radio

Sun Sox Asking $25,000 for Broadcast Rights; Miami Beach Club Also Boosting Its Air Ante

By JIMMY BURNS

MIAMI, Fla.

H. B. Taber, Sr.

A revolt against broadcasting of home games in the Florida International League is brewing. The outcome will be watched by other magnates, and the local ban might very easily spread of other minor leagues.

Since the inauguration of the F-I in 1946, the home games of both the Miami Sun Sox and the Miami Beach Flamingos have been broadcast. Now the Miami club is demanding $25,000 for the season before it will permit Station WMIE to report its games, and the Beach is requesting the more modest sum of $10,000.

To date the radio station has not met the offer and Manager Bob Vinn indicates he has no thought of paying out such a sum merely for the privilege of telling stay-at-home fans how the Sun Sox and Flamingos are faring.

"I hope they don't meet our demands," said H. B. Taber, Sr., president of Miami Stadium, Inc., owner of the $2,000,000 park, and part owner of the Class B Sun Sox team. "We don't want the games broadcast. That's why we set the price so high."

The fans in general are not aware of the fact that they'll have to go to the stadium to see the games, or else wait until the next morning to discover what happened to their favorites. Once they realize that a flick of the dial won't bring them the play-by-play, there is likely to be a concerted squawk which will be heard all the way to Cuba.

Taber's view is that broadcasting the games will keep fans away—particularly on nights when the weather is threatening. He has invested $6,000 in a new infield cover which will make it possible to play games even after a hard rain.

The radio ban became effective when Brooklyn and Boston opened the exhibition season at Miami Stadium, March 11 and 12. Station WMIE was so piqued over the ban that it bought a play-by-play of the first Yankee game

QUESTIONS INTERPRETATION

Editor of THE SPORTING NEWS:

Umpire Bill Summers, in a statement to the Indians at Tucson, said that a pitcher can fake a throw to third base with a runner on third and then wheel around and try to pick off the runner at first without balking, and that in all of his years of umpiring he never saw a pitcher fake a throw to third base.

If this rule isn't revised, you will see plenty of fake throws to third base, because the pitchers know now they can get away with something they never did before and the umpires are going to have something to rule on that they never did before.

I played minor league ball years ago and saw runners get picked off third base, but only by a righthanded pitcher. But I have never seen or heard of the rule that permits a pitcher on the rubber to make a fake throw to an occupied third base and then wheel around and try to pick the runner off first. That is a balk and nothing else, just like the half-balk motion pitchers used to try to get away with. JOHN J. FAHEY

Chicago, Ill.

Editor's Note: This is not a new rule. The pitcher has always been permitted to fake a throw to second or third base when occupied without a balk being called, and also to fake a throw to third if occupied and then wheel and throw to first to trap a runner, providing the pitcher steps directly toward first base before making his throw if still on the rubber.

WALLACE HITS ON TRUE SYSTEM

Editor of THE SPORTING NEWS:

Of all the systems devised to evaluate a player's worth, none comes as close to accuracy as the method of Corwin Wallace, described in a recent issue by Ed Pollock. Surely the best two batters in the majors last year were Ted Williams and Stan Musial, as Wallace's system indicated.

Wallace judges a player by his ability to advance a runner, not necessarily his knack of driving in runners. Under this system, RBIs receive no consideration, which is as it should be, since opportunities are different for all players. Williams' average would be .360, regardless of what team he played for. Game Should Keep Babe's 'Called Homer' Feat Alive

Editor of THE SPORTING NEWS:

Why did Gabby Hartnett attempt to destroy one of the game's most treasured events, Babe Ruth's "called homer" in the 1932 Series, by announcing publicly recently that The Babe hadn't called his shot? Could Gabby have been jealous of the kids' love for the Ruth legend?

Youngsters of today still talk of Ruth with a sparkle in their eyes. Ty Cobb was just another good ball player. The "called homer" is a vital part of diamond lore and something that baseball can ill-afford to destroy.

source of present-day ills. TV, just like radio, stimulates attendance. Elimination of TV from major league parks would retard the game's progress considerably.

A factor which is hurting the game, however, is the habit of a major league club grabbing the star player or players from a minor league affiliate in the middle of a pennant race. This happened at Wilkes-Barre last season when the Barons appeared headed for an Eastern League pennant. It not only reduced the club's flag chances, but also slowed down the gate, which had been doing nicely up to that time.

Operation of a Ball Club

No. 9--Concessions

By MILT WOODARD

Editor's Note: With the average fan spending from 25 to 50 cents on soft drinks, hot dogs and other items during a visit to a minor league park, the concessions of a club can mean the difference between red and black ink at the end of the year. Concessions operations are explained in this article, ninth in a series by Milt Woodard, former baseball writer who for the past two years served as general manager of clubs at Grand Rapids, Mich., and Hot Springs, Ark.

Charlie Jacobs

Which is superior—the boiled or the grilled hot dog?

That question almost broke up baseball's 1949 meeting of business managers and executives. It not only divided the conclave of 600 into two debating groups, but, more important, it revealed just how strongly the concession business has made its inroads into the game of baseball.

Indeed, a well-run concession can account for about one-sixth to one-third the income of a baseball property. The Chicago Cubs, in 1947, admitted the sale of the hot dog meant the difference between a profitable and red-inked season. That could go for almost any border-line operation in baseball.

Basically, baseball concessions are handled in two ways—(1) home operated or (2) leased out. The St. Louis Cardinals and Chicago Cubs are devotees of the theory that their concessions, both at home and in the farm system, should be run by the club itself. The Cleveland Indians and Chicago White Sox, among others, prefer to lease out their concessions, at home and on the farm.

There are several reliable concession operators, the largest and most extensive being Sportservice of Buffalo, administered by the Jacobs brothers—Lou, Charlie and Marvin. They usually relieve the club of all concession problems, place their trained manager in charge of the operation, and give the lessor approximately 20 per cent of the gross sales.

Charlie Checks Hot Dog's Heat, Counts Peanuts

Another formula, less popular and used occasionally by independent lessees, is to place a per capita fee on the concessionaire. For example, the club would collect eight or nine or ten cents, more or less, for each person passing through the gate during the season.

Whether home operated or leased, the concession should receive constant attention from the baseball executives. First, he must insist upon cleanliness. Courtesy, service and adequate vendors and stand help should be other items to be checked by the club business bosses.

When Charlie Jacobs, the roving ambassador of Sportservice, arrives at a park leased by his firm, he becomes his own best customer. He buys hot dogs from the vendors, takes a bite or two to ascertain if it is well-cooked, well-mustarded, and if the bun is heated thoroughly. He buys bags of peanuts, counts them to be sure they reach the company's minimum, and tastes them.

If the hot dog is tepid, if the peanuts are under-roasted, if the soda pop is anything but ice cold, Jacobs consults the concession manager to learn why.

Baseball people have discovered that quality merchandise, in the long run, is profit-making merchandise. The all-meat hotdog at 20 cents is preferred by the average fan to an inferior, half-cereal "dog" at 15 cents. Within reason, the best of merchandise should be offered at parks in Organized Baseball.

Must Appeal to Nose as Well as Eye

From the circus midway, if not by themselves, the baseball purveyors of food have learned the secret of eye-and-nose appeal. The hot dog, sputtering and emitting its familiar odor on an open grill, will sell more rapidly than its boiled brethren. Proponents of the boiled "dog" claim a "dog" is toughened on a grill, and won't gain the "repeat customers." Both sides, however, admit popcorn sales can be doubled when the popper is placed in view of the customer.

Universally, baseball concession people believe in the seven-ounce drink over the 12-ounce size. They realize a fan may buy two of the smaller to one of the larger. They also rationalize that the customers prefer the smaller size, and maybe they're right.

The concession manager's chief interest is his per-capita sales. It's the yardstick by which he measures his current business against that of a year ago as well as against the accepted standards in baseball. The average baseball fan spends from 25 to 50 cents on food, drink, cushion and novelties during each visit to a minor league baseball park. It's the concession manager's aim to hit as close as possible to 50 cents, or higher.

NEXT WEEK—KEEPING TAB, SCORECARDS

When Pop for Umpires Peps Up Sales

Games of two hours or less may still be the goal of league presidents, but to the concession manager of a ball park they're just a pain in the pocketbook. Always alerted to sell another hot dog and bottle of pop, the smart concession boss prays for those delays and extra innings which create a merry ringing in his cash register.

The rest period between double-headers brings the heaviest business to concessions. If the booths are still doing a land-office business as starting time for the second game approaches, the astute concession manager will rush into the umpires' room with an assortment of sandwiches, cold drinks and ice cream. If the umpires just delay the start a minute or two while eating another hot dog, it's worth a couple hundred sales to the concessions.

Operation of a Ball Club

No. 10--Scorecards

By MILT WOODARD

Editor's Note: Advertising in scorecards is a big source of income to clubs, but too often the information on names and numbers of players is inaccurate. The importance of having everything correct, along with tips on stimulating sales of advertising and of the scorecards, are pointed out in this tenth installment in the series on "Operation of a Ball Club" by Milt Woodard, former baseball writer who has served as general manager of clubs at Grand Rapids, Mich., and Hot Springs, Ark.

Milt Woodard

It sells for a dime. It should pour approximately $4,000 into the coffers of an average baseball club. It is all-important to the pleasure and enjoyment of the fan. Yet the scorecard is too often one of the most neglected items in baseball.

The vendors claim, "You can't tell a player without a scorecard." Yet, too often, you can't tell a player with one because the business manager of the visiting team has failed to forward a corrected list of player names and numbers. It's the No. 1 complaint in the fraternity of baseball business managers—that lack of co-operation in getting accurate scorecards to the paying public.

The word "scorecard" is a misnomer, inherited from years ago when a folded sheet of cardboard served as the scoresheet for the fan. Now, the patron frequently receives an elaborate booklet, numbering as high as 24 pages and filled with advertisements and information about everything except, too often, the correct numbers and names of the visiting club.

Next to the gate receipts and concessions, advertising from the scorebook generally ranks third as a source of income to a club in Organized Ball. Such advertising revenue is the net profit from scorecards, since their sale usually merely pays for the printing and vendors' commissions on the book.

Although rates vary with the community and operation, the average small ad in leagues above Class C costs $70 a season, or $1 a game. They run as high as $500 or more for a full page. Naturally, the higher the classification the more the price of the ad.

'Lucky Number' Good Selling Point

Because it is the cynosure of the fans' eyes throughout the game, the scoresheet page contains the premium, and more expensive, advertising. An attempt, however, is made by progressive baseball operators to present newsworthy material—such as roster, schedule, ground rules, etc.—on each page of the book. Thus, he can point out to the advertiser that the fan turns to each page of the book for information; not just to the scoresheet.

The "lucky number" has become a muscular selling-point to the vendor of scorebook advertising. Twice or more each evening, the scorebook holder is directed to a certain page on which appears a number. If the number of his scorecard corresponds to that announced over the public address system, the program holder receives an autographed baseball, a pair of passes to the next game, or a box of candy or a free grease job for his automobile.

Advertising for a baseball scorebook must be solicited in January and February. That makes it the more difficult, since it's not easy to talk about robins and pussywillows and baseball when three potential major league pitchers, each age 10, are throwing snowballs at the advertiser's window.

If the concessions of a baseball park are leased to a nationally-known concessionaire, a crew of trained advertising salesmen will be sent to a city to solicit scorebook advertising. However, if time is available, many officials believe it should be done by the club business manager, the better to give him an opportunity to meet his public and spread good will for the baseball club.

Select Community Leaders for Ads

The successful salesman of scorebook advertising usually "dummies" an ad for his prospective client. He points out the importance of baseball to the community. He diagnoses the type of people who patronize baseball—unquestionably the most stable, solid folk in the community; the potential purchaser of almost any article or service.

Of secondary, and sometimes primary, importance in the realm of baseball advertising is the fence. Such advertising should net more than $1,000 annually for even the class D club. Generally it sells at a minimum of $100 for each panel, with a premium on the space adjoining the scoreboard.

Cost of fence painting averages between $25 and $40 a panel, and should always be considered when fees are established. It is important to the baseball operator that the painting of fence advertising is uniform and attractive, inasmuch as it reflects on the appearance of the park.

Collection of advertising revenue, both program and fence, is no small item. Each advertiser should sign a contract, and full payment should be due on opening day of the season. Sometimes, a two-installment payment is agreed upon—half at the start of the season and the remainder on or before July 1.

NEXT WEEK: GETTING AROUND — TRANSPORTATION

Few Fans Actually Keep Score

Although score-keeping was invented in 1864 by Henry Chadwick, a prominent sports writer of the Civil War period, the scorecard itself was not distributed to the public until around 1879. Perhaps the most unusual of the early scorecards were those distributed by the Milwaukee club at the turn of the century. They were printed in German as well as English.

In a recent survey of scorecards discarded by fans following a major league game, only eight out of 100 purchasers knew the rudiments of scoring, i. e.; the numbering of positions from 1 to 9 and the symbol of K for strikeout, W for base on balls and E for error. According to the survey, less than half the fans bothered to even mark their cards with a pencil.

Obviously, the scorecard is used mainly to satisfy that old bromide, "You can't tell the players without a scorecard." For that reason the baseball operator should be doubly concerned about the accuracy of the lineups and players' numbers, both of the home and visiting teams.

Operation of a Ball Club

No. 15--Front Office

By MILT WOODARD

Editor's Note: The necessity of the field manager and the business manager working in agreement, in order to avoid clashes over many "fringe" matters, is explained in this fifteenth article in the series by Milt Woodard, former Chicago baseball writer who put in two years as business manager at Grand Rapids, Mich., and Hot Springs, Ark.

The Front Office and the Field

Milt Woodard

One of the most delicate lines of baseball is that which is drawn between the field and the front office. It's the basis of harmony within a baseball organization, and when overstepped becomes the chief cause of friction and rhubarbs within a club.

It's gospel in baseball that there should be an imaginary line drawn back of home plate.

"Everything that happens on the diamond side of the line is governed by the field manager," the code states. "Everything that happens behind the line is the problem of the business manager. Let neither overstep the line!"

It's a difficult axiom, especially for the business manager who knows he must have a winner to make money, and who might feel that the club is being mismanaged on the field. It's much, much easier to second-guess a field manager than a business manager.

In the long run, the axiom is one of the best in baseball—"draw a line and stay behind it."

Team Is a Two-Man Organization

Generally, baseball is a two-man organization—the field and business manager. Their philosophies often differ. The field manager is an ex-player who usually wants to become involved with nothing except a winning season and the contentment and comfort of himself and his players. The business manager also wants a winning season but, in addition, he wants a profitable one involving economy and promotional stunts.

It takes a lot of gettin' together, give and take, to merge such contrasting philosophies into harmony.

First, there's the matter of baseballs. Because it's an item which could involve either profit or loss, the business manager is inclined to dole them out as sparingly as possible during practice—perhaps one new one a game to warm up the starting pitcher. The field manager, on the other hand, may feel a half dozen a workout is necessary—three for infield, two for the fungo hitters and one for the starting pitcher.

Bats present another item of potential conflict. If given the opportunity, many players will order a half dozen bats every other week. If the field manager sanctions the order, and the business manager says "No," it can lead to the use of such bats for something more than baseball.

The same conflict can, and sometimes does, extend into mode of travel, hotel rooms, complimentary tickets, towels, personal appearances and any number of additional items of controversy.

The logical solution is for the club owner to establish an understanding among his two lieutenants before the season starts, even before contracts are signed. There should be, and usually is, a happy medium available.

Co-operation of Field and Office Pilots Necessary

The club's two managers, front and field, should co-operate fully in deciding whether or not to call off a game because of wet grounds or rain. Whenever possible the game should be played, even if the field boss is plagued with a dearth of starting pitchers. It's amazing how many games are won when the pitching barrel is almost empty.

The business manager should establish and retain a cordial relationship with umpires. The field manager can, and should, handle all the inevitable arguments which will arise with the arbiters. The front office, however, should never take sides with an umpire against its field manager.

In regards to umpires, the business manager should watch them carefully on starting games before the scheduled time. Some umpires, anxious to get an early start for their next destination, will attempt to start a game four or five minutes early. In deference to the fan who expects to arrive exactly at game time, it should not be allowed.

Once the game is under way, however, it's wholly under the jurisdiction of the umpire.

NEXT WEEK—GENTLEMEN OF THE PRESS

Double-Duty Setup Best

The happiest relationship between the front office and the field is created when one man is given both the job of field manager and business manager. This double-duty project is restricted chiefly to the low minors, and the National Association office estimates there are never more than 25 field-business managers in operation during any given season.

Even this system isn't fool-proof. There's the case of Connie Mack, regarded as the boss of the Athletics both on the field and in the front-office tower. Yet, just last fall, Mack admitted he had to fire two of his scouts, Al Simmons and Earle Brucker, when his board of directors overruled his own protests.

Nothing Like It—Except Stromboli

"Not the fan. He wants to read baseball. The days are getting longer and warmer. The season is near. And he is not a fussy reader.

"Not the writer. He's being paid for giving the public what it wants, and having a good time doing it.

"And not the ball club. No sir! Spring training publicity is nation-wide advertising bought at a negligible cost. There's nothing like it in the entertainment world, unless it is Stromboli.

"The experienced reader can almost see the headlines from the South: Jethroe to steal most bases for Braves since Billy Hamilton pilfered 59 in 1898. . . . Sain's arm gives no cause for alarm. . . . McDermott faster than Grove, Gomez. . . . Batts best third-string catcher in league. (He was best second-string catcher last spring.) . . . Kerr faster than Dark—throwing to first base.

"The veteran reader would be flabbergasted and annoyed to read such headlines as these: 'Kramer deal may cost Sox flag.' . . . 'Braves lack spark without Dark, Stanky.' . . . 'All 16 big league clubs weaker than last season.'

"But even though the holdouts always sign up, the 16 clubs are always stronger and the new players are always better than the old, the unexpected occurs even in spring training. Joe McCarthy, for example, solved his Williams problem two years ago by appearing in the dining room for breakfast without a necktie.

"And then a Mel Almada is beaned or a Chet Ross wrecks an ankle. A Shanty Hogan gets so sunburned he takes a trip to a hospital; or a Johnny Marcum tells an Eric McNair to try his Sardine Junior Oil, meaning Absorbine Jr.; or a George Metkovich is incapacitated by a catfish.

"You can see why newspapers send sports writers to Florida. Maybe Junior Stephens will start hitting to right."

Musical Snub Given U. S. at Guatemala City Games

GUATEMALA CITY, Guatemala — A musical snub to the United States at the opening ceremonies for the Central American Olympic Games here, February 25, which threatened international complications, was smoothed out after profuse explanations and a threatened formal protest to the Guatemalan government by U. S. Ambassador Richard C. Patterson, Jr.

When a Puerto Rican color guard, carrying the Stars and Stripes, took its place for the ceremonies, a Guatemalan military band played "La Borinquena," a dance tune, instead of "The Star Spangled Banner." A government newspaper, reporting the tournament, said: "Significant detail: When the Puerto Rican color guard marched forward to take its place in the semi-circle of flags, a military band honored the Puerto Rican people with the nationalist hymn because colonies are not recognized in Guatemala."

Members of the Puerto Rican team challenged the statement that La Borinquena was a hymn of their native island, saying it was merely a popular air. Ambassador Patterson expressed himself as "surprised and indignant" at the slur and said he would protest formally.

The episode was the third occasion in two days in which the government of Guatemala had sought to exploit the charge that Puerto Rico was an American "colony." When the Puerto Rican team arrived they found their country represented among the massed banners of the competing countries by a white flag, bearing a green shield, instead of the Stars and Stripes. They insisted the substitute flag be hauled down and replaced by the American colors. When the Puerto Rican team pa-

Kramer Can Scrap

Harold Kaese, Boston Globe: "Jack Kramer (sold by the Red Sox to the Giants recently) may be high-strung and temperamental, but when handled properly, he has stuff, stamina and stomach. In fact, he has stomach when not handled properly.

"He once challenged big Sig Jakucki, but the Browns' roughneck did not accept. Jack was ready to challenge several Red Sox teammates when they were riding him about his sore arm last summer.

" 'Kramer can take care of himself,' said Bob Bauman, Browns' trainer.

" 'We had a big catcher named Harshany, and I saw Kramer pin him in a wrestling match. And do you know another fellow Kramer flattened in a friendly bout? Jeff Heath. Yes, sir, he put big Jeff flat on his back.'

"The Red Sox did not handle Kramer properly when they tried to shame him out of his sore arm last season.

" 'We learned it was best to leave Kramer alone,' Bauman said. 'On a day he was to pitch, the players wouldn't even talk to him.'

"Luke Sewell, who managed the Browns when Jack was at his peak, said he never told Kramer when he was to pitch. He always asked him. It worked better that way, for Kramer might be led but he never would be driven."

Milan, Poker-Face, Tells Tall Ones for

Believe Him or Not

By SHIRLEY POVICH
WASHINGTON, D. C.

Clyde Milan, the noted thief who used to steal most of the American League's bases—he says he's now coaching the Nats in the art of stealing first—may or may not tell the truth, as the mood seizes him.

He once won a liar's contest on two counts as the biggest liar, and as the straightest-faced liar. And when it is considered that the competition was limited to native Texans, the prodigiousness of Milan's victory brooks no dispute.

Among liars, Milan is held in a special sort of respect. "He's a dreamy liar," observed one of the contest judges.

"He just rambles and sort of reaches out for his lies as he goes along in a slow, foggy way, and that's the best test—what we call an ad libbing liar. No script."

Lies to Keep in Practice

Clark Griffith, who can appreciate a good lie under the proper circumstances, is somewhat proud of Milan's feats, and had deduced the key to Milan's success. "He lies when there is no need for it, just to keep in practice," points out Griffith. "He always keeps himself in shape."

Well, sir, now that Milan has been properly introduced, it must also be told that he is highly respected, too, as a talent scout by Griffith, who dispatches him hither and yon to tab young players for future reference. Right now, he has Griffith in a tizzy about a lad he came upon in Texas.

The trouble is, Griffith has not yet determined whether Milan is telling the truth or merely drawing the long bow again. "I can never tell whether he is giving me a scouting report or telling me a story," Griffith complains. "He lies and tells the truth with the same expression. You could call him a one-faced liar."

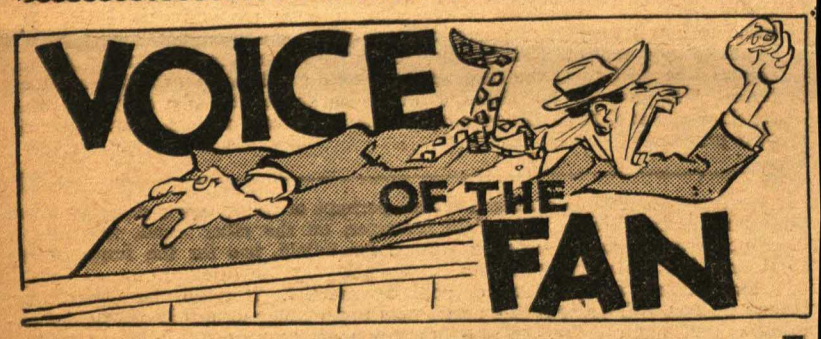
Milan's latest story concerns a pitching prospect he encountered in Texas under story-book conditions one day last fall after he packed his hunting gear and started for the Texas deer country in his high-wheel Model T. "Baseball isn't on my mind while I'm wheeling along those gutted roads when all of a sudden I see a boy I judge to be about 13, and there he is knocking squirrels out of a tree with rocks.

"Naturally, I gotta stop and watch this, because our Texas squirrels are little pigmies and are even tough to knock over with birdshot. When somebody who can take dead aim with a rock and knock one down I'm interested in. I got out of my car and asked him, 'Sonny, do you



BOOST FOR JUNIOR STEPHENS

Editor of THE SPORTING NEWS:

There were two articles in your April 5 issue which convinced me that neither Boston team has a chance to win the pennant this year.

Milt Gross cited the stubbornness of Joe McCarthy in keeping Vern Stephens at short, and all the New York papers pretend they are convinced that Junior can't cover any ground and is a terrible shortstop.

Last year Junior had about 50 more assists than any other shortstop and participated in more double plays than any other man at that position. Johnny Pesky, at third, handled about 100 more chances than George Kell, his closest rival, and he also participated in twice as many double plays. This article was an attempt to keep alive the clique headed by Ted Williams against Stephens playing short. This division of the club has hurt it for two years and if Williams insists on being an unofficial assistant manager this year, you can blame a New York writer in trying to keep the feud alive.

Reich Deal Panned

Editor of THE SPORTING NEWS:

How do the White Sox expect to make the first division after the stunt General Manager Frank Lane pulled in sending Herman Reich back to the minors?

Doesn't Lane know that Reich outhit five of the first basemen in the American League last year? Both the first sackers remaining on the Sox' roster, Charlie Kress and Gordon Goldsberry, hit less than Reich's .280, Kress posting a .278 mark and Goldsberry .247 in the Coast league. In addition, Reich is a better fielder than either of the two others.

I don't think Manager Jack Onslow is to blame for this blunder, for I honestly believe he intended to use Reich at first base.

ROOKIE ROLL CALL

Reds' Blackburn Wrote His Own 'Strikeout Story'

By WALTER L. JOHNS
TAMPA, Fla.

It's understandable why Gerald Spencer Blackburn would want to read Bob Feller's "Strikeout Story" five times, because his Kannapolis, N. C., youth, a bonus baby with the Cincinnati Reds, has an amazing strikeout story of his own.

Gerald is just a year out of high school. His experience has been limited to high school, semi-pro and American Legion ball.

He was signed to a contract with the Reds last September 18 after every club in both leagues had scouted him and had their pocketbooks out. The Reds, according to Gerald's own admission, paid $32,000 in bonuses for his signature.

A southpaw, this 19-year-old North Carolina pitcher has hurled six shutouts, and set all kinds of strikeout marks with J. W. Cannon High School in Kannapolis and with the Taylorsville, N. C., semi-pro club.

In his first appearance on the mound, after being taken off the first-base sack when the team ran out of pitchers, Gerald struck out eight of the nine batters he faced.

He captured three wins that year against no losses and that summer hurled 12 victories for the Kannapolis American Legion team which won the state title. In the sectional playoffs, Blackburn turned in a no-hitter against Little Rock, Ark.

From then on he blazed his fast ball past the batters in high school, American Legion play and semi-pro competition in repetitious monotony, getting a high of 26 out of 27 batters in one game.

Keeps Lifting Mark

Blackburn's junior year in high school, 1948, reads like an added page to the Bob Feller story.

In the opener, he struck out 21. The next game he made it 22. In the next it was 23. But that wasn't the end. In the fourth game he whiffed 24, and in the fifth 25. And to wind up the season he struck out 24 batters in the next game and 24 again in the concluding game.

That isn't the end of the Gerald Blackburn story. He played semi-pro ball that summer and won 21 against five losses, striking out more than 300 batters and getting a top of 23 against the Hickory, N. C., club. Included in those 21 victories were three no-hitters.

As a senior in high school Gerald won eight games, lost none. He struck out 23 in the first game and followed with 22, and finally 26 out of 27 against Charlotte.

In that game against Charlotte, Gerald not only struck out 26 in a row, but

LET FANS DO SCREENING

Editor of THE SPORTING NEWS:

The basic premise behind your recent editorial on screening sportscasters is a bit off base. Surely we purvey opinions and information, but it's in sports, not politics. If we ever strayed beyond our realm even in the slightest, we'd soon be looking for new pastures.

If, in your editorial, you meant that the entire radio industry should be screened, I'll buy that. But then, let's investigate the Fourth Estate, also.

Sure, I'll be screened, but why me alone? Why not you, the ball clubs, etc?

In the recent war certain restrictions were aimed at radio. We took it uncomplainingly. But why should we be suspected even now? The sports bug is a peculiar individual. He can spot a phoney quicker than you can split an atom. Why not let the screening in his hands? He'll be as efficient as the best of them.

RADIO SHOT IN ARM FOR GAME

Editor of THE SPORTING NEWS:

Despite the Page 1 cartoon in the March 1 issue, depicting one lone fan entering the park because he is stone deaf and can't listen to the broadcast of a major league game which is being received outside the park, I think the new radio restrictions will help, rather than hurt, the game.

The more baseball on the air waves, the greater the chance for increased interest. The died-in-the-wool fan will always attend games. It's the casual fan that radio will convert into a rabid partisan and gates will boom as a result.

Operation of a Ball Club

No. 2--Tickets

By MILT WOODARD

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the second of a weekly series on operation of a ball club by Milt Woodard, former baseball writer who now is a club executive. Woodard, who formerly covered the White Sox and Cubs for the Chicago Sun-Times and THE SPORTING NEWS, became general manager of the Grand Rapids, Mich., club in 1948 and last year was general manager of the White Sox' farm at Hot Springs, Ark.

Milt Woodard

Those little pasteboards, representing a token of admission as well as the rain-check, are the first liaison between the fan and the ball club. For this reason, the ticket—and the way it's handled—is of great importance.

Although they come in various sizes and colors, there basically are only three standard kinds of baseball tickets. There's the box or reserved seat variety, which come dated and usually numbered as to seat, aisle and section. Then there's the general admission tickets, broken down into two types—roll and strip.

Tickets are one of the most inexpensive phases of a baseball operation. The most expensive, of course, is the reserved or box seat ducat. The others, either roll or strip, average approximately one-tenth of a cent per ticket.

Any one of a half dozen reliable ticket firms will handle all details, such as wording copy, computing taxes, selecting colors. They require only that orders be placed a month or two in advance of opening day.

What to use, roll or strip ticket? That's as debatable—and as unanswered—as the one about whether the chicken or the egg came first. The oldest, and still most popular, are the roll tickets, looking not unlike a cardboard wheel and containing 2,000 tickets. For tax purposes, all tickets must be numbered.

Special Tickets Often in Souvenir Form

The strip ticket has many proponents. It amounts to a pad of sheets, each made up of ten or 20 tickets. Some operators believe the strip ticket is easier to handle and can be sold more quickly than the roll; others hold a contrary opinion. It's largely a matter of personal preference, like whether you want strawberries with your breakfast cereal or just strawberries alone.

Occasionally, there's the special ticket for opening day and community nights. They can become quite elaborate, taking the shape of baseballs, bats or, perhaps, the club's emblem. If possible, opening day tickets should include the team's entire season schedule on the rain-checks. Thus, if the game is not rained out, the fan will have a year's schedule available to place in his wallet or her purse.

Ticket sellers can be recruited readily among bank tellers and clerks, as well as among cashiers in department stores, restaurants and other business establishments. They should open their ticket windows with from $50 to $100 in change each night. They should, and usually do, balance to the penny at close-up time, although a 25-cent or 50-cent variation either way isn't too uncommon.

Ticket takers should be personable, courteous and devoted to the rule that "No one is admitted without a ticket." One gateman usually can handle the output of two ticket sellers.

Courtesy, marked by a "thank you" each time a fan purchases his ticket and presents it at the grate, is all-important. Psychologically, it makes the fan feel welcome upon entering the park and, if the show inside is presentable, he'll more than likely be back the next night.

And Be Nice to Uncle Sam's Representatives

In minor leagues, ticket sellers receive from $2 to $5 each night, with $3 for single games and $4 for double-headers about average. Ticket takers usually receive $1 less than the seller. Park police, at least one of which is a necessity to fulfill National Association demands for the protection of the visiting club, should handle parking and police the grounds for $3 to $5 nightly.

The federal government must receive its 20 per cent of each admission price, and it is the club's obligation to make payment to the Department of Revenue on or before the last day of the following month. Also, in most states, there's a sales tax to contend with, not to mention municipal tax in some towns.

The successful baseball operator deals most cordially and sincerely with his local Internal Revenue man. Any investigations he makes should be welcomed, and it is well to suggest that he check the gates several times each year. Give him all the passes he needs, but be sure each requires the payment of a federal tax.

Baseball has a reputation to retain among Internal Revenue people. It should never be jeopardized.

NEXT WEEK—HAPPY DAYS AGAIN, OR SPRING TRAINING.

All Want 'Pair Behind Home Dugout'

With the releases of the National and American League schedules this month, orders for more than 25,000,000 tickets will be placed among the various ticket concerns by the 16 major league clubs. Here's how Tom Maloney, ticket manager for the White Sox, figures his ticket order for the 1950 season at Comiskey Park:

"We will order full sets of 50,000 tickets for all Sunday, holiday and night games. For week-day dates, our order will depend upon the popularity of the visiting club. In the case of the Yankees or Red Sox on a Saturday afternoon, we will order three-fourths of a full set. When the White Sox play the Browns on a Monday, we'll order about 4,000 tickets. If we need more, we always have emergency sets.

"As usual, the biggest demand among the fans will be for a pair right behind the home dugout."

Operation of a Ball Club

No. 14--The Clubhouse

By MILT WOODARD

Editor's Note: The "back room" or player's "office," termed politely the clubhouse, is the scene of many operations important to the home or visiting ball club, and what goes on there, and how, are told in this story, the fourteenth in a series by Milt Woodard, former Chicago sports writer who put in the last two years as business manager at Grand Rapids, Mich., and Hot Springs, Ark.

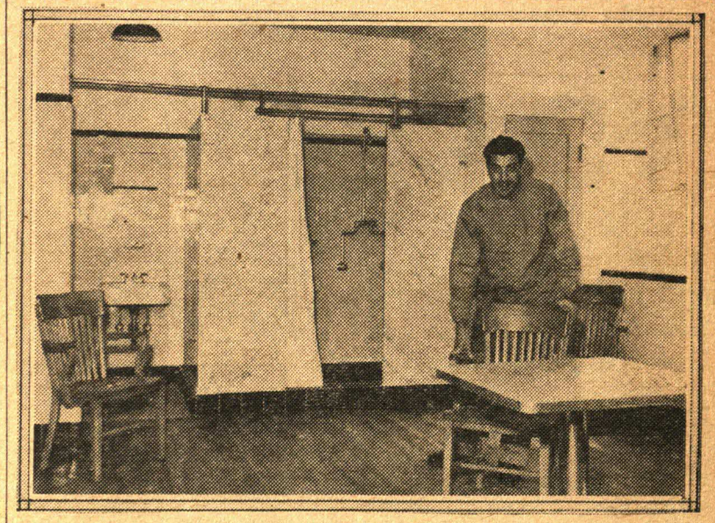
It's where the tall tales of the game originate. It's where the has-been gets his walking papers to a lower league and where the rookie learns he's on his way to stardom as a regular. It's the workday office of the ball player, where he spills his emotions and becomes the man, not the sports-page personality. It's the clubhouse—the one sanctum of the park which doesn't belong, almost en tote, to the public.

Almost every park in Organized Ball has a home and visitors' clubhouse, ranging from the small, unpainted cubbyholes of Class D to the carpets and tile and high windows of Yankee Stadium's elaborate layout. On the average, the clubhouse is a good-sized room housing a few benches, 20 or 25 open lockers, a rubbing table and a partitioned section hiding from one to a half-dozen shower nozzles.

In almost every instance, the visitors' clubhouse is far less pretentious than the home quarters. In the majors and high minors, the only services to the visiting players are usually a stack of towels, a handful of soap cakes, and a perfunctory cleanup the next day.

The National Association, which governs the game in the minors, estimates that 80 per cent of the 400-odd parks in Organized Ball have adequate facilities for both the home and visiting clubs. A concentrated drive by President George M. Trautman has also brought a marked improvement in the umpire quarters the last two years, and he now estimates 90 per cent of all parks have satisfactory dressing rooms for the arbiters.

In charge of every home clubhouse is a custodian, often a young baseball fanatic enjoying vicarious participation in the game by shining shoes, airing uniforms and cleaning up after his heroes. For his troubles, he usually receives a most nominal salary from the club itself, and the rest from an assessment system which has long been traditional in baseball.



ONE OF THE FINEST umpires' quarters in the major leagues is in Fenway Park, where the Red Sox provide marble shower stalls, tiled walls and chair and table accessories. The attendant is Vincent Orlando.

In the minors, the assessments average about $1 a month from each player in Class C and D, $1.50 in B, and $2 and up from Class A to the majors. Clubhouse attendants can average a mere $50 a month in the low minors to substantial salaries in the majors, especially if they cut into the World's Series melon.

Many Operate Own Concessions

Aside from shining shoes and running errands for the athletes, the clubhouse attendant's main job is to guard equipment, air out sweat-heavy uniforms and clean up the premises. In the majors and high minors, specially-heated rooms are provided to dry out the uniforms. In the lower classifications, it's done by laying the suits on railings and chairs or on the infield grass during the morning.

The more ambitious clubhouse attendants augment their income by operating their own concessions inside the clubhouse, selling soft drinks, tobacco and candy bars.

Sometimes the clubhouse attendant doubles in brass as a trainer, for which his total income ranges upwards of about $35 a week. Few clubs below Class B are able to afford a full-time trainer, however, although some employ "rubbers" for home games at about $4 a night.

In the minors, the clubhouse custodian often is placed in charge of the ball and bat boys. Bat boys usually work for the honor of the job, plus an occasional baseball, while ball boys are paid about $1 a night.

Cleanup of the stands, entrances and concession areas is a major operation in the majors, requiring as many as ten or 15 experienced sweepers and laborers. In the low minors, it's often a one-man job, for which he is paid around $30 a week.

NEXT WEEK — FRONT OFFICE AND THE FIELD

A Blue Plate at Shibe Park

Whenever Coach Jimmie Dykes enters the A's clubhouse at Shibe Park, he can still see imaginary splashes of purple on the ceiling and walls. And, true to Dykesian tradition, he blames it all on an umpire.

"When I was with the A's some 20 years ago," Dykes recalls, "I was a pretty nifty dresser . . . even as I am today. One afternoon, while dressed in a brand new sports ensemble, I was swinging a bat in the clubhouse.

"Right across from me was Eddie Rommel, who was playing with the A's at the time, but now has resorted to the base profession of umpiring. Rommel was just biting into a big piece of blueberry pie when he saw me with the bat. Without a word, he lobbed it strike-high in front of me.

"Yes, you're right. I hit that piece of pie like it was a home run pitch in the eleventh. And did it splatter!—all over my new suit, all over Rommel and the ceiling and the walls and everybody in the place. Whatta wallop."

Operation of a Ball Club

No. 1--Baseballs

By MILT WOODARD

EDITOR'S NOTE: What are the problems involved in the operation of a ball club? This question is becoming more important as the result of a reduction in major league farm systems and a trend toward a return of independent ownership. Fans, too, always are interested in facts that reveal the inside operation of a club.

As a former baseball writer, covering the White Sox and Cubs for the Chicago Sun-Times and THE SPORTING NEWS, before he turned to the baseball front office in 1948, Milt Woodard is well qualified to describe the administrative details of a club. He started in baseball as general manager of the Grand Rapids club of the Central League, and last year worked for the White Sox as general manager of their Hot Springs farm of the Cotton States League.

Woodard, as a trained newspaper observer turned club executive, will author a weekly series on club operation, starting in this issue with a story on the supply of baseballs.

Milt Woodard

The veteran scout was explaining his bird-dogging system to a new ivory hunter.

"When I come into a strange park," he revealed, "the first thing I do is get in touch with all the club executives."

"But how do you know where to find them in the crowd?" the scouting tyro asked.

"That's easy," the old-timer explained expansively. "That's easy. Why, I just watch the box seats. When the first foul ball goes over the fence, five men will start rushing toward the exits. They're the club president, business manager and three directors—each trying to retrieve the ball. It never fails."

This battle for the baseball may sound like a laughing matter. But it isn't; not to those numerous minor league clubs which are operating close to the belt-buckle and find only a notch or two left. To them, the baseball problem is serious.

To the average fan, a baseball is something to covet for autograph purposes and, perhaps, to capture if it goes bouncing around in the grandstand. To the average player, a baseball is a commodity which should come in endless abundance from the supply closet of the home club. To the game's executive, the baseball is—or should be—the bread-and-butter item which could mark the difference between profit and loss in the operation of a minor league baseball club.

Baseball Costs Now Up to $12,000 for Majors

Even at professional league prices, baseballs are a major item of club expense. In the majors, the annual cost of baseballs is more than the salary of an average, journeyman player. Some major league clubs have used more than 700 dozen baseballs in a single year, costing approximately $12,000.

In the minors, even the most frugal of Class D operations expect to spend $1,000 or more on baseballs. The average D or C club uses approximately 100 dozen baseballs at a league rate of slightly less than $17 a dozen. The baseball turnover and expense generally increase with the classification, although some Class AA clubs spend less on balls than do Class B operators. That depends on the business manager.

Three unallied elements are necessary in the conservation of baseballs. First—and most important in the low minors—is the philosophy among the fans that the baseball belongs to the club, not the people. If that foul ball which landed among the fans in the grandstands or bleachers is thrown back regularly onto the playing field, the battle of the baseball is half won.

Secondly, it is important to construct adequate barriers atop the grandstand in order to stop the foul ball from landing outside the park. And once they clear such barriers, it's important to have an efficient system toward regaining these strays. A corps of about three hustling ball boys, receiving downwards of $1 each a game, is often the solution. Some operators pay from 25 to 50 cents for unscarred baseballs retrieved by the army of youngsters who usually surround a baseball park at game-time.

Co-operation of Team Pilot Necessary

Finally, the co-operation of the field manager is necessary for a full-fledged savings of baseballs. It should be understood that it's a part of his managerial duties to police the baseballs, especially during batting practice on the road.

Each of the 60 leagues in O. B. adopts a ball produced by one of four manufacturers who furnish the game with a half million balls annually. Today, almost all baseballs, no matter who the manufacturer, have a standard resilience in keeping with the major league balls. The leeway in resilience is such, however, that the "rabbit" ball still exists in a modified form in some leagues.

League rules usually call for a dozen, or more, baseballs to be turned over to the umpires a half hour before game-time. They, in turn, rub the gloss and sheen from each ball with a compound of water and clay or dirt. Then the balls are ready for play; ready for a full life in game and batting practice or, just as likely, a resting place on someone's mantle piece.

That, along with a possible profit or loss for the season, is up to the club executives.

"Well, I think our second base problem finally is solved. This boy Thompson looks like the goods. That's the sign of a fine fielder. I like the way he gets around and I think he'll hit, too."

Time passes and Thompson does all right—even by Durocher's standards. Just to play it safe, the Giants acquire Second Baseman Dave Williams from Atlanta for an outlay of $40,000. Williams plays in 13 games and hits a puny .240.)

ACT 3

(The 1949 season now is over and the Giants still talk about needing replacements "down the middle." Finally, in December, they give the Boston Braves four players in exchange for Shortstop Al Dark and Second Baseman Ed Stanky. Acquisition of Stanky gets Durocher in conversational gear again. He says:)

"Stanky is my type of player. There is no question in my mind that he will make our infield stronger. He's the kind of player who helps any club—the kind we've needed all along."

Speed and Defense Bolstered by Housecleaning; Rookies Are Expected to Contribute to New Zip

By KEN SMITH

NEW YORK, N. Y.

After having taken a back seat to the champion Yankees and Dodgers, the Giants now are making their bid for fan attention, with news about the makeup of the 1950 team getting its share of the headlines, starting with the six-man deal with the Braves.

Prior to that time, the silence at 104 West Forty-second street was noticeable. Club officials realized that comments about their rookie class would not satisfy the customers, who were clamoring for vigorous action to put the Giants back in the first division. So nobody said anything, and a Brooklyn wag asked: "Are the Giants still in the league?"

Don Mueller

However, with the Braves' deal bringing Al Dark and Eddie Stanky to supply a spirited double play combination, more attention began to be centered on the rookies in order to determine how they will blend with the new setup.

Dave Williams, for one, seemed like a little fellow to be helping to lead the team out of the second division, but as an understudy to Stanky he shapes up as a valuable individual. Don Mueller, who hit .358 in 36 games with the Giants in 1948, is coming back as the regular right fielder. Previously he was a mere pinch-hitter who failed at that job during 1949 and had to be sent to Minneapolis, where he again thrived as a regular.

With the team becoming a swift and defense-minded outfit overnight, the other youngsters assume more significance as their signed contracts arrive, particularly Bill Jennings, Jack Maguire, Rudy Rufer and Pete Milne. Henry Thompson and Jack Lohrke, as members of last year's spiritless aggregation, attracted little attention, but as members of a new organization they are bright figures as they battle it out for the third base job.

Pitching Gains Stature

Simultaneous with the Boston deal came the announcement of Dave Koslo's earned-run championship and the ment that the Giants will have a B team spring schedule, further proof that Leo Durocher's policies are in vogue, filled the headlines.

Jonnard Credits His Life to Stoneham's Fast Action

NEW YORK, N. Y. — Horace Stoneham isn't much in evidence during the off-season, and some people may wonder where he can be found. But Clarence (Bubber) Jonnard was able to locate Stoneham quickly in an emergency, and credits the Giants' president with saving his life.

Jonnard relates that when his appendix burst recently, he telephoned Stoneham, who arrived in a hurry and rushed Bubber to a hospital. As a result, Jonnard made a swift recovery and is making the rounds again, keeping his eyes peeled for another Bobby Thomson.

CARDS FAIR TO FARM FANS

Editor of The Sporting News:

I am in complete agreement with Gustav Pfeiffer's squawk about major league clubs which recall minor league players in the middle of a pennant race.

The Dodgers are especially bad offenders in this regard. Look what they did to Montreal last year by bringing up Don Newcombe. The Cardinals, on the other hand, have been exceedingly considerate of their affiliates. In 1941, they brought up Howie Pollet from Houston in mid-season, but the Buffs at the time had a substantial lead and coasted home. In 1943 they brought in Al Brazle when Sacramento was mired in the basement and last year they recalled Solly Hemus from an already weak Houson club. Perhaps the policy has cost the Redbirds a flag or two and certainly hurt them at the gate, but at the same time they have cultivated many new fans in their minor league territory.

WHO'S DARK TRYING TO KID?

Editor of The Sporting News:

If Alvin Dark was serious in saying that he has learned more about playing shortstop from Leo Durocher than he ever learned before, he surely isn't saying much for himself or his buddy, Eddie Stanky.

For two years we've read how Stanky and Dark discussed baseball from sun-up to sun-down. Didn't Dark absorb any of the finer points of the game in those sessions? And since the Braves played the Dodgers and Cardinals 22 games annually in that period, didn't Dark learn anything from watching such old masters as Pee Wee Reese and Marty Marion?

Yes, I've been reading about the game from Charley Dryden's day, but there's never been anything to equal Dark's statement. Or was it a case of someone trying to duplicate some Ring Lardner fiction?

Editor of The Sporting News:

The Red Sox player who accused Jack Kramer of letting them down in the clutch and failing to win crucial games surely has a short memory.

Twice within the last nine days of the 1948 season, Kramer defeated the Yankees, allowing only three runs. A defeat in either game would have cost the Sox a tie for the pennant. In addition, Jack won four straight for the

Ruth Would Have Topped Hauser in Millers' Park

Editor of The Sporting News:

It appears as though Joe Hauser, ex-slugger de luxe of the Minneapolis Millers, has gotten himself hot under the collar for no reason at all.

I have seen Hauser propel a number of circuit clouts in Louisville's Parkway Field and there is no doubt that he was quite a menace with the willow. I was not attempting to run him down as a hitter, but to establish the fact that had Babe Ruth played his home games at Nicollet Park, there would be no comparison to the 69 that he (Hauser) hit.

Yes, I am well aware of the fact that a team "does play on the road." Seventy-seven games to be correct. And also 77 at home.

Hauser states that he is sure that he did hit more on the road that year, yet Halsey Hall, who covered the Miller games that year, says, "Well, I don't know about the more."

Editor's Note: Hauser hit 19 home runs on the road in the year he socked 69.

I have the highest regard for Unser Choe as a powerful slugger while with Minneapolis in his day, but I still contend that the Bambino would have made a much higher number of round-trippers had he been able to play his half season in Nicollet.

OBJECTS TO PCL OBJECTORS

Editor of The Sporting News:

It's about time Commissioner Chandler cracked down on the Pacific Coast League with its continual squawking about exemption from the player draft. The International League and American Association, other Triple-A leagues, do not yelp about the draft, while the PCL is always mouthing off. What makes those Coast fellows think they're superior to other leagues in the same classification? The best treatment for such chronic bleating would be for the Commissioner to tell them to shut up or get out of Organized Ball. The

Yankees Follow Trend, Drop Five of 20 Farm Clubs

Stengel Will Supervise Special School for Players of Clubs in Minors at Phoenix, Jan. 23-Feb. 12

By DAN DANIEL

NEW YORK, N. Y.

Casey Stengel

In line with the tendency revealed in the American and National leagues recently to cut down the expense of chain store operation, the Yankees have announced the abandonment of five farms and reduction of their affiliates to a total of 15.

Clubs dropped from the chain are Newark of the International League, Augusta of the Sally, Ventura of the California, Victoria of the Western International and Manchester of the New England League. Manchester quit last season, and the NEL died at the minors' convention in Baltimore last month.

The official announcement that Newark had been dropped tips the completion of the deal with the Cubs, even though George Weiss says that this transaction has yet to be closed. The Cubs' option to buy the franchise and some players for $150,000 expires January 15. The club probably will be shifted to Springfield, Mass.

The dropping of five clubs from the Yankee chain has been accompanied by the hiring of additional scouts, trouble-shooters and supervisors.

Johnny Neun, Bill Skiff, Burleigh Grimes, Dutch Zwilling and Spud Chandler have been designated as trouble-shooters.

"The abandonment of five farms means that we have decided to follow a policy of greater specialization in developing players for the Yankees," says an official communique from 745 Fifth Avenue.

The Yankees, like other major clubs, have found that the task of manning a farm system of more than 15 clubs means the signing of players on a hit-and-miss basis and the wasting of a lot of money and time on youngsters who never should have been hired in the first place. Only Brooklyn and the Cardinals have failed to retrench.

Here is how the revised farm system shapes up;

AAA—Kansas City, American Association.

AA—Beaumont, Texas League.

A—Binghamton, Eastern League.

B—Norfolk, Piedmont League; Quincy, Three-I League.

C—Amsterdam, Canadian-American League; Joplin, Western Association; Grand Forks, Northern League; Twin Falls, Pioneer League.

D—Easton, Eastern Shore League; Newark, Ohio-Indiana League; Lagrange, Georgia-Alabama League; Independence, K-O-M League; Fond du Lac, Wisconsin State League; McAlester, Sooner State League.

Special School for Farmhands

In line with the policy of greater specialization, the Yankees have announced a special school for minor league players—players varied in experience from Triple-A to one year in Class D—at Phoenix, Ariz., from January 23 through February 12. Phoenix is the training base of the Giants.

The staff at the school will be headed by Casey Stengel. His assistant will be Johnny Neun. Also serving will be Jim Turner and Frank Crosetti of the Yankees' coaching corps, as well as Bill Skiff, Joe Devine and Eddie Leishman, Pacific Coast scouts, and Joe Kuhel, manager of Kansas City.

The success of the Yankee "seminar system" at last year's St. Petersburg, Fla., training camp gave birth to the idea of the Phoenix school. It was reasoned that if major leaguers could be helped in these instructional classes,

Yanks May Propose Penalty for Clubs That Disclose Confidential Swap Bids

By DAN DANIEL

NEW YORK, N. Y.

George Weiss

It is quite likely that when the American League meets again, the Yankees may propose a penalty for clubs which divulge strictly confidential matters, such as offers of trades.

Neither George M. Weiss nor any other official of the New York club ever reveals the names of players offered to other teams, even confidentially.

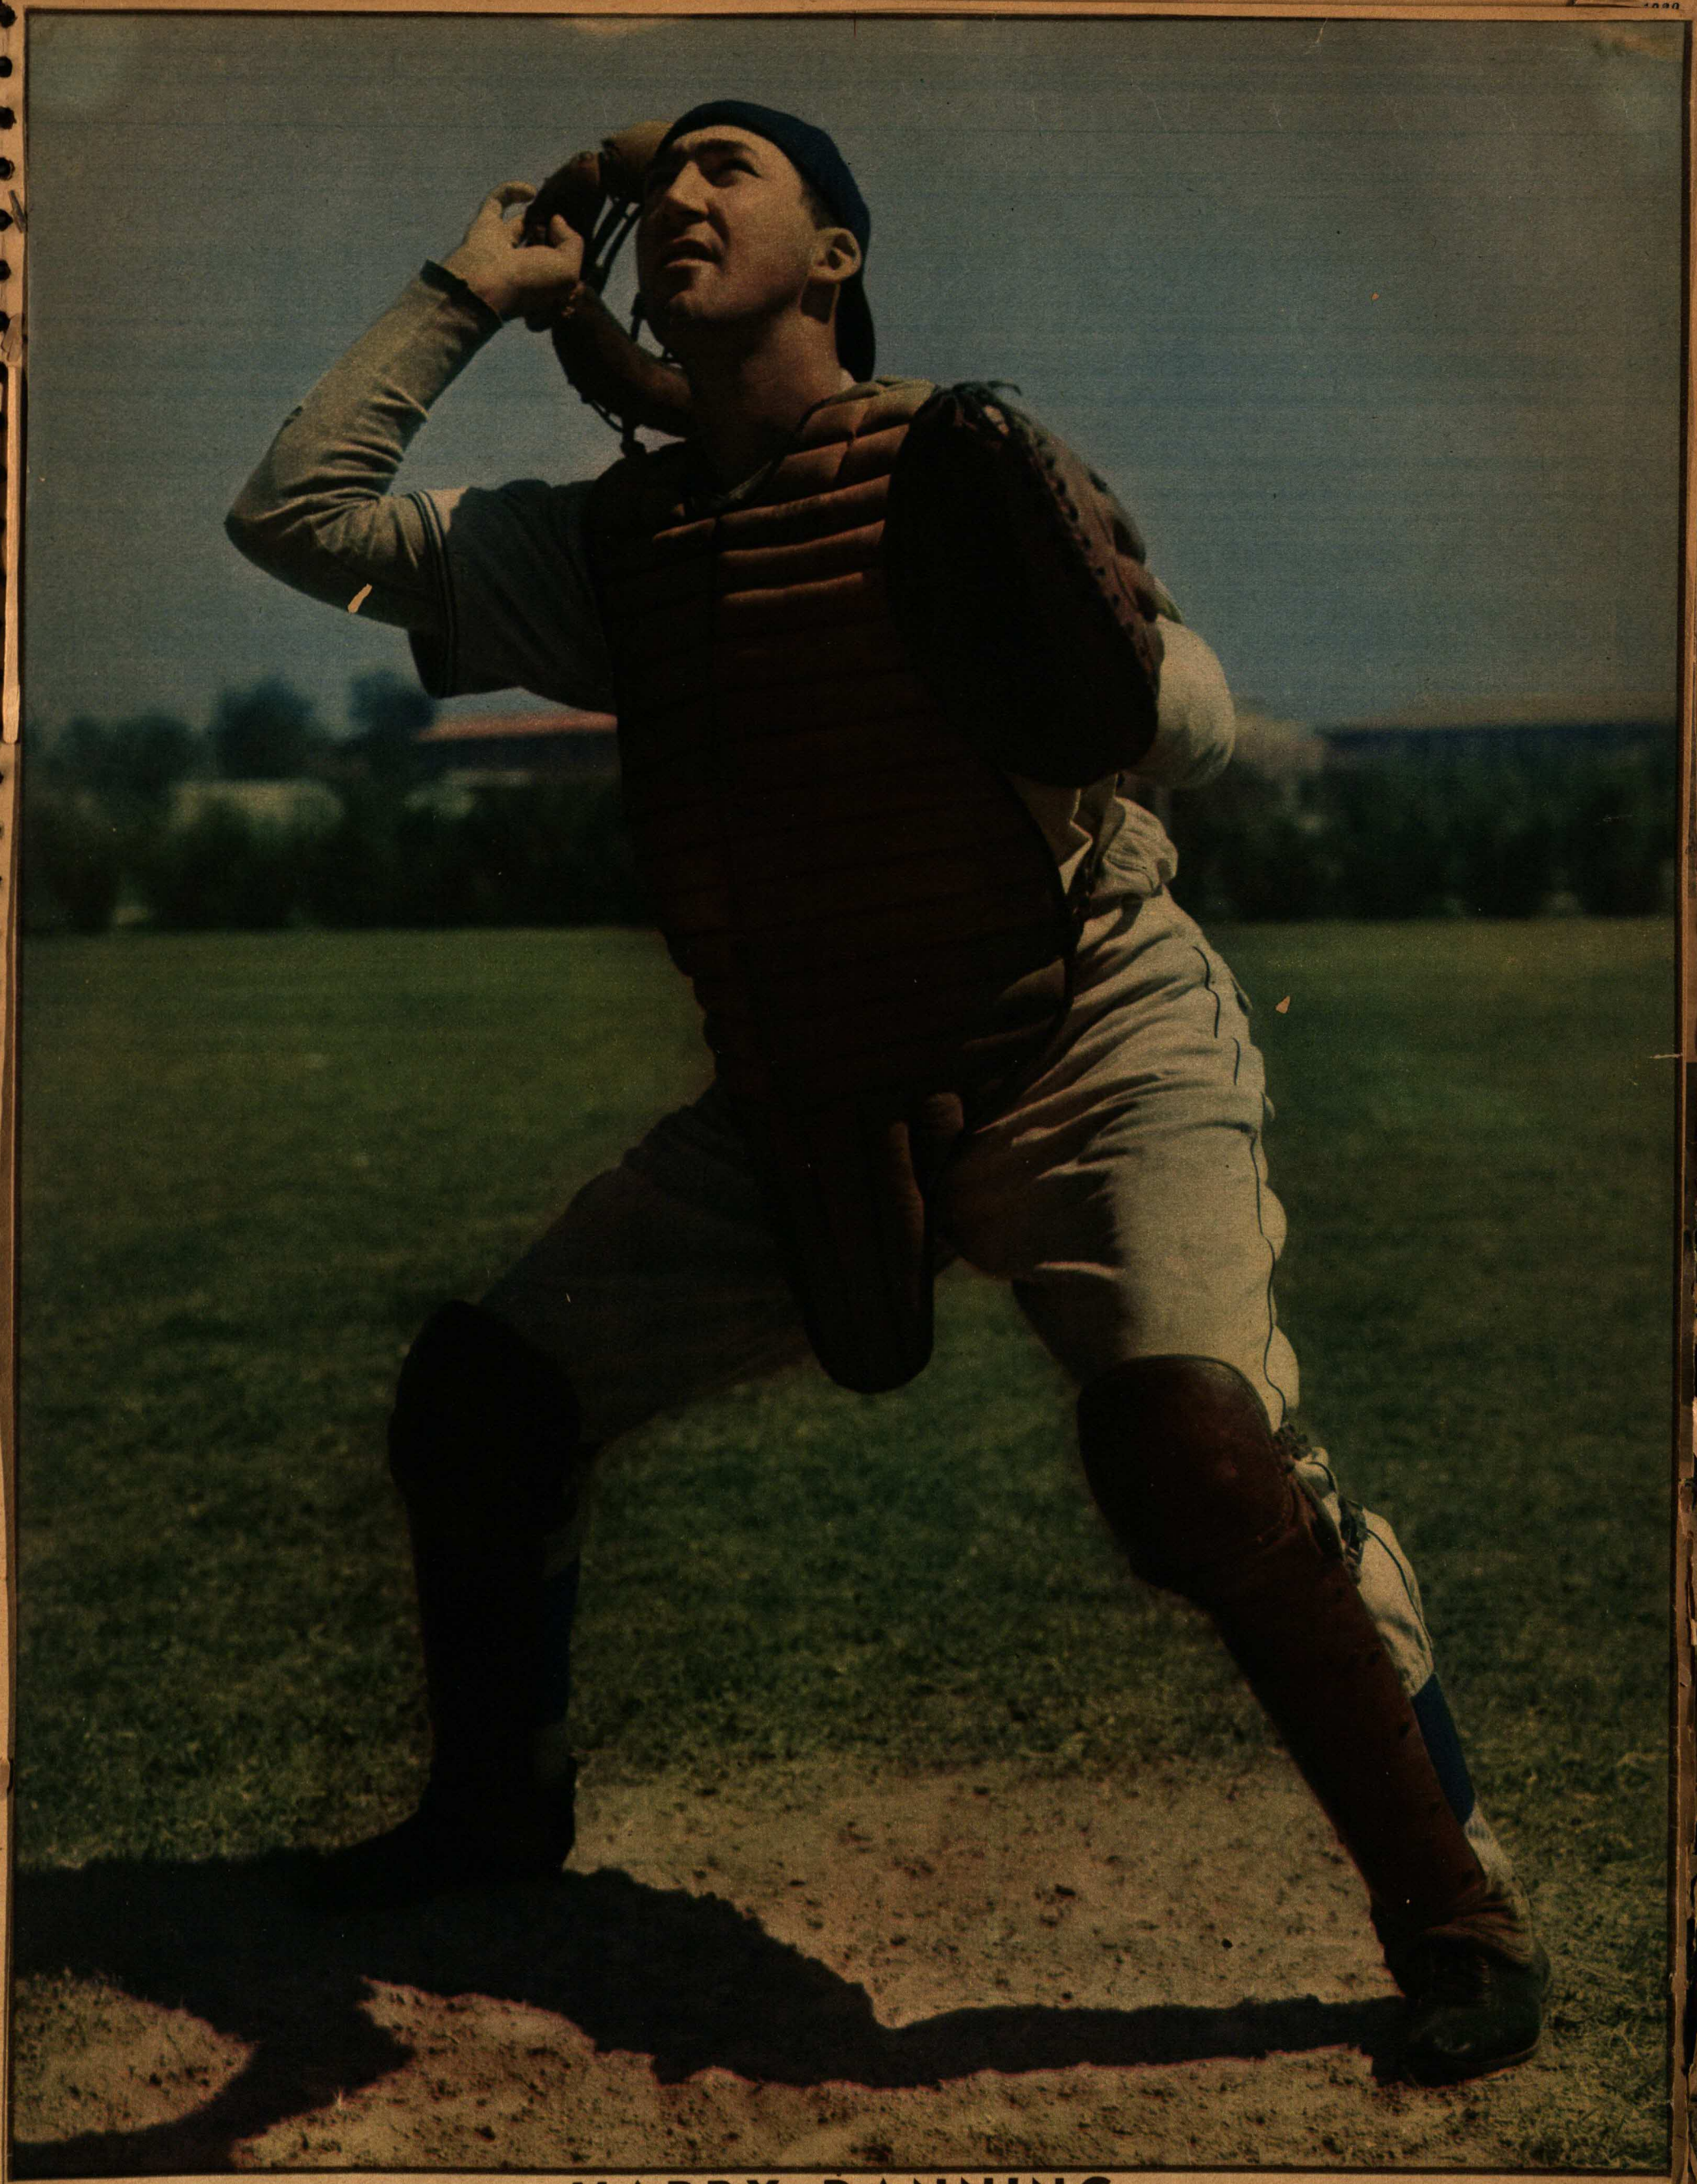
However, the Bombers have found that as soon as they present a proposition, the other club usually spills it to its baseball writers.

The latest case in point came up in the offer to exchange Johnny Lindell for Pitcher Phil Marchildon of the Athletics.

If this proposition had not been divulged in Philadelphia, the trade probably would have gone through, for good or for worse.

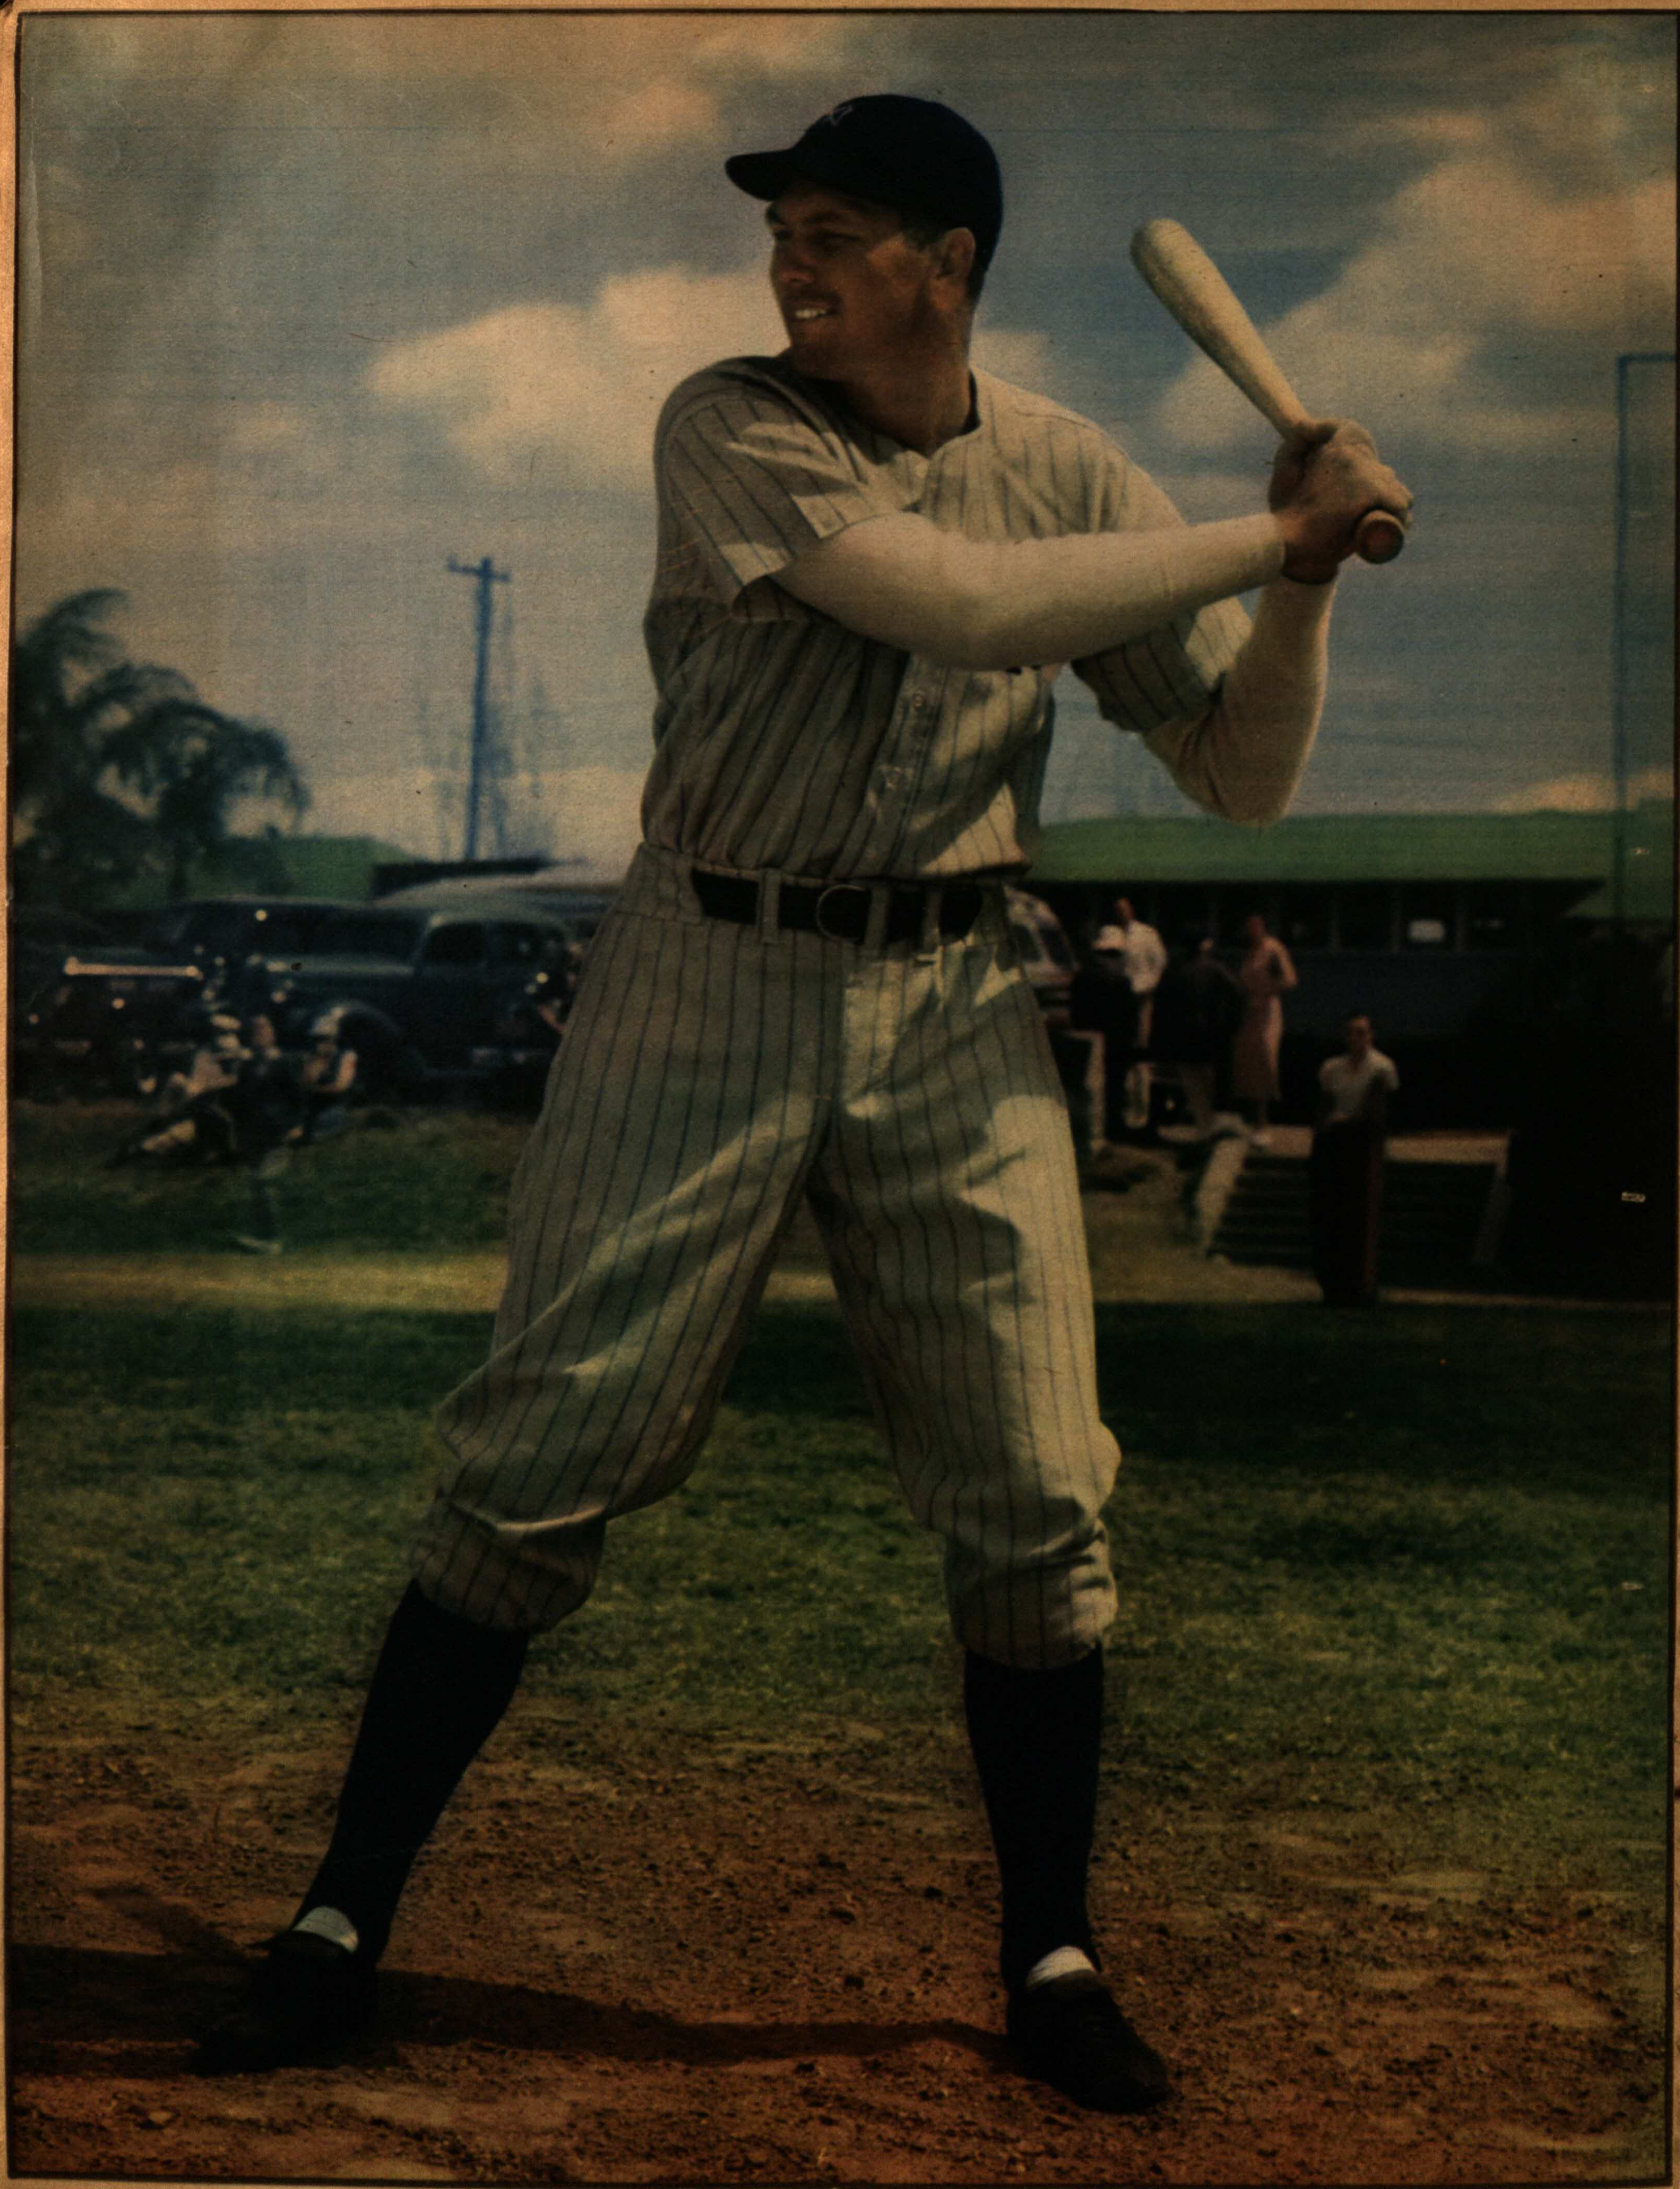
However, the wires one afternoon carried the story out of Philadelphia that the Yankees had offered Lindell for the sore-armed hurler, and added that Connie Mack had protested that Weiss was willing to give up too little for Phil, who last season did not win a game and was charged with three setbacks.

When the Yankee office was asked about the story, Red Patterson admitted that the deal had been broached, and he made some remarks on a method of conducting business which



HARRY DANNING

Sparkplug of the battling Giants in the National League is husky, hard working Harry Danning, the man behind the mask behind the plate at most of the baseball games played by Bill Terry's men. The 27-year-old catcher is six feet one, weighs 185 pounds, bats and throws right-handed. He hit .306 last year, batted in 60 runs, and collected 9 homers out of 137 hits while turning in a fine fielding mark of .984. Harry came to the Giants in 1931 from Los Angeles, Cal., his home town. Farmed out then, he was recalled in 1933 and displaced Gus Mancuso as regular in 1937.



BILL DICKEY

One of the biggest of the big guns in baseball's most feared attacking lineup—the Yankees—is rangy Bill Dickey, 32, catcher extraordinary of the World's Champions. He is six feet two inches tall, weighs 185 pounds, throws right-handed and bats left-handed. His fielding mark last year was .987 and he chalked up a batting mark of .313 which included 142 hits, 27 of them homers. He was among the American League leaders in runs batted in with a record of 115. Bill's home town is Little Rock, Ark. He has been a regular with the Yankees for the last ten years. The new Giant infield ends Spring training. They are, left to right, Bonura, first base; Whitehead, second base; Jurges, short-stop, and Myatt, third base. None of the players started for the Giants last year. Their 1938 records follow: Bonura hit .289 for the Washington Senators, batted in a high total of 114 runs; Whitehead, with the Giants, was out all season because of illness; Jurges, with the Chicago Cubs, batted .245; Myatt batted .306 for Jersey City of the International League, came to the Giants in mid-season.

Manager Bill Terry and Mel Ott of the New York Giants watch a practice game. Ott, the National League Home Run King, is starting his fourteenth season with the Giants, the only team whose uniform he has ever worn. In 1938 Mel batted .311, led the league with 36 home runs.

Wagner 'Greatest' All-Timer—Latham

By Jimmy Powers
(Sports Editor of The News)

Well, fans, here's an authentic, comprehensive All-Time, All-Star team from a man who can really "go away back." He is Arlie Latham, famed third baseman of the Browns who under Manager Charles Comiskey won the pennant four years in a row—1885-6-7-8!

Arlie was the pet of those "upright piano box" grandstand fans away back in the days when no one used a glove and first bounce was out on foul flies.

Unlike most old-timers, Arlie at 79 is still active. Each Summer afternoon he sits in the Yankee Stadium as a special officer and watches the parade of American League talent pass by. When the Yanks go out of town, Arlie moves over to the Polo Grounds, where he is employed in a similar capacity. He has played in, or looked at, "more ball games than any man alive!"

Arlie has always been in close contact with baseball. He played third base when Connie Mack was a catcher! Arlie cashed his first World Series check ($855) in 1885.

Arlie managed Cincinnati in 1890. He umpired in twenty professional leagues from the National on down. He was the first man in baseball to be signed as a "coach" and he strode the coaching stripe for John McGraw's Giants until 1912.

History Passes In Review

During the World War years Arlie lived abroad promoting baseball games featuring such stars as Herb Pennock and Hank Gowdy. Arlie has seen them come and go, from A. G. Spalding on down to Joe McCarthy.

"I was born March 15, 1860, in West Lebanon, N. H., and my first contact with the sport was as a 12-year-old bat boy for the Lynn, Mass., Live Oaks," said Arlie, speaking from the depths of a comfortable leather chair in his "bachelor apartment" at 568 West 149th St., Manhattan. The walls were plastered with pictures of old-timers, many sporting "handle-bar mustaches" and "pill box" baseball caps.

"I have seen ball players come and go and I want to tell you that there are more good ball players in the big leagues today than there ever were. In the old days only one or two men on a roster were stand-outs and the rest were bums. But today, a man must be good. He must be a power hitter. He must be fast. And he must be a fearless fielder to handle the rabbit ball.

Rabbit Ball Changes Game

"I call modern baseball the golf-stick-rubber-ball game. You've got to give your outfielders a ladder. You seldom see a man playing in short and then running back for a sensational catch. They all stand with their backs against the walls and hope the ball falls into their mitts.

"Maybe the fans of today like it. But the old-time fans had their fun, too. And the team I'm picking for you contains many old time stars who would be stars today. Of that I'm certain.

"Pick the greatest ball player of all time? That's easy. He was Honus Wagner. He was big, he was strong, and he was fast. How he'd gobble up those hits! Did you ever go to a zoo at feeding time and watch the lions snatch at that raw beef. Yumph! Yumph! Just like that! Wagner would pounce on a ball with his huge hands and the batter was out! No question about it, either."

Latham says he is impressed by "hitters." The purpose of the game is to score runs, first, and prevent the other side from scoring runs, second. "That's the order of importance. That's why I say Lou Gehrig is the best first baseman in baseball. No one will deny he is a better hitter than Chase, Terry, Foxx or Cap Anson. Sure, Chase has fielded bunts on the third base side and thrown the runner out. But Chase never hit over .300 in his life and didn't stay up there long enough to be of value to his fans over a long stretch. You can take a team of Chases, and give me a team of slugging murderers like Gehrig, and I'll beat your brains out every afternoon in the week!"

Gehringer Gets High Praise

Latham dips back for his second baseman. "Ah, that Lajoie was ideal. He could hit and he could field. But this Gehringer from Detroit impresses me. He's right up there close to the great Lajoie. I'd rate Eddie Collins next."

The "moderns" get the call at the "hot corner."

"I played against Jimmy Collins when he appeared for the first time. It was at Louisville. I didn't think he was so much. He was good. But he couldn't field any better than Red Rolfe. And Rolfe is a much better hitter. Rolfe can run over to a wall, or railing, and catch fouls much better than Collins. Pie Traynor is next, and my third choice is Jerry Denny. He is such an old-timer you can't find records on him, but he was a great fielder and hitter, much better than Collins."

Honus Wagner, at shortstop, is so far ahead of every one else that Latham insists no one is close to him. He likes Arky Vaughan, Hugh Jennings, John Montgomery

Ward and Travis Jackson, and says they are all about on a par.

Latham's outfield is dominated by Ty Cobb.

"The Georgia Peach was the greatest outfielder of all time. I've seen them all from the days when the Ohio River used to flood our park at Cincinnati and leave a layer of clay silt. We used to catch fouls on the first bounce in those days and the batter was out. Cobb was a selfish guy, but full of fire. When he broke in he couldn't judge flies. He didn't know how to slide, and he couldn't hit very well. But he MADE himself the greatest outfielder in history. He led the American League in batting for twelve years from '07 to '19. He could upset not only an infield, outfield and battery—but he could upset a whole ball park. Fans would scream at him and boo, and he'd run wild. His theory was 'If you keep them throwing the ball long enough, some one is sure to throw it away!'

Cobb Brilliant In Debut

"Cobb made his debut against a Yankee team with Jack Chesbro, the well known spitter, on the mound, and Willie Keeler, Kid Elberfeld, Jim Williams, Hal Chase and Frank Delahanty in the line-up. Against that kind of opposition, Cobb singlehandedly won the game by smashing a two-bagger to left, scoring two runs. His team won, 5-3.

"After Cobb I put Ruth, Sneaker, DiMaggio, Lange, Keeler, Duffy, McCarthy, Fogarty and Wheat. But Cobb was Man O' War coming down that stretch. There was nobody like Cobb. He had some kind of fire burning inside him all the time, April or September, first place or fifth, first inning or last—win or lose, he was trying for all he was worth!"

Latham picks Christy Mathewson as his No. 1 pitcher.

"I'm tempted to put Walter Johnson in there. I guess maybe I would if he had played for a great team like the Giants. Matty had a big edge on Walter in that respect. I liked Alexander, Hubbell, Clarkson, Waddell, Rucker, Young, Welch, Keefe and Hutchinson. Of all the silly things you read in the papers these days the one that gets my goat is this talk about the 'finer type' of college men baseball attracts today. Say, the old-timers, in proportion to their number and the number of college students, drew more. Hutchinson of Yale and Matty of Bucknell were the headliners, but I can remember a lot of college men amongst the old boys. When I was a boy Jim Mutrie, the first Giant manager, came to me in Brockton, Mass., and asked me 'Do you want to go to Yale? It won't cost you nothing. They want you to play baseball.' I turned it down.

Lefties Stronger Than Righties

"Many a time I've seen that crazy Waddell call his outfielders in. Carkson had a great head and plenty of speed. Keefe had a great change of pace and a deceptive slow ball as far back as the '90s. Hubbell gets the best swinging arc out of his long arms and long fingers. Lefties always seem to me to get more on that ball than righties.

"The greatest curve I ever saw any pitcher throw was thrown by Tom Ramsey of Louisville. He was a fatty with a belly like a poisoned toad. He had a wonderful curve. Another great pitcher was Guy Hecker of Louisville.

"My No. 1 catcher? Buck Ewing. He could hit. He was a great base runner. And he was the hardest throwing catcher I ever saw. Threw a ball like a rifle shot. Jimmy Archer was the best thrower from a squat. Tom Daly, with Chicago and Brooklyn, was also good. And King Kelly was a riot. He'd always talk to the rival pitcher when he was at bat. With Welch on the mound he'd say 'Hello, Mickey'—and bing!—he'd slap one behind the runner neat as you please. He was a crack base runner, too. He'd fool you. He'd stand off first, pretend to hitch up his pants or lace his shoes and—zing!—he'd be off to second like a flash.

Billy Sunday Dilly-Dallied

"He couldn't run the 100 yards in less than fourteen seconds but he was a better base runner than Billy Sunday, who could do the 100 in ten seconds. Billy never could make up his mind on passed balls. He'd dillydally too much. Dickey is good. I put him up there on his hitting but Dickey is a bit slow mentally compared with some of those old-timers."

Latham says in justice to the moderns the "stand-and-slug" type of game does not polish up their wits. "They can stand around, lace their shoes, and loaf, waiting for five, eight or ten runs an inning to win a ball game. It's a different type of ball they're playing today. That's why I picked so many men on this All-Time roster. It's a fair balance, I think. The cream of the crop, minus all your newspaper ballyhoo, from 1885 down to 1939."

Home Run in Ninth Topples Cats, 4-3

Pitcher Jack Kraus Blasts Big Blow With Two On, One Out; Loes Losing Pitcher

BY LORIN McMULLEN.
Star-Telegram Sports Writer.

SHREVEPORT, Sept. 18.—Jack Kraus, Shreveport's "forgotten man" in the semifinal Texas League playoff series, blasted a three-run homer with one out in the ninth to turn back the Cats, 4-3, here Sunday.

The left-handed pitcher's blast, which carried high over the 360-foot left-center fence, kept the Sports in the series which for two hours Sunday seemed destined to go down as a rout for Fort Worth in four straight games.

The Cats had gone ahead, 2-0, in the second, 3-0 in the fourth and with Billy Loes pitching held the Sports scoreless until the eighth when they scored one run.

It was a sparse crowd of 4,062 which turned out for the Fort Worth "kill" and many of these had left the game with the outlook hopeless, especially after Frank Benites opened the Shreveport ninth by taking a called third strike.

Over Left Fence.

But Pete Lewis walked on a 3-1 count, Bobby Wilkins blasted a single down the third base line, where Jack Lindsey managed only to knock it down with an extraordinary effort.

That brought on Kraus, who had pitched the eighth and ninth. Loes fired over his first pitch for a called strike, grooved the second and Kraus teed off.

With a high wind blowing [illegible] there never was any [illegible] Ball carrying [illegible] though it was well toward center field.

Kraus was puzzled by the fact that he did not draw a starting assignment against the Cats, against whom he had a 3-2 record in the regular season. This was his first appearance in the series and with his homer he also made himself the Sports' first winning pitcher.

Howard Auman had pitched two innings before Kraus entered, the runs having been scored off Starter Anderson Bush. The Cats collected 10 hits as compared to Shreveport's nine but let numerous chances slip away.

Waste Hits.

The Sports outdid the Cats in wasting first-inning hits. With two out the Cats notched singles by Bundy and Ward only to lose their value as Ward attempted to stretch his knock into a double. Lewis threw him out.

Shreveport registered a triple and a double and still failed to score. The triple was delivered by Davis, whose drive carried over Williams' head. Davis held third as Lindsey threw out Mazur but tried to score on Petty's grounder to Carrasquel, who easily threw him out at the plate.

After this Burge doubled past Ward and made it safely to third on Bundy's high throw.

Williams' base on balls gave the Cats their start toward the two-run second. Carrasquel cooperated with a single, only to be picked off after Bush's pitchout to Lindsey, who was trying to bunt. Lindsey then banged a double against the left field fence that scored Williams, Bragan was walked purposely, Loes struck out and Abrams spanked another double against the left field boards for the second run.

Fiala's grounder stopped the rally.

Benites' single developed into nothing for Shreveport in the second and neither did Bundy's single for Fort Worth in the third. In the fourth, however, to right and this led to another run. Bragan flied to center, Loes reached base on a fielder's choice as Benites took his slow roller and threw late to third and then the run scored as Abrams forced Loes.

Lindsey and Abrams tried a double steal that became the third out.

Fiala's single and an intentional pass for Ward failed to promote further Fort Worth offensive action in the fifth. For the first time in the game the Cats went down in order in the sixth with Auman on the mound, and he did it again in the seventh. Bush had yielded to a pinch-hitter.

After the second Loes had two easy innings but had to bear down in the fifth after a leadoff double by Wilkins. Loes solved this by striking out two of the next three men. Lindsey made a nice play to throw out Davis for the middle out.

Again in the sixth Loes had to cope with a Shreveport double, delivered by Burge with one out. It was a long drive to the right field corner where Bundy seemed to lose it in the sun but on the next play he made a more difficult catch of Brown's drive into near-by foul territory. Benites' strikeout finished the threat.

Sports Score in Eighth.

Loes got by the seventh, too, but gave up a run in the eighth after two were out with Petty's single, a wild pitch and a single to center by Burge before Brown tapped a roller to Loes.

Kraus, who took over the Sports' pitching after a pinch-hitter appeared for Auman, skipped through the eighth easily and in the ninth issued a single to Lindsey who, with two out, was picked off third by Benites. Abrams offered at the ball on what appeared to be a two-out squeeze attempt.

Then came the fatal ninth.

Robert Milliken, who won the opening game, is slated to pitch Monday night's tilt here. Shreveport's selection was undetermined, since Manager Francis "Salty" Parker used both Kraus and Auman Sunday.

Welch Omits Ruth In All-Time Team

By Jimmy Powers

"I pitched the first game the Giants ever played at the old Polo Grounds fifty-six ears ago. I've seen 'em come and go ever since and I want to tell you that in picking n all-time all-star team most experts make a mistake. They ignore brains and go for rawn. Believe me, I could put a dream team on the field of smart fighters who'd eat any team you could assemble. They'd fight at the drop of a hat—but they'd make uns for you."

The speaker was "Smiling Mickey" Welch. He was in his Corona, Long Island, home erched comfortably in a leather chair, waving his hands, grinning amiably and getting p now and then to demonstrate his famed curve ball elivery that once stood the hicago Colts, Dan Brouthers nd other famed sluggers on heir antique and respective ars.

"My all-time team may sound ind of silly to fans of 1939," began the man who was the toast f little old New York back in 883 when the Giants took over he Troy franchise in the National eague and played at 110th Street nd Fifth Avenue. "All I ask ans to remember is that whenever rains clashed with brawn, brains always won. Remember how John McGraw would goad Babe Ruth and beat the Yankees year after year in the World Series? Why he had poor Ruth so mad the Bam was striking out on deliveries McGraw ordered purposely pitched 'into the dirt.' Remember how Carl Hubbell, with his pitching brains, outsmarted all the concentrated power of the American League in the All-Star game?

"Hubbell had Foxx, Gehrig, Cronin, Simmons and other sluggers eating out of his hand. I like a team that has pep and balance, that's the kind of a club I'm going to pick for you."

Welch started off with four pitchers, Christy Mathewson, Tim Keefe, Jack Clarkson and Carl Hubbell. He chose two catchers, Buck Ewing and King Kelly.

Frisch Selected At Second Base

His biggest surprise was Jack Doyle, the old Giant, at first base! He put Frank Frisch, the "money player" so greatly admired by Umpire Bill Klem, at second base. Ed Williamson of the old Cubs is his shortstop—another surprise! And John McGraw is his third baseman.

For the outfield he ignores Babe Ruth and picks Hugh Duffy in left, Ty Cobb in center and Willie Keeler in right.

"There is a team that would just rip the heart out of any club you could put against them. The pitchers would give 'em the high, low, inside, out, slow and fast stuff, driving 'em crazy at the bat. If they did get on base they'd get an awful physical beating. They'd be stepped on, spiked, punched, tripped, gouged, trapped by cutoff plays or lured off base by catcher Ewing who would purposely pretend to have a passed ball. Buck could sit on his haunches, look innocently at his pitcher, and without moving his head, he could make a rifle-shot, side arm flip to first base that would nip many an unwary runner. Buck could pick 'em off any base from his haunches.

"And that King Kelly was a tough one. He didn't look tough, or talk tough, but he was tough. When I was pitching against him I used to shy the first one up around his ears.

"He would say in his rich brogue, 'Now, now, Mickey me bye, I'm just after gettin' me chin shaved this morning.'

"I'd usually let him alone after that mild warning because if I didn't he'd throw the bat at me. King Kelly was a great base runner, too. He was always thinking one jump ahead of the opposition. Gosh! I'd hate to imagine what this base-stealing ball club of mine would do to these poor bewildered pitchers and catchers of today. They'd have them nutty in one afternoon. If you think Pepper Martin ruined Earnshaw, Grove, Walberg and Mickey Cochrane—what do you suppose Ty Cobb, Willie Keeler and Hugh Duffy would do?

"I don't blame the modern pitchers for being so dopey. They lack mental agility because the game today is all stand and slug. If you don't slug, you lose. And I say sluggers wouldn't get a chance against smart pitching. McGraw and Hubbell, in his prime, both proved it."

Mickey Palsy-walsy With Arlie

Mickey Welch will be 80 years old this coming Fourth of July. He works at the local ball parks and he often talks to his pal, Arlie Latham. When Monte Pearson pitched his no-hitter against Washington, Arlie was dazzled by two great plays Joe Gordon made on balls between him and first base.

"They were simple plays," says Welch. "They looked great by contrast to the 'you-do-you-don't' style after the present day but the old timers pulled off that sort of stuff every afternoon. Gordon simply watched Dickey's signs. When he saw an inside pitch going to a left-handed batter he knew there was only one place the lefty could knock that ball and that was into right field. With each pitch, Gordon would dash toward Gehrig. Twice he stopped hard smashes that saved Pearson's no-hitter."

"You probably wonder why I don't pick Hal Chase, Lou Gehrig or Bill Terry at first base over Jack Doyle. Well, I'll tell you—they were lopsided. They didn't have balance. For instance, Chase could field but couldn't hit. Gehrig could hit but couldn't field. Terry would hit and field but couldn't run the bases. Jack Doyle could do everything and do it well.

"The same at shortstop. I like Honus Wagner. I didn't see an awful lot of him. But I do know he wasn't much on the basepaths. He wasn't a well-rounded player and he didn't have the fire, the never-give-up, murder-those-so and so's spirit of Ed Williamson. Ditto for McGraw. He was the brains of baseball. They're still using his strategy. Joe McCarthy, Bill McKechnie, Bill Terry, Frank Frisch—all your modern managers are using McGraw stuff. And they'll admit it."

Mickey Welch got up and went over to his dresser. He poked around a bottom drawer and pulled out a pile of photographs. They were yellowing stills of stars long dead and buried.

"Here are some old pitching pals of mine," he said. "You know the pitchers of the 80's knew every bit as much about 'working' a batter as the pitchers of 1939. The moderns have learned nothing new. In my day we pitched from 50 feet. Today its 60 feet. The hitter has a better chance. Matty, Tim Keefe and Clarkson could handle any club you threw against them. And for your lefty I'd take Hubbell. He's a cool proposition. He won a pennant, carrying along a bunch of Joe Nobodies with him. Imagine winning on one run, week after week. How many games, in his prime, do you think Hubbell would have won pitching for the Yankees?

Combs Fielded Ruth's Flies

"My outfield of Duffy, Cobb and Keeler is fast, they are good hitters and good throwers. My goodness! I know I left Ruth off. He had Combs playing his territory for him half the time. And Ruth was no base runner. And no great shucks as a fighter. I tell you I want all-around men, with balance and fire. Little McGraw could—and did—outsmart Ruth whenever they clashed. And Ruth in those days was in his prime."

We asked Mickey to pick his ideal ball player.

"The greatest all around ball player of all time was Buck Ewing. He could hit, run and throw. I worked with him eleven years and I know what he could do. He used to stay up all night thinking about ways to upset his rivals of the next day. He'd do anything to win. Like McGraw, he'd find out something about an opposing pitcher's love affairs. Next day he'd be out there shouting at him, driving the poor fellow dippy. Like McGraw, his motto was, if you're losing, knock the other fellow down, rough him up, kick him in the shins, poke his eyes out, break his skull open—but beat him. Buck Ewing was the first to originate pre-game clubhouse meetings. Every club in organized baseball copies Ewing's stunt today."

Mickey Welch started to pitch his first professional game in 1877 for the Volunteers of Poughkeepsie. He pitched for Auburn in '78 and Holyoke in '79. He entered the National League in '80 and played for Roger Connor's club at Troy, a red hot sports town, from '80 to '83, when he joined the Giants.

"I can remember my first Giant team, a grand crew. We had two catchers, Buck Ewing and John Clapp, our captain. I pitched and so did John Montgomery Ward. Tip O'Neill also pitched and later played the outfield. He was a good sticker. Roger Connor played first, Dasher Troy, second; Ed Caskins, shortstop; Frank Hankinson, third; Pete Gillespie, left field; Ward and myself alternated in center field when we weren't pitching, and Mike Dorgan played right. I pitched for the Giants for ten years. Chicago beat us out of the pennant by two games in '85, but we won the pennant in '88 and the town went wild."

Mel Ott Named On Giant Team

We asked Mickey to select an all-time all Giant team.

"That's easy. Matty, Keefe, Rusie and Hubbell, pitchers. Ewing, King Kelly and Bresnahan, catchers. Doyle, first base, with Terry runner-up. Frisch, second; Jackson, shortstop, and Devlin, third. The outfield is Ott, right;

5 'Modern' Pla
On Klem's Al

By Jimmy Powers

San Marco Island, Miami, Fla., Feb. 25.—The oldest a William J. Klem, is about to start his 33d year of service in him at his home here today he was supervising repairs on ar for his 65th birthday party. The famed weathervane, depictin old Polo Grounds featuring Christy Mathewson, Chief Meyer

he frequently refers to himself, shone in the sun high above t gainvilleas were in bloom, the royal palms were freshly watered to perfection—and all was well with the world as Bill relaxed went back through the years, his photographic mind selecting a ball team.

Bill Klem is the only man in the world today who has "had his nose" in more than 5,000 baseball contests including 17 World Series, inter-league Spring exhibitions, all-star classics, and a world tour.

From that afternoon in 1902 when he worked his first game in Waterbury in the Connecticut League, Bill has watched the tides of talent ebb and flow.

"My business is umpiring and if you ask me as an umpire to give my opinion of which ball players were best—I'd have to tell you nothing, as an umpire I have no opinions. I shut my mind to the individual and concentrate on the play. But—if you ask me as Bill Klem, a baseball fan, for my private opinions, then that's different. There are certain stars I have watched as a young man—remember I was born in 1874—and I can compare them one with the other and come up with a pretty good team.

"My two surprises are Ginger Beaumont in the outfield and Frank Frisch at second base. I think you will find that almost every one agrees on Mathewson, Wagner, Cobb and Ruth. They were so good they were standouts in lean years and fat.

"Baseball, you know, has its ups and downs, some seasons the leagues are full of talent, corking pitchers, good hitters, smart boys on every club. Then will come a lull. Why, I think it was in 1937 that only one player came out of the entire Southern Association to the Big Top. The tipoff that talent is scarce is when club rosters are loaded down with aged athletes. The youngsters aren't good enough to beat the old-timers out of their jobs."

'Old-Timers' Lead 'Moderns' on Team

Klem picks five "moderns" on his all-time baseball roster—Frank Frisch, Gabby Hartnett, Bill Terry, Babe Ruth and Carl Hubbell.

The proportion is 16 "old-timers" to five "moderns" which means that "your grandfather most certainly saw the better stars."

Klem starts off his team by picking Hal Chase at first base. Chase could do everything almost to perfection, says Bill, "but this fellow Terry was not far behind him. I still say Bill Terry is the ideal modern manager; he knows the game inside out. He was a good hitter and a good fielder and an apt pupil of John McGraw. There was another tricky first sacker named Jake Beckley of Cincinnati. If they offered a prize for trickiness, Jake would win hands down. He could jerk that foot off the cushion and fool an umpire—if you didn't watch him."

Honus Wagner at short was tops, and Jimmy Collins at third, "although Harry Steinfeldt, the fourth man in that Tinker-to-Evers-to-Chance combination was very good. The Cubs needed a man to fill that hole. They weren't going anywhere until they got Steinfeldt and then they started to click."

Pictures Of All-Stars

Pictures of Bill Klem's All-Time All-Stars appear on page four of the Rotogravure Section in this edition. What memories they revive!

whistling across their kneecaps all afternoon."

Klem has words of praise for the 1939 type of ball player but admits he is influenced by their respectful attitude to his profession. The moderns are gentlemanly, not only to each other but to the officials as well. He recalled the day Nap Lajoie, when called out on strikes, disgustedly took his cud of chewing tobacco out of his mouth and threw it into the umpire's face.

The old-time[illegible] we going to fool the umpire?" When there was only one umpire working the game and a man on second, the runner used to "cut" third base when the umpire's attention was diverted to the play at first base.

Lost Series By Fluke

Cap Anson once watched Klem, who inserts his head between the catcher and batter, weaves with the pitch, and changes position for righties and lefties, and Anson grunted:

"You're a great umpire, kid—but if I were in there batting I could fool you."

"All those old guys were always cooking up ways to fool you and fool the opposition," grinned Bill.

Klem admits that even the old-timers were not so smart on certain occasions and he cites a "boner" which cost Connie Mack a World Series with the Giants in 1911.

"It was a bitter battle, home half of the tenth, Larry Doyle on third and Merkle at bat. Merkle flied to Danny Murphy in right. Danny got off a weak throw out of position. I can still see Catcher Ladd, his big mitt stuck out in front of him, cursing and pleading with the ball to hasten its flight."

"Doyle, who was off for home the instant of the catch, launched into a terrific slide right under my nose. He missed the plate by six inches.

"Now, whether Doyle knew he missed it or not, I can't say. Maybe he was acting. Maybe he was afraid that if he turned to tag the plate Ladd would tag him, for Ladd had the ball and was staring mournfully at it. I waited and waited for the Athletics to protest. But they went to the clubhouse, losers by a run that was never scored.

"Under the rules the team on the defense must call my attention to failure to tag. I have no power to interfere. But a 'smartie' would have squawked as a matter of routine, and then I'd have called the runner out."

Admits He's Not Infallible

Klem admits he is not infallible—even in selecting All-Star teams.

"This same Larry Doyle I was telling you about was a deceptive runner. On my first look at him going down to first base he fooled me with his fast lurching stride. But I had already got my 'out' motion under way and it was too late to stop it. Down in my heart I knew he was safe, and I determined never to 'miss' his stride again. I'll never forget. When I called Larry out that day John McGraw was coaching at third.

"John clapped his hands dramatically to his forehead and fell backward, stiff as a log, in a mock faint.

"Did I throw McGraw out? Say, not if he kicked my shins would I have put him out that day. I knew I'd missed the decision.

"It's a mystery to me why ball players don't get better and better with each new generation like track stars, automobiles and radios," grinned Klem as he deftly pruned a purple bougainvillea vine. "But they don't. The old-timers made better stained glass for cathedral windows. They were better sculptors. And they mixed paints better and were better artists.

Great Players Are Artists

"I guess we can just put it this way—a great baseball player is a great artist. He must be gifted with a fine eye, a sense of timing and rhythm, muscular co-ordination, an inward fire like Ty Cobb's and he must be a master of technique."

Klem has high hopes for the future of baseball.

"I'm 65—and I won't go on forever. But there may come a day when we will breed giants who will replace these old-time heroes I have picked for you. Right now, we are going through a stage where only one thing was emphasized—the home run. The game was twistd and distorted to that end and other things were neglected. The National League was first to make an adjustment, campaigning for the return of a baseball—not a golf ball.

We are on steadier ground again. "Yep—it reminds me of the high flying days of the Florida land boom. I think the home-run boom has burst."

KLEM'S ALL-TIME ALL-STAR TEAM

Here is the second in a series of all-time, all-star baseball teams. This one was selected by William J. (Bill) Klem, dean of umpires, who recently was honored by New York baseball writers for his outstanding service to the game. Bill still insists he never made a mistake, so this team must be right.

Mack's All-

MARCH 5, 1939 — By Jimmy Powers

Lake Charles, La., March 4.—Well, you modern baseb unexpected quarter! Connie Mack, holder of all records for l who began his professional career as a catcher for Washingt league clubs for 44 years, who personally discovered Home R

Bender, Jack Coombs, Eddie Collins, Stuffy McInnis, Jack Bar
a great team apart after the World Series in '14 and then ca eration with pennant winners in '29, '30 and '31—this belove a truly amazing All-Time All-Star team. In his roster of moderns.

Cornelius McGillicuddy, for that is his correct name, was a smiling, healthy and alert old character when I talked to him both here and in his Fort Meyers, Fla., home. His eyes were bright, his step firm, his voice clear and his brain as sharp as a surgeon's scalpel.

Connie is more articulate, more concise, and more intelligent than any baseball manager in the business today. Each of the fifteen rival big league managers agrees Connie is the "dean." With the passing of Miller Huggins and John J. McGraw, Connie is left to rule as "All-Time All-Star Manager." The American League has officially recognized this fact and has unanimously appointed Connie to lead his circuit's team in the 1939 All-Star game in New York.

"My boy, there have been many great ball players and the team you ask me to pick may not necessarily be the best team of all. It will merely be my idea of the best team. I'll probably wound the feelings of certain fans when I say that, to my mind, Mickey Cochrane was the greatest catcher of all time! I think Jimmy Foxx is the best first baseman—better than Chase, Tenney or Sisler. I think Al Simmons, Joe Cronin, Walter Johnson, Lou Gehrig, Bill Dickey and Lefty Grove belong on that Dream Team. In short, I think the modern generation of ball players has covered itself with glory.

Movies May Pick Teams

"I think as time goes on it will be difficult for any one to pick an All-Star team because there will be few living witnesses to compare the boys of the future with the boys of the past. I believe that it will then be necessary to rely on moving pictures. With slow motion cameras and timing devices you can now record the exact hop on a fast ball, or the break of the sharpest curve. Yes, your All-Star teams of the future will probably come out of the film laboratories."

Connie's No. 1 infield comprises Jimmy Foxx, 1b, Eddie Collins, 2b, Honus Wagner, ss, and Jimmy Collins, 3b.

Eddie Collins is the only man selected from the Athletics' famed "$100,000 infield." The prized inner defense of Grandpaw's day included Baker-Collins-McInnis-Barry.

Connie's No. 1 outfield is Tris Speaker, Ty Cobb and Babe Ruth. Of this trio, Ruth is considered a "modern."

Pictures Of All-Stars

Pictures of Connie Mack's All-Time All-Stars appear on page four of the Rotogravure Section in this edition. What memories they revive!

Connie's pitching staff is headed by Christy Mathewson and the roll call follows with Rube Waddell, Lefty Grove, Walter Johnson, Chief Bender, and Jack Coombs. Grove and Johnson are the "moderns" here.

"If I had my choice of all the ball players of history and could bring a regular squad here to Lake Charles I'd have Al Simmons for a utility outfielder, Bill Dickey for my No. 2 catcher, Ed Delahanty, Amos Strunk, Stuffy McInnis and Joe Cronin."

Connie believes the modern hitters are better despite their lower averages. And he leans to the old time pitchers.

"The game itself has changed. The ball is different. The parks are different. And the customers are different. They want slugging matches so we junked the inside baseball, the stolen base and the writer wrote a piece saying Ehmke was all washed up.

Joe McCarthy and his Cubs were posing for newsreelers, Wrigley Field was draped with bunting, a capacity crowd was in the stands, when, fifteen minutes before game time, Ehmke walked out and started to warm up.

Al Simmons was sitting in the dugout next to Mack. When Al saw Ehmke loosening his muscles he leaped off his seat as if it were a red hot stove.

"_____! Is HE going to pitch?" shouted the stunned outfielder.

Mack turned quietly and answered:

"Yes, he is. Any objections?"

Simmons plopped back onto the bench, sat there for an amazed minute and then gasped, "No, sir."

Ehmke was as big a surprise to the Cub batters. All he did was strike out thirteen of 'em and this psychological start gave Connie Mack the World Series and a sweet triumph over his younger rival—Joe McCarthy.

Connie thinks Foxx is one of the great hitters of baseball, a fine first baseman and a great competitor. He thinks Eddie Collins has the edge on Rogers Hornsby, Frisch and Lajoie. Wagner is tops at short, "but Joe Cronin would make a fine utility infielder on that All-Time team. Tom Yawkey knew what he was doing when he paid $250,000 for Cronin."

Cobb, Speaker and Ruth are outfielders with the stamp of greatness, "but so is Al Simmons. In all the years I watched Al I saw him drop only one fly ball and he has yet to make a throw to the wrong base."

"Lefty Grove belongs right up there with Mathewson, Bender, Johnson, Combs and Waddell. Lou Gehrig and Bill Dickey belong on the squad. So do Strunk, Delahanty and McInnis."

Mack believes hitters should wear helmets.

Connie Believes In Helmets

"Mickey Cochrane is one of the finest men I know. He can rally a team and fire it better than any player I ever met. Yet his career was ruined by one wild pitch. I first began to think about helmets after Danny Hoffman of the A's was injured in 1907. I watched Bob Johnson two years ago hit three home runs wearing a peaked fiber hat similar to a polo helmet."

Mack believes in night baseball.

"It is for the convenience of the customer who works during the day. Baseball is a business. It's the entertainment business. And the customer is always right. He's the boss."

Mack believes in vacations for slumping stars.

Mack stays young in spirit and in ideas. Two years ago he took his A's to the rarefied heights of Mexico City for Spring training. He is on his toes, mentally, which is quite a trick if one can do it, in the mixed metaphor league.

"If you ask me to name the greatest teams—not the individuals, as I have done for you here—I'd say these clubs were tops: the Baltimore Orioles from '94 to '96; the Cubs of '06 to '10, and the A's of '10 to '14. Those were the three greatest ball clubs of all time and ranking right with them were the Yankees of '38. I'd like to see a series between the Yanks of '38 and the A's of '12. The A's of '12 finished third because the boys dissipated too much. But I think they had more ability and class than any team baseball ever knew!"

Mack, instead of "covering up" the shortcomings of his idols, is frank to confess that his old-time friends pulled just as many boners as the moderns. He told me of Amos Strunk, a fine outfielder, but who seemed to turn rattle-brained every time he was ordered to steal a base. Amos would take a long lead, change his mind after starting, go into reverse and invariably get tagged out.

After getting caught one afternoon, for his third putout on three attempts, Connie called him to his side.

Another Pennant Connie's Goal

"Amos," he said, "please—next time you get a thought, arrange to have it while you're standing on a base, not when you're between 'em."

Eddie Murphy used to give him a few gray hairs, too. Eddie tried to steal second one day. The catcher whipped the ball down to intercept him and it knocked Murphy's cap off. Eddie stopped, turned back toward first, picked up his cap as the ball whizzed over his head again. Then, incredible as it seems, he somehow slid safely into second. Later, Eddie returned to the bench. Connie leaned gently and whispered: "Don't ever leave any personal property lying out on that diamond, Eddie. Some one might steal it."

Connie's first job as a manager was in 1894 when he took charge of the Pirates. He served three years and then joined Milwaukee in 1897. His team never finished lower than third in the next three years. He moved to Philadelphia as manager and part owner of the Athletics in 1901. He is the only manager the A's have ever had.

"I want to win one more pennant—then I'll retire," said baseball's grand old man.

"Now, let's see about that position," Connie Mack tells Jimmy Powers, sports editor of The News. "Catcher? Say, that Mickey Cochrane had it all over those old-timers behind the bat." And the grin proves the dean of diamond pilots thought a lot of the Mick, on and off the field.

Mack, Barrow, Klem Pick All-Time Nines

The sands of life are running out . . .

Competent because of their ages, daily contacts and all-around good judgment are three living links with baseball's past.

They are Connie Mack, 76; Ed Barrow, 71; and Bill Klem, 65.

Their seasoned eyes have watched innumerable heroes come and go. Their trained brains have assayed each man's worth, probed for flaws in daily play, in All-Star games and in World Series.

Each of these men has selected his All-Time, All-Star team for The News. Today we present the last of the series—Connie Mack's team. It contains, surprisingly enough, eight "moderns," men who have played from the early '20s on—Foxx, Cochrane, Grove, Johnson, Ruth, Cronin, Gehrig and Dickey. This is a record high representation for All-Time teams.

from his slab. Cobb stared back at Mack for an instant, then dogtrotted into the ordered position. It was the first time in his life that the great Cobb's judgment of a batter was questioned but he followed Mack's will and a second later a line drive plopped into his mitt.

It was exactly 15 years ago this Spring that the sports writers of Philadelphia "got on" Mack. They felt he was old, out-moded and useless. His teams had been languishing in the cellar too long. One wrote: "The only salvation for the A's is to get rid of Connie Mack. So long as this old fogey directs the team it will never get anywhere!"

Five years later Connie produced the first of three straight pennant winners that had the town wildly cheering for Earnshaw, Grove, Cochrane, Simmons, Bishop, Bing Miller & Company.

And those who think "inside baseball" has disappeared from the modern scene have short memories. Connie Mack outsmarted Joe McCarthy in the opening game of the Word Series of '29.

Connie kept Howard Ehmke under cover, didn't even take him West on his final swing of the Summer and instead had him spy constantly on the Cubs. One newspaperman noted that Ehmke wasn't on the train and asked Mack about it. "Oh," said Connie, "I didn't think Howard would be much help to us, so I left him home." The

With the opening of another baseball season on Tuesday, interest here centers on what the Giants and Yankees will do this year. In 1936 New York not only had the winning teams in each league but each circuit's outstanding player. Here is Carl Owen Hubbell, pitching ace of the Giants, who was named the most valuable National League player in 1936. The 33-year-old Meeker, Okla., screwball expert led the league with 26 victories and six defeats, with an earned run average of 2.41 per game. At the end of the season he had an unfinished string of 16 wins, three short of Rube Marquard's mark of 19 straight, made in 1912. Carl compiled the creditable, for a pitcher, batting average of .227 for the season. On the mound he struck out 121 men, gave 57 bases on balls, made three wild pitches and hit five men. He throws left-handed and bats right-handed, weighs 170 and is six feet tall. This will be his tenth season with the Giants and he'll toil for a salary of $22,500.

BATTER

Here, in a familiar pose, is Henry Lou Gehrig of the Yankees, who ended a long holdout by accepting $36,750 for the 1937 season. Gehrig last year won the American League most valuable player award, led the league in home runs with 49, batted .354 for the season, fielded .994 and ran his string of consecutive games played to 1808. Lou covers first base, bats and throws left-handed, will be 34 in June, stands six feet and weighs 215 pounds. Gehrig in 1936 also led the league in runs scored with 167, the eleventh successive year in which he has bettered 100 in runs scored. He also drove in more than 150 runs for the sixth time in his career, hit more than 40 homers for the fifth time and led the league in homers for the third time. Lou joined the Yankees in 1923 at $400 a season, after attracting attention as an athlete at Columbia University. He lives in New Rochelle, N. .Y

'A HARD FIGHT, BUT WE'LL WIN'—HUGGINS

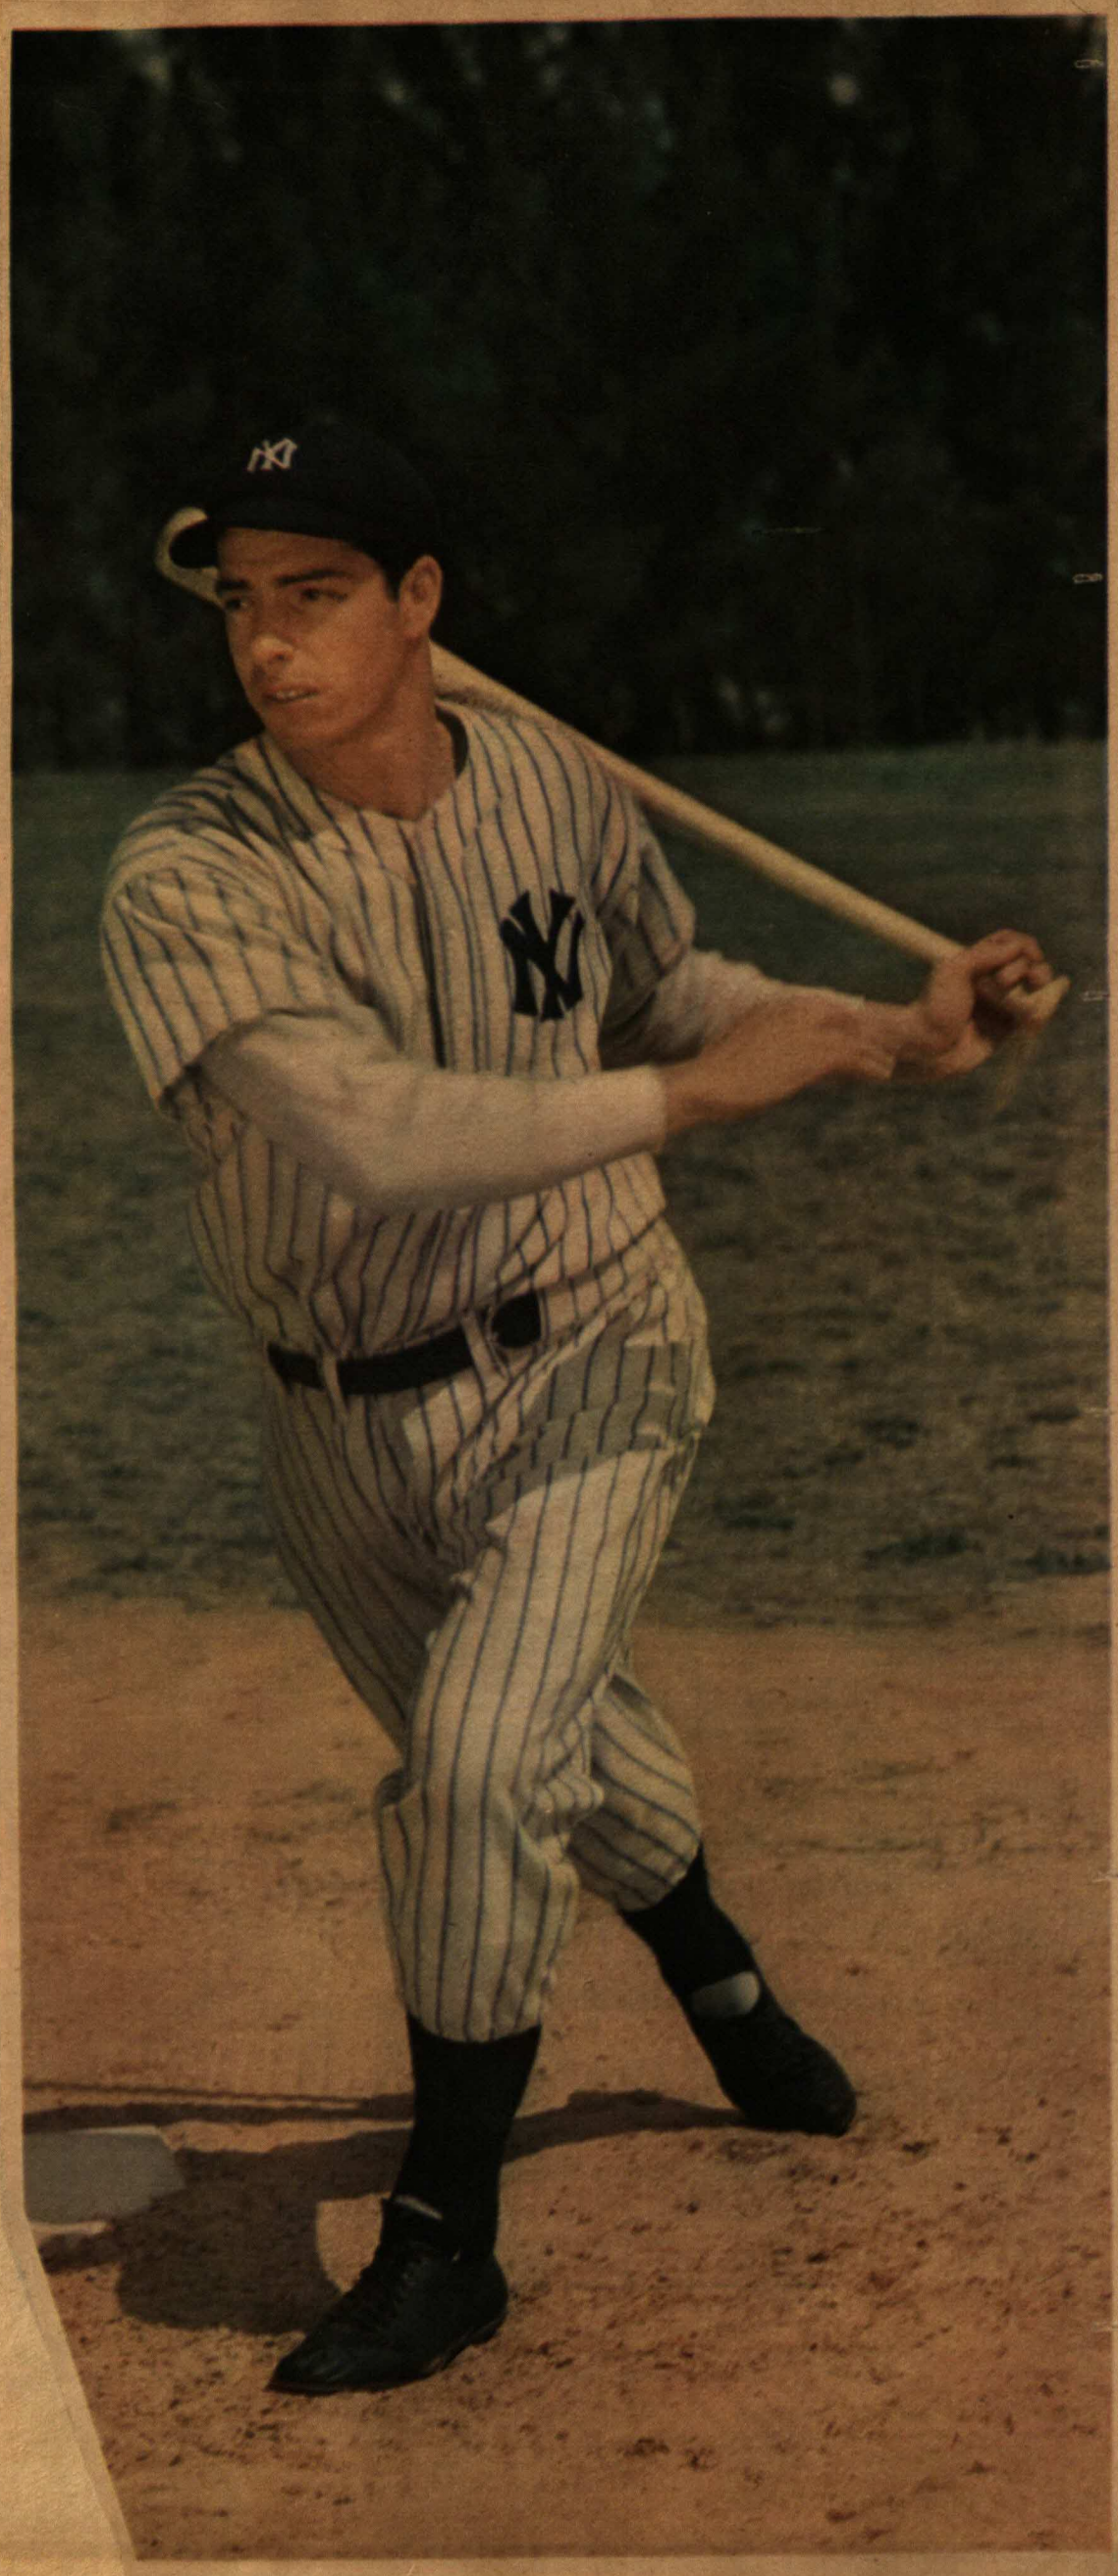
Yank Manager Says Heavy Hitting Will Furnish Answer—Praises Players.

"Give the credit to the players," was the first remark of Miller Huggins, the midget boss of the Yankees when congratulations were offered yesterday for his first pennant, which also was the first for a Yankee team. "They showed me in their big series all year that they had the gameness needed to make their fight a success and though the going has been rough at times, I never doubted their ability to win. What they did in that thrilling series with the Indians a few days ago really settled the pennant race and it was a fair example of what they could do."

Huggins expressed his own confidence in the ability of his team to win the coming series with the Giants, and he made it plain that the players felt the same way about it.

"They have not lost a big series all year," said Huggins, "and none of us believe that the biggest of all will go against us. Every time the Yankees faced the Cleveland club from the start of the race to the finish first place was hanging in the balance, and the players had no false ideas about the Indians. They knew that Speaker's men would fight to the final putout for victory and that it was a world's championship aggregation as well. But not once did Cleveland gain the honors in a series. Three of the six went to the Yankees and the others were divided. When the big test came a few days ago even a three-run lead with Coveleskie pitching did not discourage them. They kept on fighting and won the game that meant so much.

"I realize that McGraw has a high-class team and one that will be in the game every day until nine innings are played. I know the National Leaguers have a little on us in the way of speed, but base running is not going to beat the Yanks. The series will be won by steady pitching and hard hitting, I believe. Now that Shawkey has regained his normal form I have no worry about my pitching. With Mays, Hoyt, Shawkey and Harper ready I believe my pitching will be consistently good, and as for hitting what is there to be said? I believe the power of the punch is in our favor enough to win. At the same time I realize that the Giants are dangerous with the stick. It ought to be a great series."



JOE DiMAGGIO

one-base thrust to left, but was forced by Calloway for the third demise.

The Yankees took one of these markers back in the fifth and drew up to the Mackmen's bridle. A pass to Schang, Mays's Texas League single, which fell to the turf between the hesitating Witt and Dykes, Miller's force-out of Mays at second and a double steal figured in the production of the run.

Yankees Tie Score.

In the sixth the New Yorkers drew abreast of their rivals. After two batters had passed away Pipp singled to centre. His attempt to steal second led to a brace of wild heaves, furnished by Perkins and Welch, and Wallie cantered all the way home without encountering any rough going.

A brace of tallies put the Manhattan group on Easy Street in the seventh. McNally was walked by Sullivan and capered to third on Schang's single to centre. Welch threw askew to head him off, and Mike continued his journey, crossing the scoring disk, while Schang took second. Mays sacrificed his backstop to third and Miller scored him with a one-base shot to left.

The newly crowned champions wasted a triple in the first chapter of the second skirmish, which was opened by Miller with a sound thump to the most distant nook in right centre for a trio of sacks. Elmer was waved onward from third as he reached that point and prepared to camp out for a while, and the result was that he was cut down in his prime at the plate. Fewster, who batted for Ward in the second and held down the central bag thereafter, contributed a double with two gone, but was left stranded.

In the third chukker the Yankees swung into a two-run lead by clustering a few sturdy smashes off the offerings of Rommel. After Devormer had popped to Dykes, Waite Hoyt ripped a single to the central garden and was carted to the second stopping point by Miller's like blow to left. Mitchell blazed a double to right and Hoyt counted, while Miller stopped at third. The latter tallied while Brazill was slaying Ruth on Babe's bounder down the first base line.

Miller Contributes Homer.

Three runs were added to this pair in the home half of the fourth. Fewster drew a pass and clung fondly to the first sack while Baker and Devormer

Detroit, Oct. 12.—Detroit defeated Pittsburg, 5 to 0, today and evened up the count in the world's championship series, each team having two victories to its credit. The game was played with the mercury at 34 degrees above, but 17,036 persons braved the chilling temperature and freezig blasts and the great majority of them felt well repaid for their polar experiences, because they were with the Detroit club.

The American league champions outclassed their rivals in every department of the game and the pitching of George Mullen will make one of the brightest spots in baseball history of Detroit. It is hard to conceive of any pitcher having his opponents more at his mercy than Mullen had Pittsburg today. There was never a moment when he was not master of the situation and he was at his best with men on bases. Four hits represented the ability of the visitors and no two of these were made in the same inning.

Mullen performed a feat in the third inning that will live long in the annals of baseball and was frozen in the minds of those who saw it. In the third he struck the mighty Wagner with two out and men on second and third. That was a greaty feat, but just previously he had struck out Manager Clarke, a hard hitter, with men on first and second. A double steal on Clarke's third strike moved the men to second and third, where they were when Wagner came to bat. Liefield was also a victim of strikes in the same inning, giving Mullen three strikeouts in one inning. All told, he struck out the visitors ten times.

Stanage Fills Up Gap.

Detroit scored because it was able to hit when hits meant runs. Stanage distinguished himself in the second by sending Detroit's first two runs across the plate with a drive just out of Miller's reach. In the fourth inning, Bush's ringing double into the overflow crowd in left field scored another run, and it was immediately followed by another two-bagger in the same place by Cobb.

The onslaughts by Detroit in the second and fourth inning drove Liefield, Pittsburg's star left-hander, from the slab and he was succeeded by the veteran, Phillippe, who was able to stem the Detroit tide, although they pressed him hard in the eighth inning. Eight hits were made by Detroit and six of these came in the two innings when the scores were made, only two being wasted.

Outside of Mullen there were no stars in the Detroit team, but their ensemble work was brilliant and only one fielding slip marred an otherwise perfect performance.

The cold apparently affected Pittsburg's fielding far more than it did Detroit's. Six errors were charged to the Pittsburg infield—Abstein, Miller and Phillippe each getting two. Only one of these errors, however, figured in the scoring of Detroit.

The victory of Detroit has topped Pittsburg from its position as favorite in the betting and even money is now being offered as a more equitable reason for the merits of the two major league champions. The teams left for Pittsburg tonight and the fifth game will be played at Forbes field tomorrow. The scene will then shift back to this city where the sixth game is scheduled for Thursday.

Wagner Helpless Before Mullen.

Hans Wagner failed to star as he did in yesterday's game. At the bat he was helpless before Mullen. The first time up he was lucky enough to draw a base on balls, but was forced out at third. The third inning saw his memorable strikeout. In the sixth he sent a hot liner to Tom Jones' hands and in the ninth he was an easy out, Moriarity to Tom Jones. In the field he had two put outs and four assists, but most of them were of the easy sort. His best play came in the fourth inning when he fumbled a grounder by Stanage for the fraction of a second, recovered it quickly and touched second, forcing Tom Jones and then threw to first in time to double up Stanage. If he had fumbled the grounder for an appreciable time longer Detroit might have had many more runs, as three runs came after the double play. Cobb made one hit, a two-bagger, and reached first once when he was hit by Liefield. The other two times, the Georgia star tried to beat out bunts in front of the plate, but Gibson threw him out. In the field he had only one chance and he accepted that gracefully.

So thoroughly did Mullen do his work that there were only six balls hit to the outfield. Three of these were safe hits and the other three were divided, two flies to Crawford and one to Cobb.

Pittsburg Threatens Once.

Pittsburg threatened to score in the second and third innings. After being retired one, two, three in the first session, Wagner drew a base on balls in the second. Miller struck out. Delehanty then made the only error for Detroit when he fumbled a grounder from Abstein and Wagner moved to second. Wilson hit to Mullen and Wagner was forced at third, Mullen to Moriarity. Gibson was easy, Mullen to Tom Jones, retiring the side.

Pittsburg's real chance to score came in the third inning, but the adamant Mullen stopped them. Liefield made an inauspicious start by striking out, but Byrne hit a two-bagger into the left field overflow and Leach drew a base on balls. Clarke struck out, but a double steal moved the runners to third and second. The decison of Umpire Evans at third base caused much unfavorable comment from the crowd. Then came the striking out by Wagner and the end of Pittsburg's chance. The downfall of Wagner apparently disheartened his team mates during the remainder of the game. In the fourth Wilson singled to left after two were out, but Gibson was easy. Pittsburg was retired in order in the fifth and sixth innings. In the seventh, Gibson hit safely to right but Phillippe struck out. Pittsburg was again retired in order in the eighth, but in the ninth Miller beat out a bunt between Moriarity and Mullen. Abstein and Wilson, however, could not advance him.

Detroit broke into Liefield's defense in the first inning when Cobb was hit by a pitched ball after two were out. Cobb moved to second when Abstein dropped Liefield's throw that caught the Detroit star off first. Crawford ended the inning with a fly to Leach.

Stanage Drives in Two.

The second inning started with Delehanty being hit by a pitched ball. Moriarity sent him to third with a single to left on a hit and run signal. Tom Jones grounded to Liefield and Delehanty was run down between third and home by Gibson, Mariarity taking third and Tom Jones second on the play. Stanage then singled past Miller and Moriarty and T. Jones scored. Mullen forced Stanage, Wagner to Miller, and went on to second, when Miller threw into the crowd. The inning closed with D. Jones' easy bounder to Liefield.

The fourth netted three more runs for the winners. Tom Jones beat out a bunt along the third base line but was doubled up with Stanage, Wagner to Abstein. Mullen drew a pass and went to third on D. Jones' hit to left. Mullen scored and D. Jones went to third when Bush hit into the left field overflow for a two-bagger. Cobb smashed another double into the same place, sending D. Jones and Bush across the plate. Crawford ended the inning, Liefield to Abstein.

The attendance was 17,036 and the receipts $21,103. The receipts are divided as follows:

National commission, $2,110.30.
Players, $11,395.62.
Each club, $3,798.54.

The totals for the four games, all in which the players will share:

National commission, $12,393.50.
Players, $66,924.90.
Each club, $22,308.30.
Grand total, $123,935.

The winning players will receive $40,154.94 and the losers will be allowed to divide $26,769.96.

The total attendance for the four games was 95,641.

Pittsburg, Oct. 9.—The American league champions from Detroit evened the count in the world's championship series today by defeating Pittsburg 7 to 2 at Forbes field. As Pittsburg won the opening game, each team now has one victory to its credit, and at least five contests in all will be necessary before the series is decided.

Detroit's ability to hit the National league pitchers and Pittsburg's inability to connect with the curves of Wild Bill Donovan tells the story of the game. Pittsburg got away to a flying start, scoring two runs in the first inning, but Detroit tied the score in the second.

The American leaguers batted Howard Camnitz out of the box in the third inning, when they took a commanding lead by scoring three runs. Vic Willis succeeded Camnitz, and two more runs from his offering in the fifth inning gave Detroit its total of seven runs. Detroit made nine safe hits from the combined curves of Camnitz and Willis, getting six from the former in two and one-third innings and three from Willis during the remainder of the game. The Detroit hitting total included two-baggers by Schmidt and Crawford.

Donovan allowed only five hits, and two of these were two-baggers by Leach and Miller in the first inning. After that the Detroit twirler was an enigma to his opponents, and another two-bagger by Leach in the third, a single by Abstein in the fourth and an infield hit by Wagner in the ninth represented the Pittsburg hitting during the last eight innings.

Only sixteen batters faced Donovan in the last five innings, and the supposedly hard hitting Pittsburgers were absolutely helpless in the face of his wonderful flinging.

During the last four innings, Willis also pitched remarkable ball, and only twelve men faced him in that time. Two men reached first base in that period, but one was caught stealing and the other was doubled.

Cobb's Sensational Steal.

The most sensational feature of the game which was witnessed by more than 30,000 spectators, was a steal home by Ty Cobb in the third inning. This was a remarkably well timed bit of work and the entire Pittsburg team was caught off guard. It was after the first ball pitched by Willis after he succeeded Camnitz that the daring play was made. As soon as Willis began to wind up Cobb started for the plate, and by a daring slide, he reached the base in time to beat Willis' bewildered throw. Gibson was so surprised that he dropped the ball after Cobb had slid to the plate. This scored the third run in the third inning.

Leach was again the star of the day with two two-baggers in five times at bat. In the field he played a star game, but his work could do nothing to stem the tide that flowed steadily toward Detroit.

Ty Cobb made his first hit of the series with a single over second base in the seventh. Wagner made a hit, and still leads Cobb in the batting duel between the two leading batters of the major leagues. Wagner has made two hits in seven times at bat for an average of .286, and Cobb has hit safely once in six times at bat for an average of .167. Wagner struck out in the first inning with Leach on third, but Miller's two-bagger scored Tommy.

Pittsburg started with a rush when Byrne walked and Leach immediately scored him with a ringing two-base hit to right. Clarke sacrificed Leach to third, Donovan to T. Jones, and Wagner struck out. Miller shot a long hit into the crowd in the temporary stand in right field, and completed a circuit of the bases, scoring Leach. The umpires, Evans and Klem, held a conference and trotted out to look at the stand, and decided it was a two-bagger under the ground rules, because the stand was only temporary. Leach scored, but Miller was sent back to second base. Schmidt missed an easy chance to retire the side in muffing an easy one, but Abstein struck out, ending the inning.

Pittsburg Is Helpless.

After that Pittsburg was helpless with the bat. In the third Leach opened with a two-bagger, but remained on second, as the next three men were easy outs. Abstein also opened the fourth with a hit, but did not get any further, as Wilson and Gibson popped up easy flies. D. Jones started out for Detroit by beating out a hit to Wagner, but there was nothing more doing. It was in the second innings that Detroit began to break into the limelight by scoring two runs. Crawford opened by striking out, and Delehanty was easy, Wagner to Abstein. Moriarty shot a screaming single to left, and Tom Jones put another in the same place, Moriarty going to third on a hit-and-run signal. Schmidt then tied the score by doubling over Leach's head, and Moriarty and T. Jones counted.

The third inning brought about the destruction of Pittsburg's hopes. D. Jones started with a pretty bunt along the third base line and Byrne made a magnificent assist, but Abstein dropped the ball and Jones was safe. After failing to sacrifice Bush hit safely to left and D. Jones went to second. Cobb then worked the fast weakening Camnitz for a base on balls and the bases were full. Crawford sent a short fly to Clarke, but there was no chance for D. Jones to score and he did not try. Delehanty shot a hot single over second base and D. Jones and Bush scored. This was the end of Camnitz and Willis succeeded him. Cobb stole home and Moriarity worked the new pitcher for a pass. Tom Jones grounded to Willis and Delehanty was forced at third, Willis to Byrne. Schmidt ended the inning with a fly to Clarke.

Detroit went out in order in the fourth, but in the fifth, scored two more runs. After Abstein made a remarkable one-handed stop of Cobb's bounder over first base, Crawford doubled to the left field line. Delehanty drew a pass and Moriarity popped an easy fly to Abstein. D. Jones walked and the bases were full. Schmidt singled to center, scoring Crawford and Delehanty, but T. Jones was caught trying to reach third, Leach to Byrne and the inning was ended.

Cobb Gets First Hit.

Cobb opened the seventh with a bounder over second for his first hit of the series. Crawford was out, Miller to Abstein, and Cobb electrified the crowd by trying to make third on an infield out. There was a close decision and Klem called him out. After that there was no more doing for Detroit. Wilson tried to duplicate Cobb's attempt to go from first to third. Wilson reached first on Delehanty's fumble and Gibson grounded out, Bush to T. Jones, Wilson keeping right on to third, but was caught by a far wider margin than Cobb.

The total receipts from the sale of tickets today were $41,884.50, which will be divided as follows:

Peckinpaugh Asserts Rain Helps Yankees; Gives Babe Good Rest

Yank Captain Says Friday Rain of Base Hits Hit 'Em, But Prefers Other Kind.

BY ROGER PECKINPAUGH
Captain of the Yankees.
(Copyright, 1921, by Universal Service.)

POLO GROUNDS, NEW YORK, Oct. 8. Friday we were deluged by a rain of base hits and today we had just rain. Of the two of course, we naturally prefer rain, without any of the unpleasant trimmings the Giants fixed on the third game of the series.

The weather, I think, will react to our distinct advantage. It will, first, give Ruth's elbow a chance to come around, and it will give Carl Mays another day of rest.

It had been Huggins' intention to pitch Harry Harper today, but as the skies grew dark, Huggins switched to Mays on the theory that his underhanded delivery would be more effective on a dark day.

Harper Not Likely.

Harper, you know, does not pitch Sunday baseball, so I doubt now that he will get a chance to start a game unless Mays is knocked out early. Bush will take his turn in the box tomorrow. This will leave either Harper or Shawkey available for Tuesday's game, but at this time it is impossible for me to discuss those of our plans which do not bear upon the present.

Huggins makes his plans as he goes along, and he must of necessity deal only with the present. The present, as far as the world's series is concerned, means Sunday's game, and, weather permitting, Carl Mays will pitch.

Ruth's ability to play is a matter of doubt. It all depends on how his arm responds to the minor operation he underwent after Friday's game. He was at the park today, but he did not get into uniform. The Babe, I imagine, would have gotten into his uniform and taken his place on the coaching lines, even if he had not been able to play.

Ball players are superstitious creatures and we all have greatest faith in Ruth. Everything almost always breaks for us when the big fellow coaches at third and we got so that we fear for ourselves when he doesn't go out on the line. His present out there, we feel, is the equivalent of at least a load of empty barrels and a rabbit's left hind leg. He is even more potent as a luck charm than Eddie Collins' famous piece of chewing gum.

Collins always wears a wad of gum on the button of his cap, and whenever he gets two strikes on himself he takes it off and chews it. Almost always he gets on base and pitchers fear him when they see him put that hunk of gum into his mouth.

The sight of Babe behind third base, when he comes to bat, has just the opposite effect on us, and with the Babe out there today when we come to bat I have no doubt that we would have won. With the extra day of rest thrown in, I'm pretty certain he'll be out in uniform Sunday, even if he doesn't play. Just now it seems to be a fifty-fifty chance that the big fellow will play. If he doesn't play, Pewster will take his place, and Chick is particularly effective against spitball pitchers. I say this because we all take it for granted that McGraw will pitch Douglas Sunday.

I think there'll be some mighty free hitting by us Sunday afternoon. We've won two games, but we haven't done anywhere near our best at the bat yet. We're due —overdue — and I have a hunch that we're going to make it mighty miserable for any pitcher McGraw sends in to stop us.

Determined to Win.

Moreover, we have an edge on the Giants in the games won and lost and we intend to preserve that advantage by making certain of victory Sunday.

We generally score a lot of runs for Mays and in the first game of the series scored only three. We won, however, but we're set on giving Carl a better working margin of runs and we are particularly determined to win the fourth game.

If we win Sunday—and we will—the Giants will never catch up to us and that, of course, will mean the world series. And, as I said a few days ago, "If we win the world's series we will win the pennant again next year."

Somehow, I can't and don't want to forget the significance of a victory in the series, as it relates to next year's pennant race.

'PITCHING TO TELL THE STORY'—M'GRAW

Giants' Manager Thinks Team With Most Consistent Slab-Work Will Win.

When informed yesterday that the Yankees had clinched the American League pennant and won the right to be a party in the coming world's series, John McGraw, manager of the Giants, expressed confidence that the National Leaguers would win the coming struggle, but made it clear that he expected the series to be hard fought.

"There will be no excuses for the Giants," said McGraw. "I have a really good ball club, one of the best I have had in many years, and I know that it will give a good account of itself in the coming series. My players are in excellent shape right now, in spite of a hard campaign. The club is fit to put up its best struggle.

"I think that the pitching will, as it has so many times in the past, again decide the championship. And with that thought in mind I will say that if my pitchers show the form they have shown during the last month the Giants will win the series. Good pitching was very largely responsible for the uphill fight the Giants made to overtake Pittsburgh, and I see no reason why those pitchers should not be in just as good shape to meet the Yankees.

"I have not had a chance to see the Yankees to any extent this season but I know that the American League club is a strong one. Any club that has a hitter of the ability of Babe Ruth commands respect. He is a player who is apt to break up a ball game at any time. But a series of the length of this one is not likely to be won by one man and in the end the team that gets the best and most consistent pitching will win the championship, I think.

"I was very much pleased to hear that the Yankees had clinched the pennant. The two New York clubs should put up one of the best world's series struggles ever witnessed. Also the fact that the series will be played at one park without traveling or layoffs, barring bad weather, will make it better for the players and the fans.

"We are going into the series with plenty of confidence, but we are not boasting."

1906 SERIES ALSO ONE-CITY AFFAIR

Only once before in the hectic history of professional baseball has a world's series been confined exclusively to one city. That was fifteen years ago, when baseball, so far as great concrete and steel stands and tremendous crowds are concerned, was in its infancy. In 1906 the Chicago Cubs won the National League pennant and the Chicago White Sox took the honors in the American League. That Fall they engaged in one of the bitterest struggles on record.

The first four games of the series were divided, each club winning two; but then the "hitless wonders" went on a batting rampage and captured the next two by the largest scores of the series. The Sox won the first game by a score of 2 to 1; the second went to the Cubs, 7 to 1; the Sox took the third, 3 to 0; the Cubs evened the series in the fourth, 1 to 0; the Sox captured the fifth, 8 to 6, and then clinched the series by winning the sixth and final game, 8 to 3.

A glance at the personnel of the Cub machine will prove how great an upset had been recorded: Chance, manager and first base; Evers, second base; Tinker, shortstop; Steinfeldt, third base; Sheckard, Hofman and Schulte, outfielders; Kling, catcher, and Brown, Reulbach, Pfiester and Overall, pitchers.

The White Sox players were Donohue, first base; Isbell, second base; Tannehill and Davis, shortstop; Rohe, third base; Jones, Dougherty and Hahn, outfielders; Sullivan, catcher, and Walsh, White, Owen and Altrock, pitchers.

The total attendance was 99,845, an unimpressive figure in these days of attendance of 30,000 and more at a single game, but a considerable total fifteen years ago. The total receipts were $106,660.

NEW ATTENDANCE FIGURES EXPECTED

Unless the impending world's series between the Giants and the Yankees should be decided before the first seven games, it is almost a certainty that all existing records for attendance will be shattered. The present high water mark was reached in 1912, when the Giants and the Boston Red Sox met in their memorable clash that went eight games before a decision was reached. At that time 252,237 persons paid to see the games.

This will be the first time in the history of world's series that more than 35,000 persons could be seated at every game. There is only one park on either of the major league circuits that has a greater seating capacity than the Polo Grounds. That is Braves Field in Boston. In past series the contests have been between teams one of which might boast a big park while the other's was comparatively small.

The following are the attendance figures for previous world's series:

Year.	Games.	Attendance.	Year.	Games.	Attendance.

Speaker's Batting Eye Returns and Helps Him Land Old Belief Wallop

Tris Speaker ready to step into a fast one.

Will Tris Speaker, new pilot of the Indians and baby manager of the big leagues, upset the old John baseball dope for the fans?

Maybe.

Here's the how:

Tristram had been hunting all around the baseball house for his batting eye. Spoke looked under the dresser and every other place. No luck.

Then one day Tris was too busy to bother about it. President Dunn had made him manager of the club and Tris was busy with his new duties.

Imagine his surprise when he connected four times out of the next five times up. And he has been hitting at a great clip ever since.

Now, it has been the general impression that the strain of managing a major league club will tell on a man's game if he continues to play while piloting the team. Then how can Spoke's spurt be explained?

To my mind it was simply a coincidence. He had been trying to break through the batting crust all season and finally got a toehold.

A little dope about Tris to refresh your memory:

Speaker was born at Hubbard City, Texas, April 4, 1888.

He weighs 180 pounds, stands 5 feet 11½ inches and bats and throws left-handed, as all fans well know.

Speaker joined the Cleveland club April 12, 1916, and pulled the Indians from a baseball graveyard right up into the front rank.

Speaker's early experience in league baseball was with Little Rock, Ark., from where he went to the Boston Red Sox and starred.

Speaker has been known as the "last word" in outfielding, having the reputation of playing farther in toward the infield than any other player.

Tris has been a phenomenal batter along with his great fielding ability, never falling below the .300 mark in hitting since he was recognized as a star in 1909.

Since that time Spoke has batted .309, .340, .327, .383, .366, .338, .322, .386, .352 and .319. The first season with Cleveland he wrested the batting honors from Ty Cobb, who was out to make it ten years in succession.

Lee Fohl stamped himself as a regular guy by resigning voluntarily when he saw that the fans had ceased to back his judgment. Dunn has shown he knows Fohl is a valuable man by retaining him in some other capacity.

Fohl took charge of the Indians as manager May 22, 1915.

He resigned as leader of the Cleveland club July 19.

Thus Fohl had charge of the Indians during more than four years.

Under Fohl, in 1915, the Indians won forty-five and lost seventy-nine games, a .363 rating.

In 1916 they garnered seventy-seven victories and lost the same number for a mark of .500.

In 1917 Fohl's boys showed a real punch and finished with eighty-eight wins and sixty-six defeats, .571 baseball.

In 1918 they came through with seventy-three victories and fifty-four losses, which gave them a rating of .575. Pretty good.

Under Fohl this year the Indians had won forty-four and lost thirty-four games, which is stepping at a .564 pace.

The Indians were third when Fohl gave up the reins to Speaker and within five and one-half games of the lead.

They finshed seventh with Fohl as the pilot in 1915, ran sixth in 1916, third in 1917 and were runners-up last season.

Fohl played his first baseball for Pittsburg in 1902 and after his job with the Pirates he played with Des Moines, Cincinnati, Youngstown, Akron, Columbus, Charleston and Waterbury. He was manager of the latter club, which was used as a farm for the Cleveland club. He went to Cleveland to act as coach of the pitchers under Joe Birmingham and succeeded Birmy as pilot.

Davy Bancroft Says He Wants Babe Ruth in Yankees' Lineup

Rain's Great for Farmers, But We're Not Farming, Says Giants' Captain.

BY DAVE BANCROFT
Captain of the New York Giants.

(Copyright, 1921, by Universal Service.)

NEW YORK, Oct. 8.—Rain is a great thing for farmers—but we aren't farming just now.

Gosh, how we wanted to play that game today.

That victory Friday made us sort of savage. We are wildly anxious to tear into those Yankees again and this delay of even one day isn't a happy circumstance for us.

But in one way all of us are glad that the game wasn't played. If it had been the Yanks might have had to go into battle without Babe Ruth. That, naturally, would have been a distinct handicap to them. We'd have been sorry about it, too, for we want to whip the Yanks without any chance for a defeat alibi.

If we had played today and beaten the Yanks without Babe in the game, then the full glory for victory wouldn't have come to us. So many persons would have been "ifing" about Ruth. We aren't looking for advantages—and don't want any. We want Ruth in every game.

For it's our aim to whip the Yanks cleanly and squarely—and whip them with their full strength in the field.

I'm hopeful—and so is every man on our team—that Ruth will be back in the game Sunday fit as a fiddle.

The surprising feature of the series so far has been the flawless play of the Yanks afield. Three games without an error—that's wonderful. But the Yanks are only human. They'll have to do some bobbling before this series is over. And who knows but what they'll do it in the next few games in such measure as to offset the brilliant work of the first three games?

If they do that'll constitute "breaks" for us. We haven't had any so far. I guess we're about due. And when we get them we're going to travel right along with that luck to victory.

Douglas and Nehf are in shape to go right back at the Yanks. And if those boys pitch the same brand of baseball they hurled in their original starts, I'll venture an opinion they'll emerge victors. For we're hitting again—and we are going to give both those fellows some runs to encourage them.

The overwhelming victory of Friday has heartened every one of us in a wonderful way. It has filled the boys full of pep and confidence and made them believe stronger than ever that we'll win the series—and without very much trouble.

Those Yanks are game birds—and they are fighters. But I still think that we have a little something on them in every way—and that the series from now on will demonstrate it.

JONNARD LOOKS GOOD

Traveler Hurler, Bought by Giants, Admired by McGraw.

NEW YORK, Oct. 8.—In Jonnard, a slim youngster purchased by the Giants just before the season closed from the Little Rock club of the Southern league, John McGraw has a pitcher of considerable promise, judging by the showing he made after joining the club. Working against the Phillies in the second game of a double-header played in Philadelphia, relieving Cecil Causey in the sixth inning of the game, the kid not only held the Phillies to four hits for the remainder of the contest, but registered seven strike-outs. In the eighth inning he fanned three men. Starting the inning by striking out Monroe, he followed by getting rid of Rapp on strikes. Wrightstone singled to left and Williams singled to right, putting Wrightstone on third. With Kopetchy at bat the situation was a ticklish one, but the recruit fanned Koney on three pitched balls.

Detroit, Oct. 11.—Pittsburg defeated Detroit by a score of 8 to 6 here today in one of the most spectacular and fiercely contested games ever played in a world's championship series. This gives Pittsburg the margin of two games to one in the series and the National champions are correspondingly jubilant. Detroit, however, showed in the final innings of the battle that it is far from a hopelessly beaten team. Weather conditions were frightful. Rain fell frequently during the nine innings, several of them being hard showers of several minutes' duration. The sky was threatening all day and the low-hanging clouds made the atmosphere so dark in the last two innings it was hard for the players and spectators to follow the ball. The afternoon recalled the first game locally of the 1908 world's series, when the Chicago Nationals beat Detroit with Summers also pitching in a rainstorm. A sharp northwest wind this afternoon added to the discomfort of the players and the spectators in the unprotected stands.

Despite the wretched weather, the attendance of 18,227 broke all local records for a world's series game here.

Pittsburg jumped into the lead immediately by scoring five runs in the first inning. They batted Summers out of the box, aided by some poor fielding.

Detroit's Game Rally.

Another run in the second inning gave Pittsburg a lead of 6 to 0 and the game appeared to be safe for the visitors. Detroit, however, came to the fore with one of the gamest rallies ever made and scored four runs in the seventh inning, batting Maddox hard and playing brilliantly. With the score 6 to 4, Pittsburg landed on the ball again in the ninth for two runs.

With the score 8 to 4 against them, Detroit even then did not realize they were beaten, and smashed out two runs in the last inning. Had Sam Crowford been able to hit up to his usual mark there might have been a different story to tell.

Detroit outbatted Pittsburg by a margin of one hit, getting twelve to the winner's eleven. Summers started for the locals, but was removed before the first inning was completed. Willett succeeded him and did well until he was taken out to allow McIntyre to bat for him in the seventh. McIntyre struck out. Works, who then went in was lucky in the eighth, after Abstein had made a two-base hit with one out. The next two were easy outs. In the ninth Pittsburg landed on him for three hits that clinched the game. Maddox was on the rubber for Pittsburg and was hit hard in the closing innings, although Detroit could do nothing with him in the early session. When the Americans started to hit they landed hard and often, but Manager Clarke left Maddox in because of the lead his team had.

Wagner Star of Contest.

The mighty Hans Wagner was the star of the game, but he was forced to share some of the stellar honors with Owen Bush and Delehanty of the locals. Wagner made four hits and stole four bases, although Catcher Schmidt was not to blame for at least one of the bases. Besides his hitting and base running, Wagner played an admirable game in the field. In the first inning Wagner beat out a hit to Bush, stole second and went to third on Schmidt's bad throw to second. He then scored on a wild pitch. In the second he reached first on a fielder's choice, and on a double steal went to third while Leach was stealing home. In the fifth he singled just out of Tom Jones' reach and stole second. Wagner popped to the left in the seventh, but was caught trying to steal second while Leach was on third waiting to score. Schmidt did not throw out of reach of Wagner this time.

Bush and Delehanty were the bright spots on the Detroit team in batting, while Cobb and Crawford made great catches during the course of the game. Bush made four hits in five times at bat and two of them played important parts in the scoring. Delehanty was there with two two-baggers and a single in five times up. His third hit, a double in the seventh, started the rally that caused many apprehensive chills among the Pittsburg players. While Crawford starred in the field, his work at bat was feeble and he missed two excellent chances to swing the tide of victory toward his team. He ended the rally in the seventh by a puny pop fly to Abstein with two men on bases.

In the ninth he again had a chance with Cobb on second, but his best was a feeble bounder to Wagner.

Cobb Also in Limelight.

Cobb made a two-bagger and a single that were important factors in the Detroit rally. His single in the seventh scored one run and his double in the ninth sent in two more.

The ground rules brought about a long conference between Umpires O'Loughlin and Johnstone and the members of the national commission. Then an innovation was made by sending Umpire Klem, who was not scheduled to work today, out on the right field foul line to watch the hits into the crowd and act in an advisory capacity to the other two umpires.

The first inning was a weird spectacle to local enthusiasts and when it was over hopes were nearly dead for a Detroit victory. Byrne opened by sending out a hit to third-base line and went to third when Leach singled to second. Clarke sent a grounder to Summers and Byrne was caught between third and home, Summers to Moriarity to Schmidt to Bush. Leach went to third and Clarke to second during the chase. Wagner's hit was too hot for Bush and it rolled to left field while Leach and Clarke scored. Wagner stole second, went to third on Schmidt's bad throw to Moriarity and scored on a wild pitch. Miller drew a base on balls and Abstein singled to center, Miller scoring when Crawford made a bad throw to third. Abstein moved to third on the same throw. At this point Manager Jennings withdrew Summers and sent Willetts in to pitch. Wilson shot a single to center and scored Abstein. Gibson and Maddox finished the inning with easy outs.

Pittsburg scored another run in the second. With one out, Willetts hit Leach on the hand and Clarke on the knee. Wagner forced Clarke at second, Bush to Delehanty, and Leach to third. On a double steal Leach scored and Wagner went to third. Miller ended the inning with a pop fly to Delehanty.

Maddox Effective Early.

Detroit was practically helpless before Maddox until the seventh when a rally netted four runs. Delehanty opened the inning with a two-bagger to center and Moriarity was safe when Miller fumbled his grounder, Delehanty going to third. Tom Jones singled to right, scoring Delehanty and putting Moriarity on second. Schmidt fouled out to Byrne and McIntyre, who batted for Willetts, struck out. D. Jones beat out a bunt along the third-base line, filling that place. Bush singled just beyond Wagner's reach and Moriarity and Tom Jones scored. Cobb singled to center, scoring D. Jones, but Crawford ended the inning with a fly to Abstein.

Each team scored two runs in the ninth. For Pittsburg Maddox struck out as a starter. Byrne singled to center, Leach put a two-bagger into the left field crowd and Byrne went to third. Cobb made a great catch of Clarke's fly, but Byrne beat the throw to the plate. Wagner singled to right, scoring Leach and another star catch by Cobb on Miller's long fly ended the inning.

Detroit made a game effort to tie the score in the ninth but fell short by two runs. Mullin batted for Works to start in the ninth and struck out. Detroit's hopes started to rise when Abstein dropped Wagner's brilliant assist on D. Jones' grounder. Bush beat out a hit to Byrne and both men scored when Cobb doubled to right field. Crawford was easy, Wagner to Abstein, and Clarke made a star catch of Delehanty's short fly.

Detroit, Oct. 16.—Pittsburg won the world's championship baseball at Bennett park today by defeating Detroit by the overwhelming score of 8 to 0 in the seventh and decisive game of one of the greatest battles ever fought for the world's title. This gives the National league champions the victory by the count of four games to three. This is the third successive defeat of the American league champions in the world's series and consequently the third straight victory for the National league, the Chicago team having defeated Detroit in 1907 and 1908.

To Charles Adams, the phenomenal young pitcher from the Louisville American association team, belongs the lion's share of the credit for the victory, and his wonderful pitching has crowded Wagner, Leach, Clarke and other Pittsburg stars into the background. Today's victory was his third of the series, and he held Detroit safely throughout the entire game. He allowed but six hits and in only one inning, the fourth, did Detroit get more than one safety. Adams allowed only one base on balls and in four innings he retired the hard hitters in one, two, three order. The crowd was a disappointment, as there were only 17,562 paid admissions. It was expected that this game would break all records here. Its receipts were $19,677, and this was divided, $1,967.70 to the national commission, and $8,854.65 to each club owner. This brings the total attendance for the seven games to 145,444, and the total receipts to $188,202.50.

The weather was far from ideal for baseball, but was a distinct improvement over that which prevailed for the other three games played here. The thermometer was close to 50 degrees above zero. The play was fierce in the early innings, but the Detroit men grew discouraged as inning after inning went by and they could not score on Adams, while Mullen was helpless in holding the Nationals. Robert Byrne and George Moriarity were injured in a collision at third base in the first inning and both forced to leave the game, although Moriarity stuck until after he had hit a two-bagger in the second. With Byrne on second and Clarke at bat in the first, the Pittsburg manager passed a hit and run signal to Byrne. The third baseman started for third on the signal but Clarke made a bull. Byrne made a desperate effort, and his spikes hit Moriarity in the leg. He was called out, but both men fell to the ground. It was found that Byrne had sprained an ankle and he was carried from the field. This necessitated a shift in the Pittsburg team, and Leach was sent to third and Hyatt went to center field. Leach played a brilliant game at third, while Hyatt also did well.

Clarke Outgenerals Pitchers.

Moriarity's leg bothered him, but he remained in the game until the next inning. When he went to bat in the second he hit a two-bagger, but could hardly limp to second base. O'Leary was sent into run for him and finished the game at third base. The wildness of Detroit pitchers is shown well by the record of Fred Clarke. He had four bases on balls and a sacrifice hit in five times, not having a single official time at bat. The outlook for Detroit was decidedly dark from the first ball pitched. It could be seen that Donovan was wild as he pitched a couple of balls to Byrne and then hit him. Leach sacrificed, Donovan to T. Jones, and then came the play at third which resulted in the injuries to Byrne and Moriarity. Clarke drew a base on balls and stole second. Wagner also drew a pass and Miller forced Wagner at second, Bush to Delehanty, ending the inning.

The poor work of Donovan was even more pronounced in the second and Pittsburg was presented with two runs. Abstein opened by drawing a base on balls and stole second. Wilson bunted in front of the plate and Abstein beat the throw to third, while Wilson was safe on first. Gibson popped to Bush, but Adams was given another pass and the bases were full. Hyatt sent a sacrifice fly to Crawford and Abstein scored. Leach received another base on balls and the bases were full again. Still another pass was given to Clarke and he forced Wilson across the plate. Cobb saved Detroit by making a great catch of a hard drive by Wagner.

There was no scoring in the third, but it was only prevented by a speedy double play. Miller opened with a single to center and went to third when Abstein drove a two-bagger into left field. Wilson hit a bounder to Bush, and Bush's throw to Schmidt caught Miller at the plate. Abstein got too far off second base and was doubled up, Schmidt to Delehanty. Gibson forced Wilson, Bush to Delehanty, and the inning was ended.

Mullen in Poor Form.

Mullen went on the slab in the fourth inning, but he was unable to stem the tide of Pittsburg scores. Hyatt drew a base on balls and moved to second on Leach's single to left. Clarke sacrificed both runners along, Mullen to T. Jones. Wagner was purposely passed in order to bring up Miller. Miller upset the Detroit calculations by singling to right, scoring Hyatt and Leach and sending Wagner to third. Miller stole second, but Mullen showed a short flash of his form of the previous games by striking out Abstein, ending the inning.

Pittsburg went out in order in the fifth, but scored three in the sixth. After Hyatt went out Leach hit to left field for two bases and Clarke walked. Wagner then smashed a three-bagger to left and scored on D. Jones' bad throw to third, sending Leach and Clarke in ahead of him. One more run was added to the Pittsburg total in the eighth. With one out Clarke was given his fourth base on balls, and stole second. Wagner flied to Crawford, but Crawford dropped Miller's fly and Clarke scored while Miller went to second. D. Jones prevented the possibility of more runs by making a spectacular catch of Abstein's hard drive.

Detroit threatened only two or three times to score. With one out in the second Delehanty walked and went to third on Moriarity's two-bagger to right, but Tom Jones and Schmidt were easy.

In the fourth Delehanty put a single to right with but one out, and O'Leary popped to Wagner. Tom Jones sent a safe hit into right, putting Delehanty on second, but Schmidt's bounder to Leach forced Delehanty at third.

Schmidt put a two-bagger into left with two out in the seventh, and Delehanty did the same with two out in the ninth.

Pittsburg, Oct. 13.—Pittsburg took the lead in the great battle now being waged for the world's baseball championship by defeating Detroit in the fifth game of the series on Forbes field today. This gives the National league champions three victories to two for the American league pennant winners.

The scene will shift to Detroit again tomorrow, where the sixth and possibly the last game of the series will be played. By winning tomorrow Pittsburg will clinch the world's championship; but if Detroit wins, the score will be tied again and a seventh game will be played.

It was also decided to postpone the seventh game until Saturday in order to give the Detroit club time in which to sell tickets.

Despite its announcement that it would meet in Detroit tomorrow to decide where the seventh game is to be played, the national baseball commission met today and decided to play the crucial game, if it is needed, in Detroit. Garry Herman flipped a coin and President B. B. Johnson of the American league won and chose Detroit.

The game was played today with the mercury hovering between 35 and 40 degrees above zero. A chilling wind from the west swept across the field, but the immense grandstand protected the great majority of the spectators. Despite the untoward conditions 21,706 persons saw the game and the receipts were $32,173. Of this sum the national commission receives $3,217.30 and each club owner $14,477.85. The players no longer share in the receipts, as the first four games is their limit.

This makes the receipts for the five games $156,108 and the total attendance 117,347. Each club owner has now received $36,786.15 and the national commission $15,610.80.

A home run by Manager Clarke that scored Byrne and Leach in front of him turned the tide of victory to Pittsburg in the seventh inning after Detroit had tied the score at 3 to 3. Detroit had two home runs to its credit, but neither was hit with men on bases. D. Jones, the first man up in the first inning, hit the ball into the inclosure which had been built around the outfield for the overflow. There was no overflow from the permanent stands and it was easy to hit the ball over the fence. Sam Crawford made the second Detroit home run in the eighth inning.

Leach's Spectacular Play.

Crawford's home run nearly deprived Pittsburg of the services of the brilliant Tommy Leach. Leach gave chase to Crawford's long hit and, while running backward at a good clip, struck the low fence. The impact of his body smashed the boards and he shot over the fence head first and turned a complete somersault. A groan went up from the crowd, as it appeared that it was impossible for the little center fielder to escape injury. After a short delay he returned to his place in the field, apparently none the worse for his spectacular mishap.

Charles Adams, the phenomenal youngster of the Pittsburg team, achieved the high distinction of being the only pitcher to win twice in the series by annexing today's game. Adams clearly outpitched summers, who worked the first seven innings for Detroit, although he was lucky in having the team behind him hitting, as he allowed the losers four runs. Adams allowed six hits, two home runs, two two-base hits and two singles, while Summers was hit safely ten times, including one home run and one double.

Davey Jones' home run gave the Detroits a run in the first inning, but Pittsburg immediately tied the score because Summers gave a base on balls with the bases full. A wild pitch by Summers gave Pittsburg a run in the second inning and another came in the third. The score remained 3 to 1 in Pittsburg's favor, until the sixth, when Detroit bunched a single and a two-bagger and aided by Wagner's bad throw, scored two runs. Then came Clarke's home run in the seventh and the National leaguers assumed a commanding lead.

Wagner Has Bad Day.

Each team scored one run in the eighth inning. The mighty Wagner had a bad day in the field, making two errors in five chances. His first error was a bad throw of Delehanty's grounder in the sixth, and it allowed Crawford to score from second. His other misplay was a muff of Tom Jones' pop fly into short left in the ninth. At bat Wagner made one hit in four times up, but reached first three times. The first time he drew a base on balls, but was left on second and in the third he singled to left, but was on third when the inning ended. In the fifth he was an easy out, and in the seventh, he was hit on the back by a pitched ball. He dropped to the ground and evidently in great agony, but soon recovered and trotted to first.

Cobb made only one hit, a single to left in the sixth. In the field he did not have a single chance.

After getting three balls and two strikes in the first inning, Davy Jones hit the ball into center field stand for a home run. Bush walked, but Cobb flied to Leach. Crawford's single to left sent Bush to third, as it was a hit and run play. Crawford stole second, but Delehanty struck out and Moriarity popped to Abstein.

Pittsburg tied the score in its half of the first. Byrne hit by Bush and Leach laid a safe bunt along the first base foul line. Clarke sacrificed both runners along, Stanage to T. Jones. Wagner drew a pass and the bases were filled. Miller struck out; Abstein worked Summers for a pass and Byrne was forced across the plate. Wilson struck out.

The winners added another run to their total in the second. Gibson beat out a hit to Bush and Adams sacrificed, Summers to Delehanty. Delehanty made a wonderful one-handed scoop of Byrne's fast bounder and threw him out to T. Jones, Gibson going to third. A wild pitch allowed Gibson to score.

The National leaguers tallied another in the third. Clarke started by drawing a base on balls and went to third on Wagner's neatly placed hit to left.

Detroit Ties Score.

Detroit tied the score by landing two runs in the sixth. After Bush fanned, Cobb singled to left and scored on Crawford's double to center. Delehanty grounded to Wagner, who threw poorly to Abstein and Crawford scored, while Delehanty continued to second. Moriarity flied to Clarke and T. Jones popped an easy foul to Abstein.

Pittsburg broke the tie in the seventh. After Adams struck out, Byrne singled to left and went to third on Leach's hit to the same place. Clarke's home run accounted for three scores. Wagner was hit in the back, but as soon as he reached first base he forgot all about his pain and stole second and then third, scoring on Schmidt's high throw. That gave Pittsburg four runs and enough to make victory certain.

Detroit scored in the seventh on Crawford's home run.

Wilson opened Pittsburg's eighth inning with a double between D. Jones and Crawford, which the former lost in the sun, Wilson scoring on Gibson's single to right. Gibson stole second, but was caught trying to steal third, Schmidt to Moriarity. The score:

20,000 FANS HEAR UMPIRE CALL CONTEST

Runyon Says Announcement No Surprise; Cold Wave Hits Grounds.

BY DAMON RUNYON
Universal Service Staff Correspondent.

POLO GROUNDS, NEW YORK, Oct. 8. Appropriately enough Mr. Chill, the cool little umpire, made the announcement "on account of rain," said Mr. Chill, in frigid tones, "the game is postponed until tomorrow."

Mr. Chill was talking about the fourth game of the world's series, scheduled for this afternoon.

He made the announcement at 2 o'clock to 20,000 men and women shivering in the big stadium in the lee of Coogan's bluffs.

Mr. Chill's statement about the rain was no news to them. They had been quite aware of its presence for an hour. When they left the Polo grounds many of them were carrying some of the rain away with them, soaked into their apparel.

They leaked out into Eighth avenue like human sponges, their footsteps sounding squishy as the water spurted from their shoes. It is not improbable that the persons of the city will presently note a heavy increase in such ailments as pneumonia, coughs, colds, lumbago, rheumatism and the pip—perhaps the bill pip.

Bills Gets Dampened.

Bill was one of those who got dampened. Bill is the daddy of Walter Pipp, first baseman of the Yankees.

The bleachers were packed and the stands were well filled, especially the upper tier, when the rain came on. Some of the bleacherites had been sitting there since 10 o'clock in the morning.

It had been cloudy and threatening since dawn. A cold breeze from off the Harlem lashed the landscape. The bleacherites huddled like sheep in a storm and tried to make themselves comfortable during their long wait. At 10:30 the Yanks appeared on the field in their white uniforms. This was their home day. The Giants came on soon afterward in their traveling "unies" of steel gray, which fitted into the drab scene. Both clubs engaged in fielding and batting practice and meantime the holders of the reserved seats in the lower stand and the boxes began appearing.

McGraw's pitching selection became apparent when "Shufflin' Phil" Douglas, the spitballer, showed up in his huge brown sweater taking part in the batting practice. Huggins intended starting either Carl Mays, who beat Douglas in the opener, or Harper, his only left hander.

Harper pitched good ball for the Yanks during the closing days of the season though he was of little use earlier in the season. Huggins could better afford to gamble with a pitcher than McGraw.

If the Yanks lose the next game with Harper pitching they are no worse off than when the series started. If they should win Huggins then has his best pitching stars, Mays and Hoyt, in reserve, which would perhaps giving him clear sailing the rest of the journey.

At 1 o'clock the drizzle began, gradually increasing to a regular downpour. It was one of those rainstorms that gather suddenly in a cloud back of Madame Jumel's old mansion on Washington Heights, where George himself was once a caller.

The ball players sought refuge in their dugouts and sat there looking out at the rain and chattering. They were not at all sorry when the postponement came, as the pastimers like clear, warm weather and a dry field as well as the fans.

Rain Helps Players.

Incidentally, this is one of the games in which the players participate as profit sharers and had it been played today under the adverse weather conditions the receipts would have been curtailed. Despite the fact that the first day crowd was short of capacity by at least 8,000 enough money had been taken in to insure a record-breaking sum to the players.

Babe Ruth was not in the field. He is confined to his room at the Ansonia with an infection of the left elbow. He skinned arm sliding to a base in the Cleveland series, and kept on skinning it by subsequent slides that complications finally set in.

Perhaps the postponement will benefit the Yanks in that Babe may be back Sunday. Bobby Roth or Chick Fewster would probably have played in Babe's place, with the chances favoring Roth on account of his hitting.

Either Roth or Fewster might have proved as valuable as Ruth, at that, because the Giant pitchers would at least have given them a crack at the ball. Babe's physical value to his club is largely destroyed when they won't let him hit, but the menace of his very presence is something.

Another day of rest will help Mays and it will not harm Douglas. There is no advantage one way or the other. Although it adds another day to the leisure of Hoyt who would probably have pitched tomorrow for the Yanks had they played today.

Mays "Iron Man."

Mays is one of those iron men of baseball. He can work frequently. Hoyt needs more rest. Those are the only pitchers Huggins can rely on now, with Harper still purely a speculation.

Huggins could not do other than he did Friday in leaving Shawkey in the box. He was perhaps hoping that Bob might get by to the sixth or seventh with no worse than a tied score. Then Hug could have dropped Mays in. By installing Mays when Shawkey fell into wild ways in the third inning would have been wasting his ace.

Shawkey had plenty of "stuff"—as much "stuff" as he ever had in his life but no control. He seemed nervous. Huggins has not figured greatly on Quinn in this series, while of course, Collins and Rogers, who finished the game, never entered into his calculations at all.

Barnes' great showing against the Yankees after relieving Toney causes wonderment that he has not entered more prominently into the pre-series speculation. His wide curve befuddled the American leaguers and it is quite likely now that the Circleville man will start a game for McGraw.

The SPORT Tide

By FLEM HALL
Star-Telegram Sports Writer.

Some puzzled expressions have been exchanged between kibitzers since Manager Bobby Bragan of the Cats announced that he intends to use 19-year-old rookie Billy Loes as his starting pitcher in the third game of the playoff with Shreveport . . . provided the weather ever lets the series get that far along.

BILLY LOES.

As late as three weeks ago the tall and skinny freshman was the low man on the eight-man staff.

There are still a lot of pretty good Fort Worth baseball fans who haven't seen him . . . or even heard much about Billy except that he was given $21,000 to sign a Brooklyn contract when he got out of high school a year ago.

* * *

Even those closest to the team were surprised that Bragan was planning to push Loes ahead of the veteran Eddie Chandler and the seasoned Chris Van Cuyk.

Omar (Turk) Lown can't be counted. If Turk wasn't hurt he'd very probably get the call ahead of Loes, but Lown's side is still sore and there's no assurance he's going to be of any help the rest of the year.

* * *

"Why?" we asked Bragan.

"Because I think he has a better chance of winning than anyone I expect to have available for that game."

* * *

That was a fair answer, but, because Bragan is both the manager and the catcher, he knows more about Loes' pitching than anyone else and is fully as interested as anyone in winning, a more detailed answer was in order.

"Why do you think he's your best bet in the third game?" was the second shot.

It brought information.

IMPROVING LOES HAS WON 5 STRAIGHT GAMES.

"Billy's pitching great ball . . . great," Bragan declared. "He's full of confidence . . . hasn't an ache nor pain, nor any doubt about getting anyone out. He's ready, too. When I told him he'd probably start the third game he said: 'Okay, but if you need any relief in the first or second game I'll be ready.'

"Not too many people realize it," Bragan continued, "but Loes has won five straight games, saved two others and hasn't turned in a poor effort since he got his bearings and settled down after arriving in the Texas League the middle of July. He hasn't allowed more than six hits in any game since July 17, and he's never walked more'n five in any one game. He's pitched one shutout, one one-runner, hasn't allowed more than three runs since July 30. He beat Shreveport, 3-2, with five hits, four walks and six strikeouts Aug. 26."

Now that Bragan was warmed up on his subject, he kept going with:

"Billy's got a good fast ball but the curve is his best pitch . . . it's strictly a big league curve and he gets it over . . . has more confidence in it than in his fast ball. He can and does mix 'em up, too. His change is excellent."

* * *

And that is why Bragan is naming a last-year school boy to start the third game of the sudden-death series.

FORT WORTH PARK FIRE PREVENTED NEW HIGH.

The Texas League fell far short of the 2,750,000 attendance predicted by the owners before the 1949 season opened, but it did go over 2,000,000 for the second time in its history and that was better than we thought it'd do.

Considering the exceptionally unfavorable weather during April, May and June; the fire that destroyed the main stands at La Grave Field; the failure of Houston and San Antonio to get up in the first division fight, the 2,008,278 was remarkable.

It was only 32,765 short of the record set in '48.

Whereas most other athletic entertainment attendance dropped an average of 12 per cent from '48 to '49, Texas League baseball declined less than 2 per cent.

In spite of the bad weather break and the decline of Houston and San Antonio, the league would probably have set a new record except for the Fort Worth fire.

The Cats, however, did not do as well on the road this year as in '48 when they set a record with 319,720. They were off to 269,151 and lost the honor of being the biggest road attraction to Dallas. Proving perhaps, that the home run is still the thing that gets the customers. The Eagles pulled 302,937 on the road and 404,851 at home.

Shreveport was the second best road club with 279,902. Fort Worth was third.

Playoff Here Again Tonight

Landrum Duels Auman in Second Tilt; Milliken Halts Sports, 8-1

BY FLEM HALL.
Star-Telegram Sports Writer.

On a promise of clearing weather before game time at 8:15 p. m., the Fort Worth Cats and Shreveport Sports made ready Thursday to complete at La Grave Field the first phase of the series which will decide which team is to advance to the finals of the Texas Baseball League's championship playoff.

The second phase will be taken up at Shreveport Friday night PROVIDED another game is played to a decision at La Grave Field Thursday night.

Rules require that two games be played to a decision in Fort Worth before the move is made to Shreveport.

At least two, and not more than three, games of the four-of-seven series are to be played in Shreveport.

If undetermined through five games, the series will move back to Fort Worth for conclusion.

Postponements and ties do not count in the schedule. That is to say the teams will remain in Fort Worth until two verdicts are reached . . . if Thursday's game is postponed or tied the teams will remain in Fort Worth until a verdict is reached.

Cats Impressive.

The manner in which the Cats surged to 8-1 victory in the Wednesday night series opener suggests that Manager Bobby Bragan and his men may end the test in four or five games . . . in which case the Sports will not be seen here after the second game of the series.

Bragan will use the league's biggest '49 winning pitcher, Joe Landrum, Thursday night in an effort to press the advantage gained Wednesday when Bob Miliken held the Sports to three hits off Andy Bush, Tom Pullig and Dee Sanders.

Landrum had an 19-11 record for the regular season when he was chosen as the "pitcher of the year" in the Texas League. However, he defeated the Sports only once and lost to them twice. His defeats, 3-6 and 4-5 in 13 innings, came early in the year. Subsequently, he defeated them, 2-0, and engaged in a 3-3 tie. He was in no-decision efforts against them Aug. 27 and 28. Fort Worth won both games but Joe was knocked out in the first one, which he started. He finished the second game.

Auman to Hurl.

In opposition to the 20-year-old South Carolina star, Manager Francis Parker of the Sports plans to use Howard Auman, a 28-year-old righthander from North Carolina. Howie has won only seven games while losing 14 this year and is 0-2 against the Cats, but he is an able pitcher none-the-less.

Too much dependence can not be put in first game victory in a series. Last year the Sports, with Auman pitching, defeated the Cats, 1-0, in 11 innings in the opener of a first-round playoff test. Fort Worth won the next game and the series in six games.

Working with a curve and fast ball that almost matched Milliken, Bush was tough as long as he was in the game Wednesday. He was removed for a pinch hitter in the eighth, when Fort Worth led, 2-1, and the Cats made six runs off his relief.

The series opened on a striking note. . . . 12 of them in fact. . . . the first four batters struck out, three of them swinging and the other one not complaining on the call.

First fielding gem was Lewis Davis' catch of Wally Fiala's long fly to right-center. . . . it was the first fair hit ball.

Fiala made two neat plays in the second to retire Les Burge and Vern Petty on humpbacked liners toward right-center.

Davis Singles.

First hit of the game was Davis' single off Milliken's glove after two were out in the second.

The Cats' first hit was Bragan's single that drove in the second run of the second inning. Two walks, a sacrifice by Chico Carrasquel, and Jack Lindsey's long fly had accounted for the other which was scored by Preston Ward, the first walker.

First error was made by Shortstop Bobby Wilkins on Carrasquel's big hopper in the fourth when one was out. It cost nothing as Chico was rolled up in the first double play, Sarni to Mazur, when Lindsey missed a third strike with Carrasquel running.

First extra base hit, a double by Petty, scored Shreveport's only run by Davis in the fifth.

First beef on the umpiring was made by the Sports to Troy Sharp in the sixth on a complicated play at first base. With Fiala on first Bob Bundy popped a low fly that hit the ground near first base. In the mixup for the ball and the bag by Fiala, Mazur and Burge, the ball was kicked toward the Fort Worth dugout and, as a result, Fiala went to second and Bundy was safe at first. The Sports argued that Fiala kicked the ball but Sharp said "no" and made it stick.

Boris (Butch) Woyt, star centerfielder of the Cats in 1946, was a visitor in the press box during the game. He and his wife, a former Fort Worth girl, drove in from his home in New Jersey for a visit. Woyt played the '49 season with Baltimore in the International League.

Bonham Dies After Surgery

PITTSBURGH, Sept. 15 (AP).—Erny (Tiny) Bonham, 36, veteran Pittsburgh Pirates pitcher, died Thursday in Presbyterian Hospital where he had been operated on for appendicitis.

ERNIE BONHAM.

Doctors said his death was caused by complications following the operation.

Bonham was placed in an oxygen tent early Thursday after his condition became critical.

The operation took place Sept.

Club Physician Norman Oschenhirt said the operation was a difficult one, requiring three hours.

Bonham was a resident of Sacramento, Cal.

Bonham's death removed from baseball one of its most colorful figures.

He was dubbed "Tiny" in joking reference to his massive six foot, two inch 210-pound frame.

He moved up to the major leagues with the New York Yankees in 1942 and was a freshman sensation. His first year he won 21 games and lost five with an earned run average of 2.27. The following year he won 15 and lost 8 with the same earned-run mark.

During his four years with the Yankees the big right-hander pitched in three World Series. In the seventh inning of a World Series game against Brooklyn in 1941 he retired the side on three pitched balls.

The Pirates bought him from New York in 1946. He won 11 and lost eight for Pittsburgh in 1947 and last season fell off to six victories and 10 defeats. This year he was used mainly in relief roles until he was stricken a week ago.

Splendid Conditions Prevail.

Delightful conditions prevailed, a brisk breeze from the southwest tempering the heat of a Summer sun in a cloudless sky.

It was the most successful show that has been given on the picturesque grounds of the Riding Club, with its clubhouse that has stood on the highway for more than 200 years. From a small exhibition confined to local owners it has grown to be one of the most important of the one-day events on the island, attracting a number of the leading stables.

A baker's dozen contested for the honor of gaining a leg on the challenge cup and possession of the annual trophy that goes with it. To make the victory of the stable doubly certain, Spink put Mellon's even bigger gray gelding Windsor around the course to gain the second ribbon.

the former tournament gave a conclusive demonstration of her ability by defeating Miss Dorothy Weisel, third-ranking United States player, in a brilliantly contested three-set match.

Miss Marble is a hard hitter, depending for the most part on a powerful service and smash. Howard O. Kinsey, famous coach, has made the prediction that she will be one of the leading contenders for the national championship within two years.

Follows Mrs. Moody's Footsteps.

It is interesting to note that Miss Marble, in entering both the women's and girls' nationals, is following along the road traveled by Mrs. Moody when the present first lady of the courts made her start in national competition. Ten years ago Mrs. Moody first came into the spotlight when she took part in the two tournaments.

They will play Martin and Fraser Burbridge of Schenectady tomorrow.

Howard Robinson of Ridgewood, N. J., defeated Perle, 6—2, 9—7, in an upset. Then Robinson met Martin, who achieved an easy victory, 6—0, 6—3.

Bragan Bases Pilot Policy on 'Perfection'

Leader of Stars Hoping for Major Job

By JOHN B. OLD

HOLLYWOOD, Calif.

Bobby Bragan

He wasn't born there, but give Bobby Bragan the slightest opportunity and he'll gladly say a few thousand well chosen words about the "Great state of Texas" and the Hollywood Stars, the team he rates as "the best I ever saw in minor league baseball."

A native Alabaman, who saw the light of day October 30, 1918, in Birmingham, the Hollywood manager admittedly aspires to return to the majors as a pilot.

While Bragan, who speaks with a soft southern drawl with a Texas accent, would be the last person to admit it, Hollywood fans see him as the heir apparent to the Pittsburgh managerial post when Fred Haney—who left the Stars to fulfill a personal obligation to Branch Rickey—decides to step down.

If you didn't know, Bragan has been under the Rickey influence ever since 1943, when the converted infielder turned catcher was acquired by the Brooklyn Dodgers from the Philadelphia Phillies.

"You bet I'm a disciple of Mr. Rickey. His baseball theories are the soundest I've ever heard and I always try to put them into practice," Bragan will tell you at the drop of the hat.

If and when Bragan gets the chance to manage upstairs, he will be successfully "seasoned" for the job. Or so a check of his background strongly attests.

After six seasons in the majors—with the Phillies (1940-42) and the Dodgers ('43, '44 and '47) with an intervening two years in military service—the fiery Bragan launched his managerial career at Fort Worth of the Texas League, where he managed through the '52 season, finishing first twice, second twice and fourth once.

Graduated to the Hollywood house in '53, Bragan led the Stars to the Coast league pennant by eight games. This season, there is strong indication Bragan and the Stars will again pace the field at the finish line.

* * *

Bobby Has a Mind of His Own

While some rival PCL managers have accused Bragan of managing a "push button" team because of Hollywood's affiliation with Pittsburgh, it's no secret that Bobby openly refused to accept some players the Pirates wanted to send him.

And the record is full of instances in which Bragan, finding that a player didn't come up to his expectations, demanded and got the right to "move 'em along."

In short, Bragan has a mind of his own. He has his own formula for the ingredients essential to moulding a winner in the Coast league and he is unyielding in his belief. No one knows that better than Bob Clements, Rickey's West Coast aid and vice-president of the Hollywood club.

"Bobby has all the essential qualities of a sound manager," Clements declared. "I don't see how he can miss going places."

Basically, Bragan is a fiery guy. He wants to win every game. Admittedly he's a "lousy loser." In his managerial tactics, the ever alert, quick-thinking Bragan constantly strives for player and team perfection.

On this point he has his own pet theory. "Perfection," says Bragan, "is painstaking practice and dedication."

"Bragan has been preaching his 'Perfection Theory' so effectively he almost has me believing I'm a major league prospect," confided Eddie Malone, veteran Hollywood catcher and former big leaguer.

A polished after-dinner speaker and top-flight public relations emissary, Bragan is both admired and respected by players and fans alike.

Yet in the privacy of this office, Bragan can be as tough as a waterfront harness bull when the occasion demands.

Remember the name—Bobby Bragan. He's destined to go places! In six years of managing, he finished lower than second only once.

Lohrke, in Hill Bow, Holds Seals Hitless Four Innings

HOLLYWOOD, Calif. — Jack (Lucky) Lohrke, former National League infielder, who failed in his bid to win a regular job with the Stars this spring, is following the example of Bucky Walters of 20 years ago and trying his hand at pitching.

The one-time infielder with the Giants, Phillies and Pirates made his mound debut in a relief role, June 15, after San Francisco had hammered four other hurlers for 18 runs in five innings. Lohrke held the Seals hitless over the last four rounds, permitting only one batter to reach base—on a walk. His effort came too late, however, and the Twinks lost, 18 to 12.

Yielding to the demands of Hollywood fans, Manager Bobby Bragan started Lohrke against the Seals in the twin-bill opener, June 20. Jack was not as successful this time, giving up 11 hits and four runs before being relieved in the seventh inning. The Stars, however, won the game in the ninth inning, 5 to 4.

The SPORT Tide

BY FLEM HALL.
Star-Telegram Sports Writer

This is going to be a big week in Fort Worth sports with the Cats playing Shreveport in the first round of the Texas Baseball League's championship series, the TCU Frogs opening the college football season with a game with Kansas University at Lawrence, Kan., and the high schools launching their big program at Farrington Field.

BOBBY BRAGAN.

Funny thing about the Texas League playoff . . . Manager Bobby Bragan's Cats are the only Texas team in it. Two of the four are Oklahoma clubs and one is from Louisiana.

* * *

The Frogs looked like a real football team in their intrasquad scrimmage Saturday.

They had rare snap and precision for so early in the season.

What was more important was the improved offensive strength displayed.

They mixed good passing with a ground game that had both power and speed.

Deception was good.

Most of the players had a fair working knowledge of all formations used: Double wing, flanker, spread and single wing.

* * *

Unless Kansas has improved considerably over last year, the Frogs may not have their usual rough time Saturday afternoon.

It seems reasonably certain that TCU will be better prepared for this opener than they were last year when they won 14-13.

Hearty congratulations are in order for all the Cats on not only finishing the regular Texas League race by a margin of 10 games but for winning 100 of the 154 games played.

In the long history of the league only 14 other teams have won 100 games in a season and in several instances those teams played longer seasons.

Six of those previous 100-game winners were Fort Worth teams. In 1920, '21, '22, '24 and '25 Jake Atz's great machine rolled up totals of 102, 107, 109, 109 and 103, respectively. In 1946—first season after World War II—Ray Hayworth skippered the Cats to 101 victories.

Houston has had four 100-game winners, Oklahoma City, Waco and Wichita Falls one each.

Peculiarly, Houston and Waco each won 102 in 1914 when they ran away from the rest of the contenders and tied for first place with 102-50 records. It was never played off. After a series of bitter protests back and forth the teams were declared co-champions.

Houston won 108 in '31, 105 in '40 and 103 in 41.

Wichita Falls won 102 in '27; Oklahoma City 101 in '37.

The '49 Cats are the first to win exactly 100. To do that they had to win 23 of their last 26 games.

They probably wouldn't have finished so strong if a series of events hadn't stung 'em into keeping the pressure on after the race was decided.

So, the Cats can think their enemies; credit them with an assist.

GATE RECORD FALLS.

Next to the Cats' consistently brilliant play the attendance in three cities was, perhaps, the most remarkable thing about the season.

In spite of the fact that they lost their grandstand in a fire on May 15, before they hit their stride, and were without adequate seating capacity during the period when they normally would have drawn the most people, the Cats had a home attendance of 265,982 . . . only 88,306 under the all-time Fort Worth record of 354,288 set last year.

Dallas set a new all-time Texas League record of 404,851 . . . 3,468 more than the old record of 401,383 set at Houston in '48. The brilliant start of the slugging Eagles captured the imagination of the Dallas fans and they kept right on coming to the park as the team fell apart. More than 20,000 attended the final three-game series with Fort Worth when their team was hoplessly buried in fifth place.

The disappointing Houston Buffs were in the cellar a good part of the year and finished seventh but they drew 263,964 customers at home.

ENROLL TODAY

39 Freshmen Join Frogs' Grid Forces

TCU slapped its enrollment brand on 39 promising young freshman football players Monday.

Coaches Abe Martin and Hub McQuillan listed six ends, 17 linemen (guards, tackles and centers) and 16 backs.

Three boys from the state Class A finals teams last year, Monahans and New Braunfels, are included in the list. They are David Pitzer, lineman, and Ray Cathey, back, from the Monahans state championship outfit, and Stanley Reinshagen, ace lineman with the runner-up New Braunfels team.

Two of the best high school ends in the state last year, Bobby Blair of Texarkana and Shamrock's Wayne Martin, are listed.

Henderson contributed the greatest number of linemen, Jack Ramsey, Carlton McCormick and C. H. Hedge. Freshmen from Fort Worth are Mickey Teems of Diamond Hill, Robert Snow of Arlington Heights, John Harville of Paschal and Charles Davis of North Side.

Snow, Harville and Davis are backs.

Other outstanding linemen include Robert Zotz of Cameron and Charles Wrenn of Happy.

Among the backs are Van's Malvin Fowler, McGregor's outstanding trackman, Bobby Harding, Sweetwater's Tom McMillan and the crack runner of the powerful Port Arthur High School team last year, Don Parker.

The players listed Monday:

ENDS—Bobby Blair, Texarkana; Ted Vaught, Lubbock; Wayne Martin, Shamrock; Charles Rogers, Childress; Harlan McWilliams, Menard; Bill Hall, Dallas Highland Park.

LINEMEN—Hubert Parrett, Dallas Forest Avenue; Jack Ramsey, Henderson; Robert Zotz, Cameron; Carlton McCormick, Henderson; David Pitzer, Monahans; Don Martin, Iraan; Charles Wrenn, Happy; C. H. Hedge, Henderson; Mickey Teems, Diamond Hill; Stanley Reinshagen, New Braunfels; Eddie Wilburn, Winniewood, Okla.; Marshall Harris, Deland, Fla.; Wallace Williams, Paris; Johnsye Tankersley, Lamesa; Jack Temple, Childress; Tom Evans and Chuck Oneal, Corpus Christi.

BACKS—Malvin Fowler, Van; Bobby Harding, McGregor; Jimmy Amburg, Carlisle; Ray Cathy, Monohans; Joe Knapp, Panhandle; Tom McMillan, Sweetwater; Bill Tankersley, Brownfield; John Harville, Paschal; Robert Snow, Arlington Heights; John Driskill, Sabinal; Charles Davis, North Side; Don Perry, Ruidoso, N. M.; Bob Osborn, Handley; Don Parker, Fort Arthur; Ray Moore, Spanish, Mich.; Bobby Jack Floyd, Paris (Junior College transfer).

MERION, Pa., Sept. 12 (AP).—A field of 128 golfers teed off Monday at the Merion Golf Club, and by next Saturday evening one of the number will have waded through seven matches to become the 49th Women's Amateur champion of the United States.

Which contestant that would be was anybody's guess as the first twosome left the first tee for the first round, although naturally the defending champion, Grace Lenczyk of Newington, Conn., rates as a staunch contender.

However, Miss Lenczyk's game has been erratic of late, and she faces stern competition from no only other well-known and dark horse American rivals, but fro overseas as well. Miss Fran Stephens of Boothe, England, ner of the tough British Wom Golf Tournament this year, hand with an eye toward m it a double by taking the ican crown as well.

Four former champions in quest of greater glo include Mrs. Julius A. of Chapel Hill, N. C champion; Mrs. Edw Jr., of Merion, six tim Mrs. Helen B. Stet ton, Pa., a champio and Miss Margare ton, winner in 1912

Pop's Palaver

Pop Recalls Goldie Rapp-Or Was It?

By Pop Boone

Sam Hutchins of Weatherford drops a postcard and requests us to produce a colyum on Goldie Rapp, who was a Cat back in 1923—and a colorful one. It is quite possible, if I wasn't plumb grounded at home, for me to dig a good column out of the files of the old Fort Worth Record on Goldie Rapp. But, to save our lives, we can't dig much Rapp dope from memory.

Pop Boone

TROUBLE SEEMS to be that we have, in our bemused old so-called mind, confused Goldie Rapp with a guy name of Dolly Stark, who was playing for Santone back in 1908-09 and afterward served as skipper. Both were shortstops and looked alike. Both were very original and colorful guys indeed but the only event I can remember offhand on their dual personality had to do with a quick decision to relieve a pitcher.

WHAT MADE me remember the incident was the way it ended. For some reason or other, the skipper was slow to relieve a pitcher, so Dolly or Goldie on his own decision, came to the hill from shortstop and told the pitcher to go hence. Then the colorful shortstop prepared to pitch. Either Skipper George Leidy or Jake Atz ran out from the dugout and told the shortstopper to return to his regular job.

AFTER A somewhat extended argument, the would-be chunker stepped out of the box, threw the ball over the grandstand and returned to the shortfield. Now it is not our purpose to start any controversy or arguments over Dolly-Goldie or any other angle of the incident, but it seems we remember the umps considered the incident as a fambly scrap and allowed the would-be pitcher to continue playing. . . .

WE'RE GLAD to see Robert Bundy Esq. back on the job. He's no wizard afield and he may not hit .600, but the guy gives all he has all the time. He loves to win and he's up there swingin' and covers all the ground he can on every play. He has that characteristic of loving to win so much that he never has been known to give up, regardless of the score. . . .

SOME FAN rings me to ask if we thought the device recently invented would enable an umpire to detect the bench-warmers who were heckling the arbuiter. We admitted being quite ignorant on the subject, never having heard of such a thing. We admitted frankly we hoped it was so because we've seldom seen a bench-hecklin' crew gain anything by the tactics.

OUR FRIEND didn't know for sure where he saw the piece but said he believed it was in the Sporting News. We looked it up and, of course, saw right away it was just a kiddin' yarn, had no foundation on fact and was supposed to be strictly humorous. But we discovered this with regret, for after more than a half century of writing baseball we have yet to see an instance where bench jockeying of an umpire helped a club win a ball game.

ALWAYS WE have been more or less for the umpire. In the first place, in all those years we have not seen a hecklin' club win any ball games through employing the tactics. We've seen clubs which raised a distinct row occasionally when the players thought they were getting a raw decision, but mostly it's losing clubs which do most of the useless heckling.

WE'VE ALWAYS contended that umpiring is an awful hard way to make an easy living, as the ums say, but we still chafe in the press box when even our own club carries a ruckus too long, even if we felt it had foundation for same. We've always put in with an occasional rhubarb, and a spirited one, calculated to stir up a lazy umps, but long-drawn-out and useless disputes generally are repugnant to fans and none ever were won.

AND THE skipper who learns never to start a rhubarb when he's in front is a pretty good technician. I've seen short, sharp displays of temper stir a lagging club to victory, but can't possibly help a front-runner.
