Statement from Tarrant County Sheriff Bill Waybourn on Recent Local Election Results and Future County Leadership

The voters of Tarrant County have spoken, and I want to congratulate County Judge-elect Alisa Simmons on her victory, as well as the newly elected members of the Tarrant County Commissioners Court and Tarrant County District Attorney's Office.

The Tarrant County Sheriff's Office has a long-standing commitment to the safety, security, and well-being of every resident in this county. Public safety is not a political issue; it is a fundamental duty that requires cooperation, transparency, and professional collaboration across all levels of county government.

As we prepare for this upcoming administrative transition, my office is fully committed to working constructively and professionally with the incoming elected officials in our county. We will continue to operate with integrity and transparency to ensure that our vital public safety mission continues without interruption.

Our deputies and detention officers show up every single day to perform noble, essential work. Regardless of political shifts or changes in leadership, our focus remains firmly fixed on upholding the law, protecting the citizens of Tarrant County, and executing our duties with the highest level of integrity.
